58 In 100 Pass Physical Tests As Draft Boards Speed Up Their Efforts

In Twenty Manhattan Districts Out of 1,693 Examined 689 Are Disqualified and 1,004 Are Found Fit—District 102 Hits Low Mark.

FAVOURITISM ALLEGED

NEW YORK, August 6.—With the physical examinations under way in more than one hundred of the exemption board districts, big gains were made Saturday in New York in the number declaring their willingness to enter the military service. Fewer exemptions were claimed than our former days. Federal officials late Saturday night declared their belief after studying incomplete returns that New York would not experience the difficulty expected at first in obtaining her quota for the army.

The first twenty districts reported in Manhattan gave a total of 1,693 men examined. Of that number 689 were disqualified and 1,004 passed the test for physical fitness. Those who claimed exemption for various reasons, including aliens, numbered 554, and the number who did not claim exemption was 450.

Based on the figures for these twenty districts, representing all sections of Manhattan, fifty-eight per cent. of the total examined possessed the physical requirements for making soldiers. That is regarded as exceptionally high average.. It included several east side districts, where the percentage is very small. On the same figures the percentage of those not claiming exemption was about twenty-six. TThat would mean that thirteen out of every fifty men examined were ready to go to the colours.

That indicates that New York even at the outset is doing fully as well as the government expected. The official estimates were that not more than one in five men examined would expres ingness to enter the military service.

BROOKLYN SLIGHTLY BEHIND.

The first twelve districts reported in Brooklyn showed 1,047 men examined and 145 not claiming exemption. That borough was a little behind Manhattan.

These percentages apparently held for the other boroughs.

The first serious trouble in New York occurred in District No. 167, whose Boarad meets at ..o. 2,089 Madison avenue. When the doors were closed, after eighty-three men had been examined, more than two hundred men were waiting in line, having been called for their physical tests or being called to make inquiry regarding serial numbers. When the Board declined to make further examinations a protest was made. A member of the Board called the police who dispersed the crowd.

Complaint was made that favouriticm was being shown in the method of examination. Officials in charge at the State Arsenal were informed that some having political influence were taken out of line and examined ahead of others who had been waiting for hours. Investigation will be made, it was stated.

There are lots of little things that wise men do not understand, but it is generally believed that hens lay eggs because they can't stand them on end.

STRICKEN IN THE STREET

Completely Restored To Health By "Fruit-a-tives"

382 St. Valier St., Montreal.

"In 1912, I was taken suddenly ill with Acute Stomach Trouble and dropped in the street. I was treated by several physicians for nearly two years, and my weight dropped from 225 pounds to 160 pounds. Then several of my friends advised me to try "Fruit-a-tives". I began to improve almost with the first dose, and by using them I recovered from the distressing Stomach Trouble—and all pain and Constipation were cured. Now I weigh 208 pounds. I cannot praise "Fruit-a-tives" enough". H. WHITMAN.

Russian Morale At The Front Is Improving

Premier Kerensky is in a Position to Proceed With the Work of Reorganization With Absolute Power

TO SAVE RUSSIA

Special to The Examiner:

PETROGRAD, Aug. 6.—A democracy that has created within itself a rule of absolution, approved by the people, was Russia's latest contribution to "war governments" to-day. Having been given a vote of confidence by the Council's representative of all Russians, Premier Kerensky is in a position to proceed with his work of regeneration with absolute power. The portfolios of all Cabinet ministers are again in his hands. He may endeavour to form a new cabinet or continue with the present ministry, as he chooses. The Workmen's and Soldiers' Council, the Peasants' Council and other bodies look to the dictatorship of Kerensky to save Russia. A great improvement in the morale of the troops at the front is reported.

The Enemy Is Active On The Western Front

Germans Launch Counter Attacks Against British Lines in Flanders

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Aug. 6.—The second week of the Battle of Flanders opened today with the launching of German counter attacks against the British lines. Clearing weather gave promise of more favourable conditions for a resumption of allied operations before the week end.

German counter attacks and raids at several points were reported repulsed in the statement of Field Marshal Haig to-day. During the night in the neighbourhood of Hollebeke the enemy again attacked, Haig stated, but was driven off before reaching the British lines. At West Holk another hostile attack was made under cover of a heavy barrage fire, but this was likewise unsuccessful. At other points raiding parties were repulsed.

Further Help In Mediterranean Is Not Needed

Special to The Examiner:

TOKIO, Aug. 6.—The Admiralty today denied that Japan would take further steps to co-operate with the allies in the Mediterranean. Further Japanese assistance is not needed, it was stated. The Diet proposes to send a commission of five members to the United States to study poitical, economic and general conditions.

London Starts The Fourth Year Of The War In Sober Mood

Russian Incapacity as Active Ally is Now Generally Accepted as Likely to Continue For Some Time —Flanders Check Due Solely to Rains.

THE RUSSIAN DELEGATES

(Special Cable by F. A. McKenzie.)

LONDON, August 6.—London begins the fourth year of the war in a sober mood, due mainly to phenomenal rains which temporarily checked the Flanders offensive, and to the Russian position. High military authorities inform me that the Russian situation is bound to definitely prolong the war beyond the period anticipated a few weeks ago. We now are unable to reckon upon the Russian at his best becoming effectively offensive before some months. Every ally, particularly Britain and America, must prepare to bear a heavier share of the war burden because of Russian developments.

The Flanders delay, owing to rains, is annoying and costly, but need not materially alter our plans. German internal distress is increasing. Reports reach me that shortage of metal is actually compelling some districts to strip plates and handles from coffins. Nevertheless the enemy's effective fighting quality westwards is still very considerable.

Two specially encouraging features are our improving aerial strength and the increased effectiveness of the anti-submarine war. Several days before the Flanders offensive began German airplanes scarcely dared to show themselves over our front. Our newest machines are remarkably powerful, flexible, and fast. Our anti-submarine war is progressing very satisfactorily, particularly around the coast. Our two main dangers are in labour and Ireland.

Four Russian delegates—Erlich, Goldenberg, Rousanoff and Smirnow—representing the Workers' and Soldiers' Committee, whose arrival in London for a brief stay and subsequent departure for Paris with McDonald caused considerable stir this week, showed remarkable reticence outside certain limited circles. They fraternized freely with the extreme pacifist labour group. Their purpose was to induce British labour to attend the Stockholm conference with a view to bringing the war to a conclusion. They definitely declare "the overwhlming majority of th revolutionary democracy in Russia has never even for a solitary moment inclined to make separate peace with the central powers."

Horse Body Will Suspend Those Who Raced at Toronto

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N. Y., August 4.—Thomas C. McDowell, one of the directors of the Thoroughbred Horsemen's Association, in speaking of the recent Thorncliffe Park meeting, said that all members who raced there automatically forfeited their ownership and will no doubt be dropped from the roll at the next meeting of the organization.

"The Association would have no strength if the action of the deserters was passed over and permitted without comment," said Mr. McDowell. "The Breeders' Association is built on a more solid foundation than any of its predecessors and if horsemen do not care to belong to it, there is no compulsion in the matter. I do not know what action will be taken by the officers when they meet regarding those who did not abide by the ruling of the parent body relative to the Thorncliffe Park meeting. They naturally are no longer associated with the organization and have forfeited all rights and privileges. Whether any further action will be taken by the Association is a matter that will be discussed at the next meeting, which will probably be held in the near future."

Currant Jelly

The best zest with all red meats
A pretty and economical cake filling
A beautiful garnish for fancy desserts

MAKE plenty of currant jelly. All men like this piquant sweet. Children never get enough of it. You can use it in many ways by itself or in other dishes. Good home-made jelly is not only an enjoyable relish but a nourishing and valuable food.

A Reliable Recipe for Currant Jelly

Gather the currants as soon as they are red. Do not let them overripen. Wash and mash them lightly in the kettle. Heat slowly until the skins look blanched and transparent. Turn the hot fruit into a flannel jelly bag wrung out of warm water and let the juice drip through slowly. It will take several hours. Measure the juice into a clean kettle and boil hard for ten minutes. Do not boil more than six or eight cupfuls at a time. Meantime heat in the oven a cup of LANTIC PURE CANE SUGAR for each cup of juice and add this at the end of the ten minutes. Under the most favorable conditions the jelly will begin to coat the spoon by the time the sugar is all dissolved. Sometimes it will need to be boiled for a few minutes more. You can tell when the jelly is done by trying a spoonful on a cold dry plate.

For all Jellies Use Lantic Pure Cane Sugar

It is pure and reliable and dissolves quicker. At preserving time you will find the larger packages specially convenient.

A Forgotten Astor Returns To Notice

Henry Astor, who might well be called the forgotten Astor, was brought back to the recollection of New York City the other day through a bit of routine court procedure.

Trustees of a trust created in 1834 by William B. Astor filed an application in the Supreme Court for approval of their guardianship of the properties whose income Henry Astor enjoys. Ensued a great searching of newspaper files and court records and a racking of memories of old inhabitants. Thus Henry emerged from the long obscurity during which he has been growing a long white beard on his farm near West Copake, N.Y.

Those who remembered him at all recalled that he was disinherited by his father for marrying the daughter of William B. Astor's gardener. None of them apparently knew that long before the marriage — when Henry was two years old in fact—a trust had been created for him.

He is now eighty-five, so for more than four score years he has enjoyed the income of such bits of property as the Astor and Gayety theatres and the rest of the city block bounded by Broadway, Eighth Avenue, Forty-fifth and Forty-sixth streets, together with one hundred parcels on the middle West Side, worth many million dollars.

Moreover when he dies he can split it all up as he wishes among his relatives, even if he can't will it outside the family. He has no children of his own.

Henry Astor was no romantic youth when he defied his father and sacrificed millions which subsequently went to the Astor Library. He was then forty-five years old, a man of energy and good education, but who preferred the humdrum life of a gentleman farmer to coming to New York and being entered in the social register.

When his marriage with Malvina W. Astor in the little country church in West Copake was solemnized, with but a few of the country people present, some called him mad for he was apparently throwing away the ransom of a nation. Few knew that years before William B. Astor, his father, John Jacob Astor 3d and Charles F. Southmayd had created a trust which makes him one of the wealthiest land owners in New York City.

The original deed of trust was executed in 1834 but later re-executed, and affirmed by Henry Astor, February 15, 1869. There have been various sets of trustees since the first making of the deed until the other day when Henry Lewis Morris, Charles A. Peabody and Lewis Spencer Morris appeared together as the trustees of the fund, and filed the petition for the approval of their stewardship, which is in reality a friendly litigation, as Henry Astor and his heirs have entered notices of appearance by counsel.

The extent of the wealth of the beneficiary of the trust fund is not given in figures but probably it will develop later when the referee appointed by the court approves the accounts of the trustees. The petition contained thirty typewritten pages citing properties included in the fund, from which Henry Astor has been drawing income since 1834.

Some of it was formerly part of the Cousine farm, which lay in the district now part of the upper Tenderloin. The trust fund also made Henry Astor one-third owner of the site of the old Astor House. By an agreement reached between the Astor heirs, he sold his share. Other lots on West Forty-fifth street were sold in the same manner. The records show that the trustees of the fund have purchased some property on West Forty-ninth street, between Ninth and Tenth Avenues.

Little or nothing is known of Henry Astor.

Under the terms of the fund all the heirs of his brothers and sisters are to receive shares in the property after Henry Astor's death, subject to a one-third interest for Malvina W. Astor, his wife, for her lifetime, should she survive him. This provision was made when the trust fund was reaffirmed.

After the death of his brothers and sisters, the property included in the trust fund again is to be divided among their heirs and kept in trust. If this scheme of appointment is continued it will mean that when Henry Astor dies William Vincent Astor, Ava Alice Muriel Astor, children of Col. John Jacob Astor, and his just wife, Ava Willing Astor, as well as John Jacob Astor, son of Madeline Force Astor, Colonel Astor's second wife, will become beneficiaries.

Women are now employed in the reclaiming shops of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad, where they will be obligated to sort scrap iron.

WHAT THE CONSCRIPTIONISTS MEAN.

When a man declares that he is in favour of conscription, he means just one thing, says the Toronto Star—he means that he is in favour of raising the new forces necessary to the carrying on of this war, so that Canada may continue to do the part she has been doing, along with other peoples elsewhere, until the work undertaken is successfully concluded.

When a man declares that he is in favour of conscription, he means that he does not want to see Canada quit—he does not want the country to desert the hundred thousand young citizens who are in the trenches, who, in good faith, responded to their country's call.

He does not want to see Canada weaken in a great task in which she has distinguished herself, and reduce the forces which, shoulder to shoulder with those from Australia, New Zealand, Britain, Belgium and France, have been defending the welfare of mankind.

Ours is to be one of the great nations of the future, and in this crisis, the man who declares himself in favour of conscription, means that he wants to see this country so acquit herself as to continue to deserve the respect and confidence of the world which she has already won through the splendid services of her sons. Generations come and go, but nations live on and grow in character according to their deeds.

In short, the man who believes in conscription is not thinking about a general policy, but about an actual, present situation—he is in favour of going on with the war and winning it, and raising new forces in the only sure, swift and just method by which they can be raised.

It is not one man's duty more than another's to go to war. It is the country that needs and calls for the army. The call is to all who are fit and able and not engaged in services here at home indispensable to the country. If the call is made and enough do not respond, if enough do not come forward and admit that they are the ones who ought to go—and enough have not done so—then it is the duty of the country, of the Government, to organize matters, to renew the call, make it more impressive, more direct and personal, and select by drafts those who are best fitted to support and uphold the hundreds of thousands like them who have voluntarily taken up arms for the defence of the country and the race. There are thousands who do not know whether they ought to go or not. They feel that they should go, but hesitate to single themselves out from among many who are situated precisely as they are. If they are needed, it is the country that needs them, and the country should say so; should organize the whole undertaking, make the selection for equitable reasons, and produce in a fortnight the army that no effort at voluntary enlistment could possibly produce in a year.

HUNGRY HUBBY

A War Problem.

"I am only too ready to economize and save in the kitchen," writes a married woman to a widely-circulated newspaper, "but my husband absolutely refuses to go without certain expensive luxuries, so what can I do" (Needless to say, the lady did not sign her name and address.)

Nevertheless, the opinion is held in official circles at Ottawa that the problem before this patriotic little woman is one of the most perplexing of the war.

It is the custom in most homes for the table to be prepared for the enjoyment of the man of the house or, as the Scotch say, the "good man," and his hearty approval, either expressed or evident through satisfaction, has always heretofore been the end in view. To the table he goes at night directly upon coming home from shop or office, and the thoughtful wife has come to appreciate the value to him and the family of making a good impression right away.

Without flashy luxuries, it is harder for the wife to prepare an attractive table, and in freely giving up the opportunity to make her table alluring to the eye, the patriotic woman is making no small sacrifice. Nevertheless, every efficient housewife is a genius in her own home and wonders can be worked by a good cook. Hubby's co-operation can be sought by demonstrating the merit of new and cheaper dishes. SEVENTY-TWO YEARS IN BED

From London comes the story of a woman who has just died at the age of ninety-four years after spending seventy-two years in bed. This remarkable case calls for admiration rather than sympathy, if we believe in the theory that will-power, determination and persistence are admirable qualities.

When she was about twenty-one she became engaged to a young man, whose suit was frowned upon by her father. The parental ban being placed upon the marriage, she in her disappointment took to her bed and remained there to the end of her long life, an extraordinary instance of persistent resentment which recalls the old adage which emphasizes the futility of "biting off one's nose to spite one's face."

Several sermons of varying application might be based on this story. No doubt will-power exercised in this way is not admirable unless it achieves a definite and reasonable purpose or may be regarded emphasizing a continuing principle or symbolizing a permanent grief or emotion. That could scarcely be claimed in any instance of this character. The length of time which grief or disappointment may endure as a compelling motive in the human mind and logically produce a continued extremity of conduct varies greatly according to the individual. But time is an ultimately irresistible agent in the processes of healing and obliteration, and somewhere there is a definite limit to the duration of any emotion. Even with an exceptional temperament it cannot be sustained beyond this limit without a renewed, periodical stimulus of some sort. This is in harmony with a physical law that applies with equal force to mental and emotional matters. Energy that is not renewed is bound in time to expend itself.

After the first dozen or fifteen or twenty years this Englishwoman must have remained in bed through sheer force of habit, and in all probability she had forgotten more than half a century ago why she took to her bed in the first place. This curious case illustrates the force of habit rather than the power of will.

It also shows how easily an original motive may be lost sight of in the interest of following a course of action that may have been due to that motive. Life abounds in instances of persistent futility and waste of action that are quite as preposterous as this. As an example of this particular kind, however, it is unique, even as a token of feminine perversity. On the masculine side the only fair comparison that may be made is in the case of the occasional man who makes a solemn vow never to have his hair cut until Tom, Dick or Harry is elected President of the United States. The rational point of this, of course, is that the best thing to do with foolish vows is to break them, and the sooner the better. But there are many persons who attack a strange importance to vows and lay great stress upon nonsensical futilities that they call "matters of principle."

There is one other point of interest and possible importance in this strange case. Throughout this Englishwoman's seventy-two years in bed, the only illness that she had was two days at the end. It is also related that "she enjoyed a good appetite in spite of the lack of exercise, and had the complexion of a girl," and that "she took great interest in the affairs of the outside world." This might be added to the innumerable recipes: To have perfect health, a long life, a youthful complexion and a vivid interest in affairs, go to bed and stay there—Providence Journal.

HAS LARGE WHEAT SURPLUS

Australia's Excess Will Be 6,000,000 Tons by January 1.

Australia will have at the end of January, 1918, according to the Prime Minister, about 6,000,000 tons of wheat over and above the amount required for local consumption, this amount including what remains from the 1916-1917 wheat. The Premier's conference held at Melbourne in May appointed a wheat storage commission, comprising one Minister and one expert representing the Commonwealth, and one Minister and one expert from each of the four wheat-growing States, to formulate a scheme for the erection of silos suited to the present and future requirements of the Commonwealth.

The problem of storing Australia's wheat is being constantly discussed, both officially and unofficially. The British Government has bought 112,000,000 bushels of Australian wheat of the 1915-1916 and 1916-1917 crops for 4 shillings and 9 pence a bushel f.o.b. Australian port. One of the conditions of the sale is that, if the whole of the wheat is not delivered by Dec. 31, 1917, the British Wheat Commission will pay the additional charges for storing it in Australia after that date. As the greater part of the wheat has not been shipped, and as the next harvest will begin to come in by the end of the year, it is apparent that the storage situation is acute.

On Australia there is at present approximately 40,000,000 bushels of wheat of the 1915-1916 crop, and 136,000,000 bushels of the 1916-1917 crop.

LITTLE BOY HAD DIARRHOEA
Only Blood Passed Bowels

Diarrhoea, dysentery and summer complaint are responsible for more deaths, especially of children, during the summer months, than any other form of disease.

Diarrhoea does not need to persist for any length of time until the whole system is weakened and no other disease so quickly undermines the strength and brings about a condition of prostration and often collapse.

Mrs. E. Stoddard, Lower Clark's Harbour, N.S., writes. "When my little boy was a year and a half old he was taken awfully bad with diarrhoea. I had the doctor, but he got worse so that only blood passed his bowels. I tried everything, but he got no relief. One day while I was at work, I picked up a piece of paper, and on it was an advertisement for Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry. After trying a bottle he began to get better and the second one made a cure. I would not be without it in the house for my little ones. I am proud to say "Dr. Fowler's" saved my little boy's life."

Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry has been on the market for the past 73 years and there are many imitations of this wonderful bowel complaint remedy. See that you get the genuine when you ask for it. Price 35c.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A Mistake

The Story of How Two Sisters Were Reunited.

By PAULINE B. EDWARDS

Although the Horner sisters had lived in the same house for forty years, during twenty of those long years they had not exchanged a word.

No one in Rosedale knew why Abigail had suddenly taken up her residence in the north wing of the old house and Sophia had settled her belongings in the sunny south half. At the time conjecture had been rife, but the nine days' wonder had settled into a strong conviction that they had disagreed over the "propty," for it was shortly after old Judge Horner's death that the estrangement began.

Every Sunday morning the sisters stepped primly down the graveled path to the gate and in wordless silence wended their way to church and up the aisle to the Horner pew. In vain had the pastor remonstrated with them singly and together. While open to reason and conviction on every other point, they were dumb regarding the cause of their wordless strife.

It was June now, and Sophia was digging among her pansies. She was slight and pale, with a pleasant, mild face that now and then startled one by settling into firm lines around the mouth. Abigail's features were cast in a sterner mold, and the lines about her mouth were deeper, and this characteristic feature in both sisters was known as "Horner spunk," and it was generally agreed that "Horner spunk" was at the root of the trouble.

Abigail stood under the cedars with a copy of the county paper in her hand. She was slowly reading an article for the fifth time:

The Rev. Paul Weemers, pastor of the Park Methodist church, New York, will preach in the First church at Rosedale on Sunday evening next. It will be remembered that the First church of Rosedale was Mr. Weemers' first charge, and his return will be the occasion of much pleasure to his old friends and parishioners. Mr. Weemers will be accompanied by his wife.

She looked across the boxwood hedge into Sophia's garden. The news would interest Sophia as well as herself. Abigail thought of this as she stood there looking at Sophia's stooping form. There was a certain stern integrity about Abigail that urged her to break the long silence and to impart the news she had read to her sister. There was an underlying tenderness, too, toward her younger sister that the bitter resentment of years could not destroy. She resolved that Sophia should not be taken unawares.

She leaned over the hedge and dropped the newspaper under Sophia's nose.

Sophia squeaked with surprise as the paper rattled among the pansies, and there was blank astonishment in her nearsighted eyes as she lifted them to gaze upon the grim, uncompromising face of her sister.

The latter pointed to the paper with an old time gesture of command, and Sophia, adjusting her spectacles, sought the wrong page with agitated eagerness. Then she turned the sheet, and presently a nervous cluck and the dull reddening of her cheek announced that she had found the item. In her excitement the younger woman spoke. "He will call," she said softly, as if to herself.

The next day was Saturday, and all day long Sophia's lavender muslin hung on the clothesline, bending and swaying in the soft west wind like a misty wraith of Sophia herself. Abigail looked sternly upon the dress. She had been on her way to the front chamber to look over a well preserved summer silk, but the sight of the dress seemed to proclaim the boldness of Sophia—a boldness that was unexpected and that seemed to rouse a stern maidenliness in the older woman. She reddened darkly and went hastily downstairs again.

In the solitude of her own front room she sat and thought. The stern upbringing of the Horner girls had discouraged the coming of suitors, and it was not until after their father's death that Paul Weemers came to preach at the First church. He had been equally attentive to both sisters, and it was perhaps natural that each should believe herself to be the preferred one and the other an interloper. When Paul received a call to a larger parish he came to say goodby, and when he asked old Hannah if Miss Horner was in the sisters appeared simultaneously. Suddenly Abigail was called away, and when she returned to the parlor the young minister had gone and Sophia was standing at the window with a bewildered look on her pretty face.

Then a white rage had taken possession of Abigail, and her tongue had lashed upon the frightened Sophia, who turned fiercely with upbraiding contradictions. After that scene, which no one witnessed, began the long silence. As her thoughts wandered back to the past she knew she had been unjust to her sister, for really neither of the sisters had any real reason for thinking Mr. Weemers was in love with her, which made Abigail's outbreak toward her sister all the more unjustifiable. It was of these things that Abigail was thinking.

The next day was Sunday, and Sophia stepped down the path alone, her worn hymn book clasped in her mittened hands. She cast many anxious, backward glances at the north wing, where Abigail's stern profile was outlined against the windowpane. She was bent over the pages of a religious journal, and it was evident she did not intend to go to church that morning. Sophia went on alone, swinging her fresh muslin skirts and holding her head rather high, quite unaware that Abigail was watching her with accusing eyes of mingled pity and resentment.

Sophia did not know why she was hurrying to church that morning with a pink spot in either faded cheek, but her heart beat quickly, and she was conscious of a pleasant excitement at the idea of seeing Paul Weemers again. That was all. She fluttered the leaves of her Bible as she waited for the service to begin. She wondered vaguely where Mrs. Weemers would sit and concluded that she was the fashionably attired woman who sat in the minister's pew. She was a plump, pretty woman, with dark hair waving back from a fresh, youthful complexion. Then Paul Weemers came in, and Sophia gasped with surprise. He was rather stout and much older, and his hair and beard were quite gray.

The next morning while the sisters were attending to their separate household duties the doorbell tolled dismally. Abigail went into the front hall and, peering through the side window light, saw a man in clerical garments accompanied by a woman. She paused for a moment with a hand on the knob; then she opened the door.

"Now, Miss Abigail, I don't believe you recognize me," exclaimed the man heartily. "I didn't see you in church yesterday, although I am sure that I recognized your sister."

"Mr. Weemers, isn't it?" asked Abigail coldly. "Won't you come in?"

"Yes, and this is my wife; my dear, this is Miss Horner, one of my old friends and parishioners."

"I have heard my husband speak of you and your lovely old house, Miss Horner," said the lady pleasantly.

They went into Abigail's cool parlor.

"Where is Miss Sophia?" inquired Mr. Weemers with evident interest.

"I will call her," said Abigail reluctantly.

She stepped across the hall and opened Sophia's door. That was the signal when there was company for both.

"Don't you care, Sophia," she whispered with fierce intensity as her sister followed her into the room.

Sophia was visibly agitated. She stammered greetings to the minister and his wife, which Abigail tried to cover by commonplace remarks, but there was an atmosphere of constraint over the four people.

"Will you have some refreshment?" asked Abigail presently. "It is a very warm day," she observed. She left the room and presently returned with foaming glasses of root beer and a plate of freshly cut sponge cake. She ate nothing herself, but looked intently from her sister to Mr. Weemers and then at the minister's wife.

The latter set down her glass. "Do you know, Miss Horner, that when my husband told me he was coming to Rosedale on Sunday I was delighted. The first thing I said was, 'Now I shall see the Horner teapot!'"

Abigail's face softened. "So he remembered our teapot?" she asked.

"Yes, indeed. I have a mania for old china, and Paul shares the mania. He has spoken of the teapot as such a lovely example of willow pattern, and I told him I positively must see it."

Abigail went to a walnut cabinet and brought forth a large blue and white teapot. It had been in the Horner family for many generations and was a treasured heirloom.

"How perfectly lovely!" exclaimed Mrs. Weemers, while her husband hung over it in silent admiration. Suddenly he straightened back in his chair and laughed heartily.

"You do not know, Miss Abigail, how hard I strove one day, many years ago, to ask you to sell me that famous teapot. I had seen it and succumbed to its beauty. I remember, just a day or so before I left Rosedale, I called to say goodby and at the same time to ask if you would sell it, but I realized my presumption and hardly hoped you would do so. I tried to broach the subject, but somehow I couldn't seem to make any headway. I recollect that you were called from the room, and I tried to approach your sister on the subject, but she seemed to want to talk of everything except the teapot, so I gave it up and went away. I wrote to you once and asked about it, but as I never heard from you I presume the letter went astray."

Abigail and Sophia were looking at each other over the blue teapot. There was a startled expression in Sophia's eyes, while Abigail looked pityingly at her sister.

Abigail found her voice first. "My sister and I would like to give you the teapot, Mrs. Weemers," she said, with decision in her tones. "There is no one to care for it after we are gone, and you and your husband seem to prize it so highly we would like you to have it."

"But—we cannot—it is too much"—stammered Mrs. Weemers.

"Oh, yes!" cried Sophia eagerly. "You must take it. We want you to have it, Abigail and I have so many old fashioned things."

Abigail left the room to wrap the teapot in paper and to escape the effusive thanks of the delighted Weemers. Sophia followed her sister, trembling with some unexplained emotion.

Removing the lid, Abigail thrust her hand into the teapot and drew forth a yellowed envelope. She held it toward Sophia.

"It's yours," she said shortly.

"No; it's yours," returned Sophia.

"If it's mine," said Abigail in grim tones, "I'll burn it up." And she thrust it into the stove.

"Shall we have tea together in the big dining room tonight, Abigail?" asked Sophia timidly.

"Of course we will," said Abigail.

Something New.

Many advertisers are constantly trying to think up "Something New" or "Different" and the results are startling to be sure, but certainly not convincing nor conducive to increase in the business of the advertiser.

The craze for originality is a mistake. People do not care for stunts or mental gymnastics. They do want to know the facts in regard to your business and whether you can offer better prices or better quality than your competitors.

WAR IN MESOPOTAMIA

EFFICIENT WORK OF BRITISH IN RECENT ADVANCE.

The Days of Muddle Are Ended and the Organization Has Been Perfected So That There Is Little Danger of Our Troops Meeting With Any Serious Disaster.

NOTHING more efficient than the lines of communications and supplies serving the British forces in Mesopotamia can well be imagined. The days of muddle are ended and order has been evolved out of chaos. All that human agency can do has been and is being done to turn past failures to success and prevent future breakdowns in organization.

Communications by road, railway, and river have been laid out and developed on a well-thought-out plan. Facilities for the loading and unloading of vessels at Basra are now on an adequate scale. Stores in abundance are available and methodically controlled. Medical equipment has been introduced on a lavish scale. An ample water supply is assured at every base and camp.

Sanitation has been taken in hand. An anti-fly crusade is being carried on, though any appreciable diminution of the fly plague can only be achieved by herculean effort and after long time. The construction of public works, houses, stores, electric light plants, cold-storage, wharfage, docks, roads, and railways, goes merrily on, and on so large a scale and of such solidity that it is not surprising if the inhabitants of the country interpret these activities as denoting a determination on the part of the British visitor to remain permanently in Mesopotamia.

The feeding of the troops from the firing line to the base is excellent, and in the army canteens there is an abundance of purchasable necessities and luxuries.

From Basra to Sheik Saad one may travel in considerable comfort in one of the "P" boats of newest design, admirably adapted for their purpose, which is that of a ferryboat. These boats are used for the rapid evacuation of wounded when heavy fighting is going on. What is wanted for this purpose is as much clear deck space as possible and no frills. The boats are admirably designed, adequately staffed and equipped with every conceivable comfort.

Sheik Saad is the jumping-off place for troops, stores, and ammunition brought up, and for the transfer from rail and light vessels to larger ships of sick and wounded going down to the base hospitals. Sheik Saad itself has two large hospitals, one for Indians and one for Europeans, and also a large casualty clearing station. Elaborate arrangements exist for feeding the wounded all along the line, and on arrival at railhead, and though the sojourn at this point of casualties is mostly of quite brief duration, the facilities are as complete as those of a hospital in England.

During the storming of Sanna-y-yat the first rear of bombardment began at 10 o'clock; the first wounded were in the field ambulance at noon, and at four in the afternoon were on their way down stream, their wounds dressed, their stomachs well filled, their cigarettes alight.

The hottest of the hot weather is now at hand with all its attendant horrors, and all the obstacles which nature in Mesopotamia flings in the path of the military commander. The soil, the rain, the climate, the floods, the flies, and the heat combine to make the conduct of a campaign in the Tigris Valley during the summer months a task of stupendous difficulty. The difficulties are being tackled and overcome with success.

Shocked Strawberries.

The British Government has decided to conduct experiments in Herefordshire with a view to finding out whether the growth of various crops cannot be accelerated by means of electricity.

The idea is not new. Years ago Sir Oliver Lodge enclosed a field in Gloucestershire in a sort of overhead cage of wires, strung upon poles, through which a powerful electric current was made continuously to pass. As a result the crops growing underneath were found to be increased by nearly one-third of their yield under ordinary conditions.

Strawberries seem to be peculiarly susceptible to electric influence. Subjected to a series of mild galvanic shocks, they show, in some instances, an increased yield of 50 per cent. Raspberry plants sprayed with electrified water have also had their yield materially increased; while some experimenters have attained even more startling results by means of powerful electric arc-lamps suspended above growing crops and kept burning all night, thereby stimulating the growth of the plants in much the same way as continuous bright sunshine does.—Tit-Bits.

Gold Leaf.

There appears to be some mystery about the origin of gold leaf. It is found, for example, in connection with the most ancient known mummies, having been used for covering teeth, tongue, skin, etc. Sometimes it is also found on the coffins. Gold leaf was also used on the tombs and monuments of ancient Egypt. The process of making gold leaf has thus been known since the eighth century B. C. In the eleventh century it seems to have attained as high a degree of perfection as to-day. The gold leaf on some ancient Grecian pottery indeed is as thin as that now used.

Love is to marriage what coal is to coke.

Five Rifles Per Man.

For every man on the firing line there must be five rifles in existence, the one in his hand, the one in immediate reserve, the one back at the base and one each in the hands of the two recruits that are in successive stages of training to take the fighting man's place when he is killed, disabled or captured.—Collier's.

Putting His Foot In It.

She—Don't be downhearted, Richard, even if father does say you'll be young enough to marry five years from now. He—Oh, I don't care for myself, but how about you?—Exchange.

God does not comfort us to make us comfortable, but to make us comfort ers.—J. Jowett.

WOMAN AVOIDS OPERATION

Medicine Which Made Surgeon's Work Unnecessary.

Astoria, N. Y. — "For two years I was feeling ill and took all kinds of tonics. I was getting worse every day. I had chills, my head would ache, I was always tired. I could not walk straight because of the pain in my back and I had pains in my stomach. I went to a doctor and he said I must go under an operation, but I did not go. I read in the paper about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and told my husband about it. I said 'I know nothing will help me but I will try this.' I found myself improving from the very first bottle, and in two weeks time I was able to sit down and eat a hearty breakfast with my husband, which I had not done for two years. I am now in the best of health and did not have the operation." — Mrs. JOHN A. KOENIG, 502 Fleming Avenue, Astoria, N. Y.

Every one dreads the surgeon's knife and the operating table. Sometimes nothing else will do; but many times doctors say they are necessary when they are not. Letter after letter comes to the Pinkham Laboratory, telling how operations were advised and were not performed; or, if performed, did no good, but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was used and good health followed.

If you want advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass.

Paraguay's Lace.

Among the "cottage" industries of Paraguay is the manufacture of a lace called "nanduti" (from the Guaranian word meaning web). The articles produced, which are all made by hand, include parasol covers, handkerchiefs, doilies, boleros, mantillas, table mats, shawls, edging, and insertion. The articles most popular with the foreigners here are parasol covers, mantillas, doilies, handkerchiefs, and mats, these being made of silk or very fine cotton thread. These laces appear to be superior in quality and design to similar laces made in the Canary Islands and Mexico. A handkerchief that requires from six to eight weeks to make sells in Asuncion for 100 to 150 Paraguan pesos and a parasol cover that takes a year to make sells for 600 to 1,200 pesos, the Paraguayan peso at the prevailing rate of exchange varying in value from 3.75 to 3 cents Canadian currency.

The lace is usually sold by peddling it from house to house, and as far as the consulate knows it has never been exported to any important degree. However, the leading export houses in Asuncion might be in position to handle the trade should a foreign demand for the lace develop.

A Poet From The Railway

Mr. C. J. Dennis and his home in the bush at Toolangi, Victoria, N.S.W.

THE dangers of the Mediterranean route between Australia and England have induced a large number of Australians to pass through Canada, who otherwise might never have known this country, and have brought Australia into closer sympathy with the Dominion than ever before. Canadians also have learned to appreciate the Anzacs, and the increasing trade between these two junior partners of the British Empire, as shown in the record traffic of the Canadian Australasian service, is one of the bright sides of this war. There are many points of common touch—both are vast countries anxious for greater population and both are on the whole still mainly agricultural. The comparative absence of cabled news from Australia in Canadian papers is, however, a handicap against the knowledge of each other's social problems and progress, and Australian authors are as little known in Canada as Canadian writers are in the Antipodes.

One poet of Australia is, however, making headway here and deserves to be even better known—so vivid a picture does he give of the Australian larrikin in the terse vernacular of Adelaide. "Doreen and the Sentimental Bloke," which in its own country has run into the hundred thousands and has been put into a pocket edition for the soldiers in the trenches, threatens to rival even Robert Service (who like himself owes much to Kipling) in the affections of the Canadian reader, and though "The Moods of Ginger Mick," which has made a tremendous hit in Australia, has not yet been published in this country, stray copies pass from hand to hand and are greatly treasured. Ginger Mick is a peddler of rabbits who volunteers for the front and dies like a hero at Gallipoli. Dennis' "Backblock Ballads," descriptive of the people of the Australian bush and the settled country districts, are classics.

Dennis wrote "Doreen" in the bush at Toolangi, Victoria, in a log cabin which he built himself after he had grown tired of being a Government official and a newspaper editor.

Just as the early days of construction of the Canadian Pacific Railway attracted men of all classes, some of which, such as Morley Roberts and Frederick Niven, have since made their mark in literature, so the building of the Australian railways provided a job at one time of his career for C. J. Dennis, who as a man handy with the axe and saw was able afterwards to draw pay as a carpenter. His father was a retired sea captain and a hotelkeeper with small appreciation of poetry. At one of the rockiest periods of his career the poet wired the publican "Send ten pounds, going Broken Hill," to which his father replied "Sending nothing, go to Hell." In spite of this lack of sympathy, Dennis became editor of the "Adelaide Critic," which he left to establish the "Gadfly," a saucy paper on the lines of New York "Life." This paper was once accused by a correspondent of sectarian bias. Dennis replied that the paper was controlled by an Anglican, a Roman Catholic, a Wesleyan Methodist and an Atheist, and gave it as his opinion that the Atheist was "the most religious man of the lot."

ITALY'S POSITION IN THE WAR DEFINED BY BARON SONNINO

That the entrance of the United States into the world war for the cause of liberty and the right is the strongest possible indorsement of the attitude of Italy was asserted by Baron Sonnino, Minister for Foreign Affairs, in his address delivered at the recent convening of Parliament, full reports of which have reached America.

"The justice of our cause could not have received a more solemn, a more manifest sanction, than this given by a nation which, within the limits of national dignity, tried everything to avoid war," said Baron Sonnino. "Italy has rejoiced over the very cordial reception given our mission by the American nation, when this mission, headed by the Prince of Udine, conveyed to the American people the expression of Italy's rejoicing for their entrance in the war on the side of the Allies. The reception afforded the Italian mission shows that America appreciates the value of Italy's participation in the war quite fully. This brotherhood of arms binds the two nations forever, and it is the ardent wish of all Italians that the United States and Italy may follow together the path of civilization and progress."

Dealing with other phases of the war situation and with the problems it involves, Baron Sonnina said:—"Last March the Italian government, together with the other Allies, formally recognized the provisional Russian government. The Italian nation and the Parliament follow with intense interest the course of events of their great ally in its new life of liberty. We must trust that the noble Russian people will find in the principles of democracy the strength necessary to overcome all the difficulties inherent in its racial and constitutional transformation, and that the sure instinct of the people will be on its guard against all enemy tricks which aim not only to make their own political and military interests prevail, but also to undo the free organization of Russia. Russia, however, will find her best protection in a vigorous prosecution of the war and in her complete accord with her allies. The sad case of Roumania had a profound echo among us who have with her common ideals and aspirations. Roumania, however, not unmindful of her traditions and conscious of the justice of her cause, will find the power necessary to overcome the difficulties of her present situation.

"No peace will be agreeable to us which does not assure the restoration of three unhappy nations that have seen their territory invaded and devastated, but who live with full confidence in the future—Belgium, Serbia and Montenegro. Also the restoration of the independence of Poland is an essential clause of our peace terms. The rights of nationality must be protected. It is in moments of danger that the bonds between nations become stronger.

"The recent proclamation of the independence of Albania has publicly confirmed the special concern of the Italian government toward that country, the interests of which, in connection with our direct and safe possession of Valona, are intimately bound to the general problem of the settlement of the Adriatic — a vital question for Italy. We want the independence of Albania in agreement with the general principle on which our alliances are based and which have been recently repeated so eloquently by the United States and by the new Russian government. Italy, in regard to Albania, has no other aim than that of preventing a possible interference of a third Power. Italy guarantees the absolute autonomy of Albania and will protect her interests and aspirations in the conference of the nations. It will be the province of the peace conference to determine the exact boundaries of Albania. While the war is on it is necessary that the General Staff of the Italian army have the direction of all affairs, always, however, with due regard to the existing usages and interests of the Albanian people. After the war Albania will decide for herself.

"Military necessity has forced the three protecting powers to take in regard to Greece such measures as have resulted in the abdication of King Constantine and the assumption to the throne of his second son, Alexander. Italy, not being in the number of the protecting Powers, had no part in all this, although—it is well to say it—the Italian government in this circumstance, as well as in the general direction of the war, has been in full agreement with its allies. It is to be hoped that Greece has now reached such a condition in its internal affairs as not to endanger any longer the military position of the allied armies in Macedonia. We wish well to the new King, fully convinced that Italy and Greece must proceed together in the development of their political and economic activities toward those glorious ends to which their historical traditions and their ancient civilization call them.

"Against Turkey England has recently undertaken a new vigorous military action in Palestine, in which the bravery of the British army has already been demonstrated. The Italian flag is represented in that expedition—a fact which responds to a high international political and moral interest. The constant care of this government and of our allies is this—to strengthen our unity of action and harmonize our respective interests.

"The mediterranean interests of Italy are essentially based on the principle of equilibrium and equality among the Powers. We have the greatest guarantees that these interest will be equally protected and safeguarded.

"Lately many efforts from many sides (from the enemy also) have been made to have all the elements of the future peace enclosed in a short formula It is worth while to remember the wise words which the President of the United States addressed to Russia a few days ago, 'all wrongs must be redressed and their recurrence made impossible.' One cannot do this with highly sounding words or pleasing phrases. The general situation is very complicated, because it includes problems of difference of race, civilization, geographical position, traditions, aspirations. A short formula cannot cover the whole ground of so many cases. Complicated problems exclude a priori, the simplicism of a formula that covers everything. Thus the formula of 'no annexations and no indemnities' is purely negative if it is separated from the positive principle of liberty and independence of all nations. The negative policy of no indemnities and no annexations without a guarantee that the peace and the international justice will be maintained would amount to the same as to admit that all the iniquities and violences of the past are to be continued forever."

CLOSES CAFES IN BERLIN

Government Punishes Proprietors for Evading Food Laws.

BERLIN, via Copenhagen, Aug. 1.—One of the oldest international restaurants among whose guests Americans used to predominate in peace times, Dressel's, on Unter den Linden, has become a victim of the rigorous administration of the German food regulations. The proprietor, Heinrich Fuchs, has been convicted of selling meals to favourite guests without exacting the regulations coupons on their various food cards. Besides, it was shown that he had provided himself with supplies by paying prices higher than those officially fixed. His place was closed yesterday by the authorities.

Another favourite rendezvous for Americans in Berlin, the Wideneı Schloss, no Dorotheen Strasse, has also been closed by the authorities for the same reason. It is said many fashionable restaurants which have not observed the food laws have ceased to do business within the last few days.

HERE'S HOW WEST TREATS DEFAMER OF U. S. UNIFORM

TOOELE, Utah.—Charged with "inciting violence against a uniform of the United States," C. R. Wheatley, said to be from Kansas City Kas., was turned over to the sheriff here by Capt. Claude V. Biggs of the Idaho national guard, against whom the alleged insulting remarks are said to have been made.

Wheatley was arrested after the officer had paraded him through the streets of Tooele, tin cans tied to his back and placarded to announce his alleged offense.

As a result of the punishment inflicted Capt. Biggs may face a court-martial and answer charges of exceeding his authority.

Maj. D. P. Olsen, also stationed at Tooele, will investigate the affair.

C. O. Young of the American Federation of Labour has sent a protest against Biggs' action to the war department at Washington

Wheatley, it is said, made remarks of derogatory character while among the smeltermen who were recently on strike here.

Among other things it is alleged that Wheatley said he would take Capt. Biggs' gun from him when he met the officer. Hearing of the threat, Biggs, where he found Wheatley. The unofficial punishment was then administered.

WHEAT MAXIMUM HIGH.

British M.P. Urges That Canada Be Asked to Make Reduction.

LONDON, Aug. 3. — Richard Holt asked the Colonial Secretary in the Commons to urge the Canadian Government that the maximum price for new wheat should approximate nearer pre-war price than eighty shillings per quarter, delivered Fort William. The Colonial Secretary did not think he could properly make such representations. Commander Bellaires suggested that economy in food might be effected if prisoners here were sent to Canada and the States, "seeing that steamers return from there very largely in ballast." The answer was that employment could profitably be found for prisoners here. The proposal was, therefore, inadvisable.

DRAFT CLOSES SUMMER STOCK

BRANTFORD, Aug. 3.—The United States draft ended the activities of the Roma Reade Stock Company, which has been presenting summer stock at the Grand Opera House here. Milton Campbell, second lead, was notified from Philadelphia that he had been drafted and to report at once. He left with his wife, also a member of the company, and the play was canceled with no advance notice.

DIES WHILE AT BREAKFAST.

Kitchener, Aug. 3.—Jos. Eeiffert, aged 79, for many years a resident of this city, died suddenly at the home of his daughter here this morning. had been in his usual health and did not complain when he came to his breakfast this morning. Before he had finished his morning meal he dropped dead. He is survived by five sons and two daughters. Burial will be made at Southampton.

VOCATIONAL MISFITS CAUSED BY PARENTS

SHOULD BE IN BUSINESS

They Are Victims of Parents' Pride and of Their Disposition to Dictate to Their Children.

People are not so very different in these days, perhaps, from what they were 200 years ago. And when we say "people" we are thinking particularly of parents.

Right here some one may suggest a query as to whether parents really are people. There are times, undoubtedly, in the experience of most parents when they feel very humble on this point. In subordinating their own interest to those of the children it must often seem to them that the children are the people.

However, there are certain respects in which the parents persistently act as if they were the people, and as said before, they were acting this way 200 years ago, and probably 2,000 years ago as well. For instance, some student of journalistic antiquities has dug ont this illuminating extract from the files of The London Spectator of 1710:

"When I consider how each of these professions (divinity, law, and physic) are crowded with multitudes that seek their living in them, and how many men of merit there are in each of them, who may be rather said to be of the science than the profession, I very much wonder at the humor of parents, who will not rather choose to place their sons in a way of life where an honest industry cannot but thrive, than in stations where the greatest probity, learning and good sense may miscarry. How many men are country curates that might have made themselves aldermen in London a right improvement of a smaller sum of money than what is usually laid out upon a learned education? A sober, frugal person, of slender parts, and a slow apprehension, might have thrived in trade though he starves upon physic; as a man would be well enough pleased to buy silks—one whom he would not venture to feel his pulse. The misfortune is that parents take a liking to a particular profession, and therefore desire their sons may be of it; whereas, in so great an affair of life, they should consider the genius and abilities of their children, more than their own inclinations."

We have no doubt that this was a parental idiosyncrasy even back in the days of Solomon, and it continues to be widly manifested. In some respects the conditions are more marked than they were two centuries ago, for the "learned professions" have multiplied. We see hundreds of doctors, lawyers, and ministers making a precarious livelihood and performing their duties in a pedfunctory fashion who might have been both successful and efficient, if they were better fitted by natural aptitude. It is the same in a thousand other lines. There is a vast multitude of round pegs in the square holes of about all industries and callings.

Of course, it would not be fair to blame all these misfits upon parents. A good many of the victims are in the wrong place because of their own stubbornness, passing whims or lack of understanding of their real abilities. The early necessity of developing an earning capacity is responsible for putting many thousands into the wrong lines of work. However, they may have drifted or have been impelled into the wrong occupations, once there they are more than likely to stick, merely through inertia.

It takes a potent ambition and a vast amount of resolution and energy for a man to "pull up stakes" and start all over again in a new and strange field after following one line of work for ten, fifteen or twenty years. And yet by doing this innumerable men have turned failure into modest success. Many a man has not found his work until comparatively late in life.

Parents are still largely at fault in this matter of vocational misfits. Despite a widely accepted belief to the contrary there is still a considerable amount of docility among children, and although they are over-independent in some respects there are several particulars in which, as a rule, they incline to follow the paths of least resistance.

"It's confidence that does it."

MOSCOW IS OPTIMISTIC AND NEW GOVERNMENT MAY BE LOCATED THERE

Sentiment is Entirely Different From That at Petrograd---German Attacks Were Broken Up On French Front---Enemy Claims Many Tanks Destroyed.

MOSCOW, August 6.—Factories in Moscow are working full blast turning out munitions to-day. The sentiment here is entirely different from that found in Petrograd. Moscow is pro-Russian and violently anti-German. Where Petrograd is a hotbed of pessimism, Moscow is all optimistic. It is hoped the new government will establish its headquarters here.

NO CHANGE IN BELGIAN SITUATION.

PARIS, August 6.—The situation in Belgium was unchanged to-day, the War Office announced. German attacks south of Boville and Avocourt Wood and in Alsace, were broken down by artillery fire.

CLAIMS TWENTY-FIVE TANKS WERE DESTROYED.

LONDON, August 6.—The Berlin official statement to-day made the claim that twenty-five British tanks had been destroyed in the Flanders battle.

RUSSIANS PREPARING TO MAKE A STAND.

BERLIN, via London, August 6.—The Russians have prepared for battle between the Dniester and the Pruth rivers.

Neutral Critics All Agreed That Prussia Is Nearing End

Her Hope of a Draw Has Gone, Declares Impartial Swiss Critic

LONDON, August 6.—It is too early yet to forecast the final result of the battle of Flanders in its influence on the great war. Military men here do not look for a decision at this time. However badly the Prussians may be defeated in the west, it is not believed they will give up the fight and sue for peace, except in the remote possibility of a revolution at home. Then, too, their victories in the east will give them a new lease of life. The ground gained in Galicia was covered with grain ripe for the harvest and will supply the famishing populations of the Central Empires for months.

Nevertheless each day sees a weakening of Prussia's power and brings the Hohenzollern autocracy nearer its doom. This is beginning to be realized in Berlin and is patent to all neutral critics. One of the most acute of these, who has taken an impartial ground regarding military tactics since the beginning of the war and whose judgment is unmoved by sentiment, Colonel Feyler, the celebrated Swiss authority, sees signs of an approaching collapse of the Central Empires.

PRUSSIA'S HOPE OF A DRAW GONE.

One of his recent articles in the Journal de Geneve, headed "Near the End," is remarkable in that it contradicts in advance the Chancellor's assertion that Germany is stronger and her enemies weaker after three years of war. He shows by facts and figures that the forces of the allies are steadily increasing while those of the Central Empires are diminishing, and the addition of probably a million men from America and perhaps fifteen divisions, or 300,000 men, from Greece, will soon increase the disparity.

Prussia's only hope was a draw to avoid absolute defeat, and Colonel Feyler indicates that a draw has now passed beyond her reach. Already her armies are filled with mere boys unable to stand the hardships of a campaign, as was noted in examining the six thousand and odd prisoners taken thus far in the battle of Flanders. Both British and French commands have reported that the morale of their adversaries appears to be weakening.

Milkman's Picnic Was A Success

Messrs. Bill Robinson, Bob Dolby, Scott Hewson, the committee which has charge of the Milkmen's Excursion on Saturday afternoon, are today congratulating themselves on one of the biggest successes in the way of a picnic this year. The Stoney Lake, which was chartered for the occasion, with about 250 passengers aboard, started down the river at two o'clock heading for Gores Landing. The trip down was livened by Tuckers orchestra to the strains of which the majority of the passengers danced and a most successful and jolly time was spent. On arrival at Gore's Landing a picnic lunch was served. It was regretted that the short stay necessitated the obliteration of the promised sports. The party returned at 9 o'clock thoroughly satisfied with the day's proceedings.

NOT A FAN LEFT IN NEW YORK.

NEW YORK, Aug. 3. — The coal famine is a hardy annual in New York, but the city, so far as can be learned, experienced its first electric fan famine yesterday. A big wholesale house which deals solely in electric fans reported its supply exhausted during the forendon. The New York Edison and the United Electric which do not merchandise, but place orders for such fixtures, then declined to guarantee deliveries.

DR. McPHERSON HOME AFTER 27 MONTHS AT BROMLEY HOSPITAL

Handled Thousands of Invalided Soldiers and Latterly Spent Four Months in France—Met Peterboro' Officers

ON TWO MONTHS' LEAVE

Major A. W. McPherson, M.D., has returned from England and France, accompanied by Mrs. McPherson and their little son "Bill." For two years he was connected with the Canadian Convalescent Hospital at Bromley and latterly with a reinforcing entrenching battalion behind Vimy in France and also with a field ambulance' corps. He was also in charge of a Medical Board in London. Among those who appeared before the Board were Lieut. Percy Stock, who has recovered from his injuries and may join the Royal Naval Air Service. He was then on a trip to view the grand fleet. Rev. Canon Davidson also appeared before the Board and was extremely anxious to be passed in order that he might return to Bologne. Major McPherson met Lieut. Worth at Buxton, who is likely to be invalided home. Nursing Sisters Beamish, formerly of the Isolation Hospital, and Beatrice Blewett, were among the Peterborough people Dr. McPherson met.

SEIZE PHARMACIST ON TREASON CHARGE

Young Arndt Accused of Saying He Preferred to Fight with Germans —Claims Draft Exemption.

Rochester, N. Y. — Accused of treason for making affidavit that his sympathies in the present war were with Germany and for saying that he would take up arms with Germany rather than against that country, William Herman Arndt, 24 years old, a licensed pharmacist, was arrested at Newark, Wayne county, by Deputy United States Marshal Thomas Moran. He was arraigned before United States Commissioner Edwin C. Smith here this afternoon and held under $5,000 bail for further hearing before Commissioner Smith on August 8th.

Arndt is American born and the son of the Rev. Wm. Arndt, minister of the German Lutheran Church in Webster.

In an affidavit claiming exemption from the draft made on June 21 before a notary public Arndt stated:—"I have several near relatives including cousins and uncles, in the German army. It would be unjust to expect me to harm them. My parents were German born and reared in Germany, for which reasons my sympathy is with Germany."

GROUND HOG'S CROP.

Has Three Hills of Potatoes Near Its Home on Sydnicate Island.

A ground hog on Syndicate Island, Stoney Lake, must be listed among the "potatriots." It has three hills of potatoes to its credit, although this crop apparently just happened. By some fortuitous juxtaposition of a few potatoes with the earth dug out of the wood chuck's home, all the preliminary requirements for growth were arranged and the weather did the rest. Cottagers report that the three hills have produced stout stocks and the crop is approaching the harvest.

LONDON, Aug. 6.—Dr. Von. Kuestmann was installed as Foreign Minister to-day succeeded Alfred Zimmermann, Berlin reports stated

A new post of Minister of Munitions, was also established with Dr. Gess at the head, and four changes were made in the Prussian state ministry.

Effective Method Of Fighting "Subs"

Special to The Examiner:

PARIS, Aug. 6.— Senator Marconi, the wireless wizard, declared here today, upon his arrival from America, en route to Rome, that while no decisive means of combatting the submarine menace had yet been found, he had seen proved a means of defence that was becoming daily more efficacious.

"The danger from submarines is decreasing daily. It is certain that future losses will diminish."

Lights Out In Band Stand Of Victoria Park

A number of citizens have complained of the inadequate lighting of the band stand in Victoria Park during the course of the mass meeting last evening. This was due to a broken fuse block, caused no doubt during the electric storm of last week. A couple of electricians worked for over an hour in an effort to repair the damage, but all to no purpose. A couple of coal oil lamps were requisitioned and no material inconvenience was suffered by those who took part in the programme, including the band of the Salvation Army.

TENTATIVE PLAN OF ALTERED MAP OF EUROPE AFTER WAR

Restoration of Belgium, Alsace-Lorraine to France and Re-establishment of Poland as Independent State

RETAIN GERMAN COLONIES

Special to The Examiner:

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6.— The Allies have come to a full agreement as to the remodelling of Europe's map after the war. A sketch showing the peace aims of these countries was shown the press to-day at one of the Allied embassies.

First in the Allies' proposals is the restoration of Belgium. France, according to plans, is to have Alsace-Lorraine. Constantinople will be internationalized, and the Turkish grasp in Europe loosened. The Grecian boundary will be shoved northward, while Greece will also get some of the islands near her in the Mediterranean.

Italy will have Trent and Trieste, some straightening of her northern boundary, and a small slice of territory across the Adriatic. Croatia and Bohemia will be made into independent states, while Poland will be established as an independent territory as a buffer between Germany and Russia. It is proposed to divide Austria-Hungary into two States.

The Allies do not propose to yield German-African colonies in view of Germany's abuses.

Largely Attended Mass Meeting In Victoria Park

Resolution Calling For Collective and Individual Support Unanimously Endorsed by Several Thousand Citizens --Speeches by Acting Mayor Duncan, His Lordship Bishop O'Brien, His Honour Judge Huycke and Others ---Fourth Year of the Great War Will Be Seriously Felt in Canada--War Veterans Urge Speedy Enforcement of Conscription.

ANNIVERSARY EVENT

Moved by His Lordship Bishop O'Brien.
Seconded by His Honour Judge Huycke.

THAT, we, Citizens of Peterborough assembled at this Great Anniversary Meeting, at the beginning of the fourth year of the greatest and cruellest war the world has ever known, desire to affirm and reaffirm our belief in the righteousness of the Cause for which we are fighting, the Cause of Peace and Goodwill, of Law and Liberty, of Democracy and Good Faith among the Nations.

We are proud that our Mother Land entered into the struggle not for conquest or power, but as the protector of the weak and oppressed, and are still more proud that our own dear Canada with her sister Dominions over the seas have answered the call and rallied to the unfurling of the Flag. The spirit and achievements of our young Canadians are immortal and can never be effaced from the page of history; they reflect great glory on our young Country now just half a Century old. We must see to it that our dear boys have not suffered, fought, and died in vain, and we, one and all, hereby express our inflexible and unalterable determination to continue the stupendous struggle until Victory has been achieved.

We pledge our every effort, both collective and individual, to assist, support, comfort, and reinforce our splendid soldiers at the Front, who fight for use and look to us not to fail them in their hour of extremity.

With the united efforts of the Allies, the Champions of honour, civilization, and Christianity,—strengthened and sustained as we believe, by the help and blessing of Almighty God—we hope and pray that this fourth year may be the last year, and that it may bring to a victorious issue the struggle for the maintenance and ideals of Liberty and Justice which are the common and sacred Cause of our Allies and ourselves in this most Holy War.

WAR VETERANS' RESOLUTION.

It was moved by Comrade Whatley, and seconded by Comrade Muir and resolved,

That Sir Robert Borden as Prime Minister of Canada be requested to put conscription into force immediately,

And that he proceed to take any and every measure to relieve, support, and reinforce the men at the front, without delay.

And that a copy of this resolution be forwarded to Captain J. H. Burnham, M.P., for transmission to the Prime Minister.

The foregoing resolutions were carried by a largely attended mass meeting of citizens held last evening in Victoria Park. The object of the meeting was to commemorate the beginning of the fourth year of the world war and to give citizens and others an opportunity of publicly expressing their unalterable determination to assist in bringing the conflict to a speedy and successful conclusion. A resolution in favour of conscription and recommending its speedy and effective enforcement, was presented by representatives of the Peterborough Great War Veterans' Association and heartily endorsed by the gathering. Members of the Association paraded to the park, headed by the Salvation Army Band. The band furnished a number of well-rendered selections during the course of the evening.

Acting Mayor G. H. Duncan, who presided, in his opening remarks said:

"It is three years since the British Empire, seeing the Germans making a most unwarranted invasion of the small Belgian nation, intervened to protect the people of that nation, and to join in turning back the hordes who had been sent against Belgium and France. England had, with other nations, guaranteed Belgium against attack, and that of itself, without any other reason, was a sufficient call upon her honour to cause her to come to the rescue. At the same time we know that the rulers of Germany had decided upon a war of conquest and that their determination was to dominate the world. While other nations had been peacefully carrying on their business, and their people and Governments had no thought of making war, Germany had been preparing for half a century to wage war on her peaceful neighbours and to thus become the master of the world. Canada had as deep an interest in checking Germany as had England or any other part of the British Empire, because we felt the ruthlessness of the German attack on the other nations, because our Empire must stand together or fall together, and because if the Empire fell our independence and our liberties would be lost.

Veterans Present.

We all know, said the speaker, and the world knows, and none better than the Germans, the part that Canada has taken in this war. We are glad to have here to-night a number of the brave men who voluntarily joined the Canadian forces and did their part in France and Flanders, and we will never forget what they have done or what the gallant Canadian soldiers are now doing and suffering for the independence of Canada and the liberty of the people of the world. Some will never come back, but they and their deeds will not be forgotten. The war has gone on for three years and Germany has been checked on land, where she expected to win so easily, and her savagery by sea will not bring her success. We have met here to-night to observe the third anniversary of the declaration of war, and we are all as determined now as we were three years ago, that the Germans shall not win, and that, with God's help, the cause of the people shall triumph. We will wish to give united expression to that determination, and I will ask His Lordship Bishop O'Brien to address you and to place before you a resolution that will, I feel certain, express the sentiments of all.

BISHOP O'BRIEN'S ADDRESS

Acting Mayor Duncan then introduced Bishop O'Brien, who, with his usual force and eloquence spoke as follows:

We are one of many assemblies gathered this evening throughout the length and breadth of the land to commemorate the third anniversary of Britain's entry into the great war, the third anniversary of the day on which she made the momentous decision that she would not stand idly by and see Belgium destroyed, France overrun and civilization threatened. It was a supremely solemn day, and the decision reached was one of the most important a government of Great Britain ever made. That decision had been almost without precedent, for it bound the vast empire to a war in which the desire of conquest and territorial gain was entirely absent. England placed herself on record as prepared to fight for an ideal, and that ideal has bestirred the world. A free nation undertook to fight that others might enjoy the same liberty and freedom that she herself enjoyed, and that the world might forever rid itself of that barbarous military spirit which was dragging down all Europe to financial, economic social and moral ruin.

THIRD ANNIVERSARY.

To-day is also the third anniversary of the day when the red blood in thousands of Canada's sons began to boil, and they resolved that if the Mother Country became involved, as dutiful sons they would arise and share their mother's burden. They did arise—420,000 strong—and they have accepted unflinchingly the obligations they have been called upon

FARM WORK AND WAGES.

The whole country is seething with sensation. The patriots and politicians in urban centres are respectively championing their interest; but the chief excitement is on the sidelines. The warm weather has brought in the grain harvest with a rush and there is in turn demanded a rush of activity and help to meet the harvesting crisis; for it is a real crisis. At a pinch reinforcements can be waited for; but the harvest must be promptly reaped; the grain cannot be allowed to go back into the soil. The Food Controller says there are needed ten thousand workers for the Ontario harvest.

There is as large a measure of patriotism in saving the harvest, to help feed our armies, as there is in fighting the foe directly. The better we feed our armies the more effective they are against the enemy. The better we feed the British and French people the more fit we make them to provide the munitions and other equipment needed to give our armies the means of victory.

As to the labour supply, a good deal depends upon the wages offered. Men earning big wages in factories, working in the shade and generally under conditions of comparative comfort, need a good deal of patriotism to be content with smaller wages, under the blazing sunshine, to which they are not accustomed, and with long hours, to which they also are unaccustomed. The Government seems prepared to make the way of increased harvest help as easy as possible.

It is partially promised that the Government will provide transportation for workers, and also make up the difference, between wages given for harvest work and the wages paid in factories or other town occupations. This latter is important, if we have regard to results. It is said that there is little complaint of shortage of harvest help with farmers willing to pay good wages.

There are, and have been, a good many townspeople working for the farmers; even some of our professional men—in the law—for this is the "silly season"—seem to be willing to earn an honest penny, for once in their lives, and have gone out to work on farms—without the asking of a retaining fee.

At a meeting with the Food Controller, it was decided to recommend the Ontario Government to advertise for a sufficient number of of factory men, and that the farmers be asked to pay a minimum wage of $45 per month (with board, equivalent to $60 per month), and that the Government devise some means of paying the difference between farm wages and the shop wages that workers receive.

This seems to be a reasonable proposal; but after all it is not what was looked for, or stipulated by, men with pluck and patriotism enough to fight—men who have left high paid jobs, to accept $1.10 per day, hard fare and hard knocks. But it is not profitable to institute comparisons. The men who enlisted to fight are of a higher mould of soul than the men who sticks to his job, his good pay, his good feeding and good bed.

We can't, all, be, and all don't want to be, heroes.

WHAT IS NEEDED.

The Win-the-war convention in Toronto may not awake any more than the echoes, but it will do good if it also awakes among our men of weight and among the people of Canada a sense of the necessity of a government such as is needed—of a new man at the helm and new men as counsellors. The convention struck the right note when it declared for a "national government" instead of a party government, handicapped not only by partizanship, but by the inefficiency, defects of policy and the inefficiency of administration, due to making partizan advantage, even in the throes of unprecedented war conditions, a dominating factor in its policy.

To win the war Canada needs many things of large essentiality. First there is urgent need for 100,000 more overseas soldiers if Canada is to keep faith with the Empire and the allies, pledged by the aribtrary offer of Sir Robert Borden to supply a total of 500,000 fighting forces. Through mismanagement, through the creation, by bad government and waste of resources, and by bad faith of a popular distrust in government methods, we have been forced to resort to force to fulfil our pledge. We have passed a conscription measure, and there seems to be no other way of providing 100,000 more soldiers except by its enforcement.

The passing of the conscription act has had a very disturbing effect upon public sentiment and the popular attitude towards further contribution of men to the overseas forces. Political disturbance has been created and a general national temper aroused that demands most prudent procedure to avoid most undesirable results. Conscription is by no means a popular thing; and to insure its application without undue friction and fuss, needs a power more popular than the present government; an authority inspiring more popular respect and promising more certainty of fair dealing than the present government inspires and promises. Weak leadership and consequent administrative inefficiency, if not consequent administrative scandal, requires that the new national government, demanded and obviously necessary, must be founded upon new and efficient leadership. A union government, such as proposed, will inevitably if not necessarily, include at least half of the elements that have made a mess of national affairs and the other half would represent ideals and antagonisms that under a superficial aspect of harmony, would contribute to a mutual distrust, that would militate against the singleness of sentiment and purpose essential to effective dealing with the most thorny problem of administration that has ever been presented for national solution.

If we are to have conscription enforced; if the disturbance of national harmony; if the dividing effects the actual national crisis, its enactment has created, are to have compensation its speedy enforcement is logically demanded.

It was declared necessary to meet an emergency. The emergency will not be met if we have the delay that would result from waiting till after a general election. Let the leaders of national thought and patriotism by merit and record, unite to join with the best elements of parliament in demanding a new deal—a new leader from inside or outside parliment, who will inspire the confidence of all parties; let him be intrusted with forming a government, truly national in character and ambition and policy—a government that will make the best of conscription and revolutionize party military and national administration as has been done in the creation of Britain's third war government—her win-the-war government, under a win-the-war leader.

Is it reasonable to suppose that, if Britain found it necessary to try three governments, Canada is to muddle along with the same government that has muddled matters for the past three years?

CRAZY CONGRATULATIONS.

Congratulations were issued by the German chiefs to their army in the Ypres neighbourhood. Thursday, after the British had advanced a couple of miles and taken 5,000 German prisoners.

German congratulations were in vogue during the battle of the Somme last year, in which the British and French captured 70,000 Germans, and in the battles of Champagne and the Aisne this spring, in which the Allies took about 70,000 more.

For a year now, the Germans on the western front have been feeling glad whenever they are not licked worse.—Ottawa Journal-Press.

Daylight Lake Trips

The C. & B. Line is again maintaining daylight service between Cleveland and Buffalo. These trips proved very popular last season, and this year promises even greater patronage.

From Cleveland, Steamer "CITY OF BUFFALO" leaves New East 9th Street Pier every Saturday during the summer season at 9.30 a.m., arriving at Buffalo 7.30 evening of same day.

From Buffalo, the Great Ship "SEE-AND-BEE" leaves wharves at South Michigan Street Bridge every Saturday at 9.30 a.m., reaching Cleveland at 7.30 p.m.

The night service will be the same as heretofore, namely: Steamers leave both cities daily at 9.00 p.m., reaching destination the following morning at 7.30. (All Eastern Time.)

Low fare excursions from Cleveland and Buffalo are given every Saturday, good returning Sunday.

A reduced automobile rate of $5.00 round trip is made for these week-end trips for cars not exceeding 127 inches wheel base.

PUBLIC OPINION

FLAG FLAPPING WON'T WIN.

(Brooklyn Eagle.)

A display of bunting is not enough—we must win by hard hitting, and not by bunting.

AUTOCRACY NOT FOR AMERICA

(Chicago Tribune.)

Certain results of German autocracy, we admit, have been excellent. It is undeniable that modern Germany has forged ahead industrially, commercially, and in many respects, socially at a rate unheard of before in the world's history. But at what cost! Autocracy made the war. By its control of press, pulpit, university, and the individual conscience, it made Germans applaud the war. By its conduct of the war it raised up foes the world over. And by its defense of its governmental ideals it has united democracies against autocracies till the one type of government or the other must vanish from the earth's surface. The longer Americans study the German system the more determined they are that it shall never rule America.

PUT A FEDERAL TAX ON PLEASURE CARS.

(Toronto Saturday Night.)

This country is fast becoming motor made. At a time when we preach economy a large proportion of our population is spending its surplus (when it is not running into debt) on joy riding. People are mortgaging their homes and their future solvency for the pleasure of owning motor cars. Clerks and salesmen, whose incomes would not average twelve or fifteen hundred per year, are putting themselves in the position of spending per annum at least one-third of this sum on gasoline and up-keep. The time was when the motor-car was considered the rich man's pleasure. It has now developed into the poor man's folly. Of course later on the whole country is going to suffer from this motoritis. The nest eggs which should be put into war bonds or other good securities out of the surplus which has come the way of most people through an extraordinary, and one may say, temporary, prosperity, brought about by the war, has largely gone into motor cars. The opportunity of a life time to accumulate a little something for the rainy day which is sure to come, is being dissipated in motors, repairs, tires, gasoline and oil.

It seems to me that the Finance Minister has in this motor craze, an excellent source of revenue which up to this time has been sadly neglected. A Federal tax on motor vehicles other than those used for commercial purposes, graded say from $25 per annum up, according to horse power, with a Federal tax of five or ten cents a gallon on gasoline and twenty or or twenty-five cents a gallon on oil used by pleasure cars, would be a thoroughly legitimate source of revenue and one which would bring in to the Federal treasury a substantial sum of money at a time when it is very badly needed. Surely if a man is able to sport around in a pleasure car in war time, he can afford to pay a considerable sum to the Federal government for the privilege. It may be pointed out that in the United States a special Federal tax is now being levied against motor pleasure vehicles, and we could not do better than follow their example.

AGE OF GENERALS.

(Southern Lumberman.)

General Pershing is in his fifty-seventh year—which is old for a fighter. Nearly all the great conquerors of history were under forty when they won their greatest victories, one exception being Julius Caesar, who was forty-four when he began the conquest of Gaul. The greatest general of antiquity was Hannibal, who was born in the year 247 B.C. At the age of twenty-five he became commander-in-chief of the Carthaginian forces and undertook his great march across the Alps in Italy. Frederick the Great won his first victory at the age of twenty-nine. Alexander the Great died at the age of thirty-three, after completing the conquest of the ancient world.

Coming down to modern times Robert Clive was thirty-two when he laid the foundation of Britain's Indian Empire by winning the battle of Plassey, in 1757. Napoleon was twenty-six when he conquered Italy. Many of the generals in our war between the states were young men, although the pictures look mature, because of the fierce whiskers which were in fashion at the time. Stonewall Jackson was thirty-nine when he lost his life at Chancellorsville. American generals now average fifty-two.

A LABOR LEADER'S FUR OVERCOAT.

(Pearson's Weekly.)

Mr. Will Thorne, the British Labor M.P., is pictured to-day by correspondents in Petrograd as standing in the Duma with a heavy fur-lined coat thrown over his arm. That explains two mysteries—as to Mr. Thorne's temporary "disappearance" from London and also as to an incident at Westminster, redounding to the generosity of Sir F. E. Smith, the Attorney-General.

The famous lawyer was walking in one of the archways of the House of Commons when he met Mr. Thorne. The Attorney-General was wearing a big overcoat richly lined with fur. It must have cost little less than $500.

The two men nodded, and Mr. Will Thorne, feeling with his fingers the warm thickness of the sleeve of the fur-lined overcoat, said:

"That's a nice coat, F.E."

"Yes; just the thing for cold weather. You are off on a long journey before long, Will"

"Yes; and I could just do with a coat like that," laughed the burly Labor leader, half jokingly.

"You shall have it," said F.E., and suiting the action of the word he whipped off the fur-lined overcoat and gave it to Mr. Thorne, who took it with many expressions of delight.

Peterborough's Prospects And Standing Fifty-Four Years Ago

W. H. Moore, K.C., Chairman of the City Trust Commission has left with the Examiner the following interesting document—"Exhibits of the Town of Peterborough, Canada West."

"The Commissioners of the Peterborough Town Trust," finding it necessary to negotiate, yearly, a limited number of Debentures of the Town of Peterborough, and hoping to be able to dispose of some of them in England, have caused the following brief synopsis to be drawn up, as well of the standing and financial condition of the town, as of the nature of the securities offered, for the information of persons in England who might feel disposed to purchase any of the securities. The subjoined account may be relied upon as containing nothing but what will be borne out upon investigation.

THE TOWN OF PETERBOROUGH, one of the most flourishing towns in the Province of Canada, is the Assize Town of the County of Peterborough, and is situated in Canada West, (or Upper Canada) twenty-five miles, in a direct line, from Lake Ontario, and between the cities of Kingston and Toronto. It is connected by a separate railroad, with each of the towns of Cobourg and Port Hope, both frontier towns on Lake Ontario, through both of which the "Grand Trunk" Railway passes. Peterborough, also, though twenty-seven miles distant, by railroad, from Lake Ontario, is a Port of Entry, and has its own Custom House.

The population of the town of Peterborough was, in 1860, by the census then taken, 3,900.—Through it runs the River Otonabee, which, for ten miles above the Town, has so much fall that it furnishes a succession of mill-powers the whole distance. Within three miles of the town there are, upon the river, nine first-class Saw Mills, five first-class Flour Mills, and a first-class Cloth Factory, besides a large number of smaller factories. In addition to this, Peterborough is the centre of an extensive and well settled agricultural country. In fact, taking into consideration all its varied resources and great local advantages, no town in the Province of Canada has better prospects.

Peterborough possesses, in her own right real property of considerable value, viz: A Market Square, in the centre of the town, containing two acres valued at £8,000, and a tract of land immediately adjoining the town on the south, containing sixty-five acres, valued at £3,000. Eight building lots on the Market Square, have been leased for twenty-one years each; and on each of these lots stands a handsome and substantial three storey brick building, yielding ground rent to the town. All this property is now held by the Commissioners of the Peterborough Town Trust, under the Act of Parliament consolidating the debt of the town, as security for the payment of that debt.

The assessed (which is considerably below the actual) value of all the real and personal property of the ratepayers of the town, for the present year, has been ascertained and fixed at £361,975.

To give an idea of the trade and business of the town, the imports for the year 1861 were estimtaed to be £150,000; and the exports, for the year 1860, when the census was taken, were estimated at £275,000. According to official returns from the Customs, for 1860, the invoice value of foreign goods imported into Peterborough during that year, was £27,172.

The debt of the town, which was contracted almost entirely to assist in constructing the railroad connecting the town with Port Hope and in building a large public school, was consolidated by Act of Parliament in 1861, and the payment thereof extended over a period of twenty years. And it may not be amiss here to mention that, in addition to the private property of the town, held, as above mentioned, by the Town Trust Commissioners, as security for the payment of the consolidated debt of the town, all the property of individuals, within the limits of the corporation of the town of Peterborough, whether real or personal, is answerable therefor. This is mentioned merely to show how ample is the security for the payment of the town debentures, and it will be seen, on reference to the sixth section of the act consolidating the debt of the town, how stringent is the law enacted for the purpose of enforcing, annually, the raising of the means to provide for the payment of the securities of the town.

The debentures of the town are for four hundred dollars (£160 Cy.) each, payable in five, ten, or fifteen years, with coupons attached, for interest, at the rate of six per cent., payable half-yearly. They are usually made payable in Canadian currency, at the Bank of Montreal here, but they could, to suit the convenience of any intending holder in England be made payable, in Sterling, at some bank there.

Dated 20th October, 1862.

Commissioners:

C. BRADFIELD, Chairman.
JAMES STEVENSON.
WILLIAM HALL.
EDMUND CHAMBERLEN.
SAMUEL DICKSON.
IVAN O'BEIRNE, Secretary.

DEATH TO AMERICANS WHO RESIST DRAFT

Penalty Clearly Indicated Following Disclosures in Three States.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6.— Death is to be the penalty for forcibly resisting the draft. This was clearly indicated in a statement made public by Provost Marshal General Crowder in regard to the draft disorders in Oklahoma, Georgia and North Carolina.

Such resistance will be construed as desertion in time of war; the entire military and civil power of the Government and the civil power of the States will be employed to apprehend these deserters and bring them before court-martial, which, under the law, must inflict the extreme penalty if the men are found guilty. Only the President can save the convicted man from punishment.

NO DECREASE FOR REVERTING

Separation Allowances and Pensions of Officers Are To Be Unaffected.

OTTAWA, August —An amendment to the order in Council dated August 19, 1916, which provided that the separation allowances and pensions of officers of the Canadian Expeditionary Force who reverted to the ranks on their arrival in England in order to get to the front should not be decreased, was tabled in the Commons.

GOVT. ACQUIRES C.N.R. LAND.

About 800,000 Acres Will be Involved in the Handing Over.

OTTAWA, Aug. 3.—Canadian Northern Railway land holdings under the nationalisation scheme, remain nominally under the railway, but really belong to the Government. They are in the same position as any other interest of the C.N.R., such as the telegraph, elevator and express companies. The corporate identity of the road is to be maintained.

"We will have the stock of the corporation," explained the Solicitor-General. The meaning of this is, that the Government will, by acquiring the stock, acquire what the stock represents; in other words, it will own the land, and other assets. About 800,000 acres are owned by the C.N.R.

The new system to be taken over comprises 9,513 miles under operation, located as follows: In Nova Scotia ,370 miles; in Quebec, 685; in Ontario, 2,022; in Minnesota, 215; in Manitoba, 1,986; in Saskatchewan, 2,320; Alberta, 1,286; British Columbia, 540.

Following is the last summary of equipment of the C.N.R.; locomotives, 744; sleeping and dining cars, 118; passenger coaches, 636; baggage, mail and express cars, 183; business cars, 19; freight, refrigerator and stock cars, 20,745; conductors' vans, 468; auxiliary cars, steam shovels, etc., 1,479.

Death Penalty Helped Greatly

And the Authority of Officers is Still Unrecognized in the Field.

London, August 6.—The Times correspondent on the Russian southwestern front writes under date of August 1:

"The improvement of the morale of our armies is far from substantial, unless the whole political situation undergoes a prompt and complete change. It would be wrong to indulge in optimistic views with reliefs coming up slowly from the interior only to provide poor material. The authority of the officers still is unrecognized owing to the maintenance of army committees. The death penalty helped greatly but this only is the first step, the effect of which will be diminished unless a strong government appears with will power to place the interests of the country above a party programme. The conference proceeding at the Petrograd and Moscow headquarters afford scant hope. This is evident in that the majority of persons engaged therein show little comprehension of the magnitude of the issue confronting us.

The so-called revolutionary armies have opened a front for the enemy to yak in and the railway men have struck work at a critical moment when everything depends on the prompt removal of property. In the rear within sound of the guns of the invaders our peasants are robbing the fields, harvesting grain that does not belong to them. The army staff is best with requests from farmers to afford them protection.

to discharge, and the sacrifices it has been necessary for them to make. During these three years we have witnessed the departure of some of our best and bravest men; we have followed their careers abroad, even to the grave; we have passed through dark days, many of them; we have read of reverses and of death and slaughter; we watched the gruelling retreat from Mons those glorious, but terrible actions at Ypres, Mes Julien, La Courcellette, Vimy, Messines Ridge, and scores of other places; sorrow and sadness have come to our homes and yet I say that on this anniversary our first thought should be one of thanksgiving to God, thanksgiving that our cause is as bright as it really is; thanksgiving that England and France unprepared, were able to withstand the first onslaught of the enemy; that they held him until reinforcements arrived; that they have been able during the past three years to do what Germany had taken fifty years in preparing; that to-day our armies are more than a match for the German legions; that our cause is brighter and more hopeful than ever before; that the enemy is gradually but surely being driven back; in a word, that victory is certain.

SECOND SENTIMENT.

Our second sentiment to-day should be one of gratitude to our soldiers, those brave fellows who went in three years ago. They went from the Motherland and from every colony over which the British flag flies. They have done wonders. The vast majority of them, peaceful civilians three years ago, became in a few weeks the most daring and courageous of soldiers; they met the most carefully trained enemy and army ever met; they held him; they saved the situation, and to-day they have him on the defensive.

Brave Men.

In this wonderful achievement many have made the supreme sacrifice; they have gone down to glorious death. May their souls rest in peace, and may they enjoy the reward promised to those who lay down their lives for their brethren. Let us revere their memories and let us keep their names in everlasting remembrance, for they died that we might live. Others of these brave men of stout heart and determined purpose, prepared, if necessary, to lay down their lives, have returned from the battle front, bruised, wounded and scarred by shot and shell. We have many of them with us to-night. Look at them. They are brave men. They are worthy of our admiration and gratitude. I am satisfied they have both. Let our good dispositions towards them be manifested in the deep, kind and sympathetic interest we will always take in the returned soldier.

Another Class.

There remains yet another class of our citizen army. It is composed of the fortunate but hardly fellows who for months yes for years, have been battling at the front to beat back the hordes that threatened the civilization of Europe and the world. Oh, let us not be indifferent toward them. Let us not leave them unsupported. We owe them and the cause we are fighting for the very best we have in men and money. Let us then interest ourselves as best we can and may in supplying the needed reinforcements.

Ladies and gentlemen, to-day we begin the fourth year of the war. God grant that it be the last. Let us begin it with confidence and determination—confidence in the justice and righteousness of the cause we are supporting; confidence in the God of armies, that when the end of the war does come, it will bring victory to Britain and her allies, and let us be determined to bend every energy to do our part as citizens of a free country, as a people who value liberty as a priceless boon, as a people who are prepared to sacrifice every thing in the defence of justice and right.

JUDGE HUYCKE

In his opening remarks, His Honour Judge Huycke urged those present to consider and give effect to the resolution. "That resolution has not been prepared in vain," said the speaker. We submit it to you for more than your approval. We expect you to act upon it during the coming year. The war is still on and I regret to say although I have the utmost confidence in the outcome, I cannot close my eyes to the fact that on this, the third anniversary of the war, we have not much to feel happy about. I have no hesitation in saying that the outlook one year ago to-day was more promising than to-day. One year ago the British were prosecuting to a successful issue the battle of the Somme. The French forces were successfully repelling the unparalleled attacks on Verdun. In the East the Russians were driving back the hordes of Austrians while the Italians were conducting a successful drive in the Trentino.

HAVE WAR VICTORIES.

"Compare that with the situation as it stands to-day," said Judge Huycke. "It is true that during the past year the British have won victory after victory."

The speaker recalled the memorable attacks made by the Canadians on the Ypres front, also the battle of Corcelette, where the Canadian troops not only attained the objective, but went on past it. Out of one battalion of one thousand men only one hundred and fifty answered the roll call. By the side of that battalion fought the 22nd French-Canadian battalion. Many of the boys of the 18th battalion thanked God for the presence on their left of the French-Canadians. They only found one fault and that was there was not enough of them. "I hope they will remedy that before long," said Judge Huycke.

BETTER PREPARED.

"The British may be better prepared than they were one year ago," said the speaker. On the other hand the French, although fighting bravely are bled white to-day. They are holding their own with set teeth and will hold their own. Italy has not reached her objective and the saddest of all is the situation on the Russian front, where we find the country in the throes of a revolution. We must not paint too black a picture of that. If we are correctly informed, the old regime would have eventually led the Russian Empire into a separate peace.

THE UNITED STATES.

"Every cloud has a silver lining, said His Honour." Continuing he said, "I thank the God of Gods that the United States has gone into the war. They are in it right up to the neck. There has been some ill-feeling in the past between the two countries. Some people have tried to pull the eagle's tail and pinch the lion's tail, but this will all be over. All differences will be submerged in one common and righteous cause."

NO EXEMPTIONS.

In conclusion, Judge Huycke urged those present to seriously consider the resolution. "We all have to serve, remarked the speaker. There will be no exemptions to the people of Peterborough, man, woman or child. If there are any elections during the year, municipal or otherwise, care not what a man's creed or colour may be, but for God's sake elect a man who is in it right up to the neck. The fourth year of the war will be more serious than any of the past three. We will have food regulations and you and I will suffer more than ever before. We must win this war or go under." His Honour closed by seconding the resolution.

A GLOOMY PICTURE.

"I am sorry His Honour Judge Huycke painted such a gloomy picture observed Captain J. H. Burnham M.P., upon rising to speak. "It must be the absence of light which has obscured the vision, jocularly remarked Captain Burnham, referring to the darkened bandstand, resulting from a defective fuse.

"Britain has undisputed supremacy on the seas and that is four-fifths of the world," said the Federal member. Changing the subject, Captain Burnham announced that Major R. P. Watt and Captain C. Leech, had notified the Adjutant-General that they were willing to accompany the next draft overseas in any capacity whatever, from a private up. "They have caught the spirit of the second going," commented the speaker. Referring to Conscription, Captain Burnham said, "Conscription is not the word and should never have been used. Conscription is compulsion; Military Service Bill is the word. It means selective draft. The speaker outlined the operation of the bill. "When you hear of conscription it has been given its vilest name," said Captain Burnham.

THE RESOLUTION.

The resolution, so ably proposed, and seconded by His Lordship the Bishop and His Honour Judge Huycke, will be taken by the loyal people of the City and County of Peterborough as their well expressed opinions at the end of the third year of the war. Loyalty to one's country means that when that country calls for its people to rise and fight for and maintain it, and all that it stands for, they will do so. We cannot halt between two opinions. We must say either that we will help or that will not help. We must, of course, leave it to parliament, our agents and rulers for the time being to say who are fit to go and shall go and who are not fit and shall not be called upon; who are required at home to help maintain the army in the field, and who are not. All those, however, who wish to be let alone, disregard not only the safety of the state, but their own safety as well and really condemn those who have gone for having done so.

BELGIUM'S FATE.

Shall we leave Belgium to cease to be a nation and to be swallowed up by Germany, asked the speaker. If so, that might well be our fate some day. We might as well be asked if we would stand idly by and see others drown or starve. We must bow to the stern and dreadful necessity of the case. There is no way out if we are to be true men and women, and prepared to do our duty. We must also remember that if we should desert others they might in like case, desert us. Who, if we did so, would ask the United States, as some have said, to help us? We must not be quitters. Life has its grave responsibilities as well as its joys. It is true that some people think more of themselves than of their duty to others, and sometimes it is necessary for the state-parent to give a medicine which is refused. The public opinion of Canada must be allowed to judge of that. Every man and every woman should place themselves at their country's disposal when their country calls. Let there be a clear call from the country and who will refuse? This brings us to the offer of Quebec. Both Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Sir Lomer Gouin have offered, on behalf of the French Canadian people, to obey Conscription if the voice of the people of Canada declares for it. This seems to be, then, the only constitutional way out of a most serious and dangerous difficulty.

SHOULD NOT DELAY.

Our Government should not delay another day in asking Canada to declare its wish. It should, perhaps, have been done long ago, said Capt. Burnham. The irresistible opinion of the Canadian people would then admit of no denial, and those who propose to govern without it blindly ignore the one great constitutional remedy for all our present ills and short-comings. But what, some of you say, if the result of the vote should be adverse? Terrible as that would be, who is there amongst you who proposes to enforce a measure contrary to the expressed will of the people? Who would be get to enforce it? What would be the result? Not only failure, but hopeless disaster and national ruin. But some again say, will you place the fate of Canada in the hands of our foreign vote. The answer again is plain. The Allies will not allow a man of alien birth from Canada or elsewhere to set foot upon the battleground. No such man can be employed in a military way. If, therefore, aliens cannot be conscripted, they must not be allowed to conscript others, and whilst not deprived of their electoral rights, in other matters, as citizens of Canada, who would say that it is unfair to ask them to forego their franchise in this one case? It is doubtful if one loyal man in Canada of alien origin would, under these circumstances, object.

MR. CHAS. COLEMAN SAW FOUR AIR RAIDS IN ENGLAND

Has Returned After a Year's Engagement at Woolwich Arsenal —Ship Chased by Subs On Home Voyage.

RECEIVED REMINISCENCES

Mr. Charles Coleman arrived yesterday in the city, after a year's absence in England, where he was connected with the arsenal in Woolwich He was called home to attend to his business in town.

Mr. Coleman while doing his bit in the munition work, was actively interested in social work and was one of the much abused shop stewards in the recent engineering strike at Woolwich.

Presentation on Leaving.

On leaving the arsenal Mr. Coleman was presented with three beautiful silver loving cups and a handsome silver cigarette case with an inscription expressing the high esteem in which he was held by the Margate football club, of which he was president and of his shopmates in the field gun section of the Royal Gun Factory, Woolwich.

Saw Zepps Brought Down.

Mr. Coleman's visit to England has been a chain of interesting experiences. He has seen four Zepps brought down and was a spectator of the raid of July 7th. "I had," he said, "retired in the morning coming off a night shift in the arsenal, and at ten o'clock heard a cry of excitement, and the words 'Here they are like birds!'" I immediately dressed and to my surprise right over my head appeared what reminded he of a triangular flight of birds, one leading the flock. Suddenly a cheer arose as an aeroplane dropped to the ground. This however proved to be a British plane winged by the hostile squadron. The squadron hovered over the city for some time having apparently as their objective the destruction of St. Paul's, the Abbey, London bridge, and the Arsenal, as when the signal for firing was given bombs were dropped in their imediate vicinity." Little damage was done to any of these places and the reports of casualties were pretty correct. Mr. Coleman was struck by the perfect order and lack of panic amongst the women who gathered their little ones cooly together and made for shelter. The men appeared to be much more excited than the women.

Social Work.

Mr. Coleman's social work has led him into some interesting experiences and acquaintances, and an interesting list of correspondents, including Sir Robert Borden, Mr. Barnes, and Mr. Hodge.

The last function he attended in England was a meeting at Woolwich at which Sir Wm. Robertson came to speak, and was not given a chance. Mr. Coleman has accomplished a great deal in social work of which he is not prepared at present to speak.

Mr. Coleman was present at the inspection of the troops on Dominion Day by the King. He also heard Rev. Mr. Campbell, late pastor of the City Temple, now a convert to the Church of England, preach at the Abbey the only sermon on the "Unity of Christendom" he had yet heard.

The Voyage Home.

The voyage home of the ship on which Mr. Coleman returned, took three weeks. On leaving Liverpool on July 20th, she was detained for a week within sight of Ireland, after which she was chased by subs on several occasions. Altogether to avoid subs the ship went 182 miles out of her usual course.

The passengers on the ship included a marine band en route for Esquimalt, Rev. Father B. F. Kingsley, returning from Rome to Lindsay, and Mr. H. A. Fricker, who has come to take charge of the Mendelssohn choir and to succeed Dr. Vogt. Of Mr. Fricker, Mr. Coleman made a warm personal friend, who he describes as a man of the highest type.

Food Plentiful.

The food problem is not so serious as is supposed. Mr. Coleman said that he saw no scarcity of any thing except luxuries, which are absolutely foregone.

The best record in golf is the record she has made of restored health to the middle-aged.

MR. G. A. GILLESPIE.

Mr. G. A. Gillespie M.P.P. who was the next speaker heartily concurred in the wording of the resolution. He promised to do all in his power to aid in bringing the issue to a successful conclusion. The speaker referred to the win-the-war convention which was held in Toronto and the fact that the leaders of two political parties appeared on the same platform united in one common purpose. "The veterans who are with us to-night must be impressed with the solemnity of the resolution, said Mr. Gillespie. We must enter the fourth year of the war feeling more determined than ever to bend every energy towards bringing the war to a successful close, said the speaker at the conclusion of a brief address.

Lieut.-Col. J. Mills followed with a resolution authorized by the Peterborough Great War Veterans' Association which called for the speedy enforcement of the military service bill. Col. Mills recalled some of the experiences of the 1st contingent of which the speaker was a member and the fact that the British are to-day fighting over the same ground that the Canadians contested in that memorable battle of Ypres in April 1915. Referring to the Military Service Bill, Col. Mills said, "It is not conscription, it is the proper selection of the men who should go."

SERGT. VICTOR.

"I want to vary the programme a little, said Sergt. Victor, a returned soldier and a member of the Association who was called on to second the resolution presented by Col. Mills. You have just heard able and eloquent speakers and now you will have a chance to hear me. A change will be good for you. I was asked to voice the opinions of the Peterborough Great War Veterans, which I intend to do. But I claim more. If I voice the opinion of the returned men I also speak for the men who are yet to return and the men who never will return. I fancy I hear some one say I claim too much, but no matter where you go you will not find any body of men or institution where the comradeship is greater than that which exists among the soldiers. This is all the more wonderful when you take into consideration that these same soldiers were taken from all walks of life.

AN AUTHORITY.

"When you want to know anything about the war you ask the returned man, continued Sergt. Victor. You ask the returned man when you are packing that box to send to some loved one at the front and you are at a loss what to put in the parcel. The returned soldier has come to be regarded as an authority on the needs of the men in the trenches. It is because these men know what is wanted by their comrades in the trenches that makes them so whole heartedly in favour of conscription. There is still a class of people who fear conscription as a measure which will take away their liberty. They regard it as something that is forced upon them. Let me tell you it is the voluntary system that is to be feared most. It is the voluntary system that takes away the sixteen-year-old boy and leaves the young man of twenty-five at home to play pool. It is the voluntary system that takes the married man." In conclusion, Sergt. Victor made an appeal to the few returned men who have not yet joined the Great War Veterans' Association, to do so in a sense of duty. It not only helps the returned men but the men still fighting in the trenches so that at the close of the war there will have been created a large and well conducted organization to hand over to the soldiers when they come marching home.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

Dear Sir,—I would like to make a few comments upon the arrangements of last night's splendid meeting in Victoria Park, to show up and express my disgust at the way it was carried out.

A lasting disgrace to Peterborough (the Electric City) were the three oil lamps that did their best to show to the large gathering of patriotic Peterborough citizens the splendid heroes that are returned from the front, and also such men as Judge Huycke and others, who, when they speak, they deserve to be seen as well as heard, and when one cannot see, it is hard to listen.

Let us hope that when we meet to welcome home our boys, when the war is over, there will be some illumination, as they are worth being looked at, and we shall need it to show up the slackers that have done nothing.

(Signed) "One Who Was There."

Memorial Service For Young Curate

Rev. Frank Andrews Was Drowned at Orillia While Swimming

Toronto, August 6. — An impressive service in memory of the late Rev. Frank Andrews, curate of the Church of the Messiah, whose drowned body was recovered at Orillia on Saturday, was held last evening in the Church of the Messiah.

His Lordship, the Rt. Rev. Bishop Sweeny, preached from the text: — "What I do thou knowest not now, but thou shalt know hereafter." After reviewing the career of the young clergyman and the events leading up to his death Bishop Sweeny declared that under such circumstances one is inclined to ask why such things happen. The text teaches God's children that they must not attempt to understand such mysteries now. His Lordship likened the questioning of this unfortunate happening to the questioning of a father by his child. Revelations would come to the child, not all at once, but slowly as the child grew to maturity. The words of the text are as a check to the too curious and should strengthen faith. Now we see through a glass darkly, but later we shall see face to face; now we know in part but then we shall know in full. At the conclusion of the ceremony the Dead March in Saul was played.

Rev. Mr. Andrews was a native of England, 28 years of age, and a recent graduate of Wycliffe College. He went to Orillia on Tuesday last as the guest of Rev. S. A. S. Selwyn of Toronto. He left Mr. Selwyn's cottage about 10 a.m. on Wednesday and rowed out to the lake. He was wearing a bathing suit. It is presumed he dived from the boat, and the boat drifted so that he was unable to swim to it. So far as is known Rev. Mr. Andrews had no relatives in Canada.

AN ULTIMATUM TO THE TEUTONS

Argentina Gives Certain Time For Clear and Final Reply.

BUENOS AIRES, Aug. 6.—Dissatisfied with the progress of negotiations with Germany growing out of the sinking of the Argentine steamer Toro, the Argentine Government has broken off the discussions that were being conducted with the German Minister here, and has sent a final, categorical note to Berlin requiring a clear and final reply to the Argentine demands within a reasonable time. The reply is expected within eight days. During this time it will be decided if relations with Germany shall be broken if the response from the German Foreign Office is a negative one.

"Carry On," Is Command To All Canadians

Tremendous Sale of Pure Bred Cattle Throughout Ontario

"Carry on" is the advice of Professor Day, of the O.A.C., to the live-stock breeder, and the tremendous sale of pure breds of late throughout Ontario is an indication that his advice is being closely followed. The Canadian National Exhibition is preparing for one of the best live stock exhibits in its long history. Sheds destroyed by fire a year ago have been replaced and an effort has been made to ensure of a most representative exhibit of all breeds. An unusually large attendance of buyers from the United States and Canada is looked for, and the expectations are they will have a superb collection of herd and flock builders to choose from. In no previous year was so much importance attached to the live stock display, and never before was such an effort made to get out the best the country affords.

Foe Will Try Hard To Regain Bagdad

GENEVA, Aug. 6.—The Germans and Turks are preparing to make a great sacrifice to regain Bagdad, according to the Secolo of Rome. Gen. von Falkenhayn, who commanded the Austro-German armies in Roumania last year, has arrived at Constantinople to take command of the forces now being assembled. Four Turkish divisions from Dobrudjia and Turkish troops from Thrace are being concentrated at the Turkish capital. Austria is supplying the heavy artillery and Germany is furnishing the officers.

The officers, the papersays, will take place in the middle of September.

PERSHING CONFIDENT OF COMPLETE VICTORY

LONDON, Aug. 6.—The London Sunday Times has received the following telegram from General Pershing, dated Paris, Aug. 4:

"The spirit and morale of the Allied armies are splendid, and the general situation is better than at the beginning of any other year of the war. The Allies should look forward with full confidence to a complete victory.

"John J. Pershing."

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6.—Being Mayor of a city is 'no business" for a real newspaper man, Arthur Brisbane's Washington Times, advises William Randolph Hearst in its leading editorial Saturday afternoon.

Mr. Brisbane offers his counsel on the premise that the Democrats and Independents in New York city want William Randolph Hearst to accept the nomination for the mayoralty.

Revolt In Oklahoma Against Draft Law

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Aug. 6.—Indulging in a dream of revolution and resisting the draft law, at least half a dozen armed bands of tenant farmers, half-breed Indians and negroes are running rampant throughout five counties in East Central Oklahoma to-day.

Reports placed the number of re sisters variously at 500 to 1,500.

Authorities, following clashes last night, declared the situation was well in hand.

Young Hubby Prefers Navy To Sentence

KANSAS CITY, Mo.—When Randall Jones, 16 years old, of 822 East Fourteenth street, took unto himself a wife in the person of 15-year-old Emily Hart of 3218 Perry avenue last May, he did not know what trouble he was piling up for himself. Because, while the youthful Mrs. Jones was, no doubt, worth her weight in gold in sentimental valuation she was the innocent cause of a series of difficulties from which her young husband has had a hard time of extricating himself.

TRIED TO FALSE SWEARING.

First, the eager bridegroom-to-be committed perjury by swearing himself to be 21 years old to get his marriage license at Liberty. Then his parents took him away from his bride. Next thing he knew the law had taken him away from his parents because he couldn't support his young wife, whose mother decided that if her daughter was worth anything at all to a husband she was at least worth her keep.

The young husband's parents still refusing to assume their son's responsibility for his wife's board bill, the Criminal court at Liberty took cognisance of the perjured marriage license and the boy went to trial for false swearing, which brought him two years in the reformatory.

PARENTS ARE OBDURATE.

The parents of both were obdurate and the law was about to take its final course when the youth took matters into his own hands, with the same determination that led him to get his marriage license in the first place. His wife, in name only, agreed that she'd wait faithfully while he went to war, declaring that she always did like sailor boys, anyway, so young Jones yesterday asked the court to parole him that he might enlist in the navy. Which the court did. The 15-year-old Mrs. Jones is with her parents, and when she is asked if she'll be waiting when her young husband returns from the wars, her black eyes sparkle and she says:

"Watch me."

ANOTHER PROPHECY HAS BEEN PUNCTURED

There has been received from B. V. Edwards, 302 Clifton Ave., Newark, N.J., a copy of a 50-page booklet in which it is proved beyond doubt, by a wealth of scriptural quotations, that Christ will come again to-day, (4th August) and the end of the present system will be brought about. Here is the somewhat startling announcement on the cover page:

"Jesus is coming again.
"On August Fourth.
"Heavens on fire.
"The agony of Hell.
"Death everywhere.
"All business ends.
"The end of the war.
"Rivers dried up.
"All crops dried up.
"All things destroyed.
"Three days darkness.
"Earthquakes everywhere.
"Resurrection of Saints.
"Devil appears on earth.
"On August Seventh.
"Forty days warning.
"Temple rebuilt at Jerusalem.
"On September Sixteenth.
"At 11.06 New York time
"Every child caught away.
"Every Saint caught away.
"World confederacy begins."

Saturday the world was still doing business at the old stand and the day began and ended much the same as August 4th has come, and gone since Adam first appeared in the Garden of Eden.

INQUEST WAS ADJOURNED

LINDSAY, Aug. 6.—The adjourned coroner's inquest to enquire into the death of William Brown, who met death at the Dominion Arsenal some weeks ago, was resumed Friday night before Coroner Dr. F. Blanchard, to hear the remaining witnesses, who through injuries received could not give testimony previously. It was found on meeting that one of the principals witnesses, Mr. Stinson, was still in the hospital and unable to attend.

Alex. Black, who was shocked by the explosion at the time Brown was killed, gave evidence which gave some information as to where the deceased was a few minutes previous to the explosion and that he saw him carrying an oblong box in one hand. He did not see the box drop. He was knocked down by the concussion and lost his hearing for a time.

The witness stated that orders were given by Mr. McKeown, and that he had on previous occasions, when doing the work which Brown had been engaged upon, carried the explosives to the drying room in the evening. He had been duly warned of the nature of the explosive and the care that he should exercise in handling it.

Col. Weatherbie was recalled to give evidence and Mr. McKeown, a foreman, but their testimony was only of a corroborative nature.

The inquest was therefore adjourned to Tuesday, August 14th, at 1.30 o'clock a.m. when the jurors will meet at the Ross Hospital to hear the evidence of Gordon Stinson. The latter, on information from his physician, will not be able to leave the hospital for several weeks, and it will be about that date before he is sufficiently recuperated to give his deposition.

POISONED COURT PLASTER.

Second Batch in U. S. is Found to Contain Germs of Tetanus.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6.—Court plaster forwarded to the public health service by the Ohio State Board of Health has been found on an analysis by the Hygieno Laboratory to contain tetanus germs. Surgeon General Blue has bought other samples in the open market for analysis to determine if the contamination exists generally.

This is the second batch of court plaster found to contain the germs of lockjaw. Some officials suspect German sympathizers. It is pathologically possible, however, that court plaster sold by peddlers might take tetanus germs from street dust.

WAR CONDITIONS ARE NOT AS FAVOURABLE AS THREE YEARS AGO

Well Known War Reviewer's Opinion Coincides With That Expressed by His Honour Judge Huycke at the Mass Meeting Held Last Evening—Military Outlook Compared With That Which Existed Twelve Months Ago.

REVIEW OF THE WAR

(By W. R. Plewman, Toronto Star's War Reviewer.)

Looked at from a purely military standpoint and having reference only to the apparent relative strength of the armies in the field and their position on the war map, it cannot be said that we enter the fourth year of the war under as favourable conditions as those obtaining at the beginning of the third year of the war. Before we look at other factors that enter into the situation, let us briefly compare to-day's military outlook with that which existed twelve months ago. Then, the allies in Western Europe had defeated, with fearful slaughter, the great German offensive at Verdun, and were threatening to break the German lines at the Somme, their attack in that region having been in progress for a month. On the south-western front the Italians had thrown back a dangerous assault on atheir Trentino lines. In Eastern Europe the Russians were just completing the greatest successes the allies yet have gained in the war, and it was plain that Roumania was about to join them in attacking the seemingly exhausted Austro-Hungarian Empire. On the Macedonian front there was a prospect of rapid improvement as a result of Roumanian forces driving southward in conjunction with a move of the allies north-eastward from Salonika. On the whole there was reasonable ground for the expectation that by the end of 1917 the allies would have well thrashed the enemy.

The Rumanian Disaster.

What what do we find Instead of launching a safe and effective campaign down the Black Sea coast of Bulgaria, the Rumanians accepted lying assurances from the Bulgars that they would not attack and ventured on a mad invasion of Austria-Hungary across the mountains. The four enemy nations then combined in an attack on Rumania, which resulted in that small power, separated from effective allied help, being crushed. This eliminated all possibility of a tremendous victory being gained on the Macedonian front, but did not seriously affect the general situation nor warrant a tittle of the pessimism to which it gave rise. We still had reason to hope that a simultaneous offensive by the British, French, Italians and Russians would result in an advance on all fronts during 1917, and bring some if not all of the enemy nations to the point of collapse. The realization of our hopes appeared to be brought nearer when the Germans in March confessed their comparative weakness on the western front, by ordering the evacuation of 1500 square miles of French territory, although without any definite plans for great offensives against the Russians or Italians.

The one development that shattered allied expectations, and the collapse of Russia's offensive power in the spring of 1917 as the result of a revolution. The overthrow of the Romanoffs was affected with little bloodshed and might have been a decided advantage to the allied cause, had practical reformers firmly taken control of the excited nation, for the pro-German element at the court appears already to have persuaded the Czar to agree to siging a separate peace. But unfortunately the ignorant masses in their joy at securing their liberties literally threw their arms around the necks of their enemies, released criminals and went to other extremes that would appear ludicrous were it not for the tragic consequences.

The Collapse of Russia.

The military situation confronting us to-day shows the Austro-German forces beginning an invasion of Southern Russia and Northern Rumania, after expelling the Russians from 10,000 square miles of Austrian soil, and possibly not one will be found on Rumanian soil. In Eastern Europe no allied troops are on German soil and in all Europe, the only enemy territory occupied by the allies is a small slice of north-eastern Galacia, a thirty mile strip, ten miles wide, of German Alsace immediately north of the Swiss boundary, and a fringe of Austrian territory along the Italian border. The Italians captured strong positions on both sides of that place that should materially assist them in an advance on Trieste and Laiback. But their splendid offensive resulted in counter-attacks that were hard to repulse in which the enemy took nearly as many prisoners as those taken in the Italian advance. In Macedonia the allies have possession of Monastir as the result of victories last fall, and in a month or two they may be greatly strengthened by the co-operation of a considerable Greek army. Unfortunately there is only a slim chance that the allied forces on this front will have valuable assistance from the Russo-Rumania forces in the north side of Bulgaria. Only in the western front have the allies secured a decided superiority over the enemy and that is most apparent on the British front. During the last two months of the war the enemy made ceaseless attacks against the French who, like himself, are now unable to maintain their armies at full force. But as the enemy if he cares can safely send many divisions from the eastern to the western front, we cannot count on the ability of the western allies to break through the German lines or force them back to the German frontier or the Meuse River during 1917.

The Situation Summed Up.

Fortunately the position of the rival armies and even the apparent vigor of the armies on the firing line, is not the only nor the best indication as to our approach to victory. The morale of the nations and their supplies of manpower, war materials, and money, are even more vital factors. And this appears to be a fair summing up of the situation at the end of three years of war:

Germany, the mainstay of the enemy combination, is seriously exhausted after three years of war with nations superior in numbers and resources. The other three nations in the combination are war weary and insistent that advances be made for peace. In a last desperate effort to gain victory Germany resorted to unlimited submarine frightfulness, but the effect failed and has brought into the war a new belligerent having almost unlimited resources in men, money and material, whose might will begin to be felt in the summer of 1918. This is an alarming development because the manpower of Austria-Hungary is so used up that Germany, already unable to carry on an offensive campaign gainst a strong foe, and in a shocking financial condition, has to provide an ever-increasing number of men for the defence of the dual Empire and hundreds of millions of dollars to keep Bulgaria and Turkey in the field. Instead she henceforth may have to hire the armies of Bulgaria and Turkey instead of merely advancing money to those countries in the form of loans. The German people no longer look for victory and are so tired of the miseries of war that they have not the heart to jubilate over successes at the front. They are beginning to understand that Germany autocracy planned the war, that their armies in the west are barely able to keep the allies at bay and that the surest way of gaining an early peace is to assert control of the German Government. They view with apprehension the approach of another winter of war because of the shortage of foodstuffs at home and of leather boots and woolen clothing for themselves and their friends in the army. Contrasted with the low state of morale in all the enemy nations France, though tired shows dauntless resolution; Britain is at the zenith of her military power; Italy is still strong and the United States has not even exerted herself in the actual dealing of a blow. Owing to the co-operation of America it is certain that valuable supplies of foodstuffs and iron for munitions that were reaching the enemy will be cut off during the next few months. Should Russia master herself sufficiently to render effective military assistance to the Allies the resistance of the enemy promises to collapse next year. But in any case the allies are likely to materially improve the military situation during the fourth year of the war and particularly in Belgium and France.

AUHORS OF WAR GO DOWN.

Among the striking developments of the third year of the war have been the removal from office of nearly all the statesmen who brought about the war. The Chancellor of Germany and the Premiers of Austria and Hungary, all hate been scrapped. The German and Austrian commanders-in-chief also have been superseded. A young emperor now rules in the place of Francis Joseph, and is working ardently for a war settlement. Bulgaria is less disposed to fight on, now that despotism has been overthrown in Russia. On the allied side of the Premiers of Britain and France have given way to men who are qualified to secure better results and a new generalissimo directs the French armies. The capture of Kut and Bagdad has dampened Germany's aspirations eastward, as the battle of the Marne thwarted the German ambitions westward, as the enemy never had a firmer grip on that other dear project of his, the creation of a Mittle Europe. The Allies must persist in their efforts not only until their territories have been evacuated by the enemy and reparation has been secured by the devastated allied areas, but until the hegemony of Europe has been wrested out of German hands. The greatest danger to the allied cause to-day is not the Teutonic war machine, but the effort being made by the foe to create dissension between them and to induce them to stop short of their objectives when the goal is in full sight.

"The majority of people eat too much anyway," said Miss Eddie, professor of Household Science at the Manitoba Agricultural College, when discussing the Canadian Food Controller's suggestion that hotels and restaurants institute two meatless days per week. "And limiting hotel menus to two or three courses is a fine idea."

Gave Up His Trade After Forty Years

"Tanlac Beats Anything I Have Ever Taken" Says Brown—Gained Twelve Pounds

"There's bound to be something unusual about Tanlac to make a man my age gain twelve pounds and feel like a young man again," said C. H. Brown, a few days ago. Mr. Brown has been a resident of Hamilton for forty-seven years and lives at 248 Main street. For forty years of his time he was a glass blower, and according to his statement, he was forced, on account of ill health, to resign his position with the Dominion Glass Company, where he had been employed for twenty years.

"For four or five years," he continued, "I had suffered with rheumatism and was generally run-down in health. My appetite was so poor I seldom wanted anything to eat and I just kept falling off in weight. I was so dizzy when I tried to work I would almost fall, and my legs pained me so bad I couldn't stand up long at a time. I was so nervous and miserable I could hardly sleep, and actually I never had a good night's rest in four years until Tanlac strightened me out. No other medicine ever seemed to do me any good and I got in such a bad fix I had to give up the work I had been doing for forty years and try to find relief.

"I had lost faith in all medicines because I had been disappointed so many times, but when I read how Tanlac was helping so many people here I decided to try it, and now I can truthfully say it is all that others claim for it. When I first started on it I weighed only one hundred and thirty-three pounds. I now weigh one hundred and forty-five—have actually gained twelve pounds—and that certainly seems remarkable for a man sixty-nine years of age. I really feel almost as good as I did when I was thirty, and believe I could stand regular work again. All the pain has gone out of my legs and I can stand on my feet all day and everybody is telling me how much better I look. I have been taking the Tanlac tablets, too, and find them great for constipation. All my nerves, dizzy feelings are gone. I sleep good every night for the first time in four years, and get up in the mornings without that tired, no account feeling I had so long. And eat, why, I can eat just anything I want and as much as I please without the slightest trouble afterwards. Tanlac beats anything I have ever taken. I have told numbers of people that it is that has brought me out so, and several of my friends are now taking it on my recommendation.

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by Warne Drug Co., Ltd.

Dramatic Episode Won Over Kaiser To War Policy

ALL THREE LAID SWORDS ON TABLE

Programme of Hostilities was Discussed at Famous Conference Despite Reluctant Attitude of Ruler.

WASHINGTON, D.C., Aug. 6.—Information of a semi-official character, received in Washington, concerning the part played by Germany in the events leading up to the declaration of the great war, presents the Kaiser in a new character somewhat different from the common conception of him as the great evil military genius of Europe.

The reports received here belie the assertion now being iterated and reiterated by German government officials that the empire is waging a war of self-defence, to preserve her own national and commercial existence.

It was stated that the information discloses the fact that the programme for beginning the war was discussed at the war council on July 4 or 6, which has recently been the subject of an inquiry in the Reichstag. It has also been learned very definitely that Dr. Zimmermann, the former Foreign Secretary, admitted that the German government had the text of the Austrian ultimatum to Serbia ready fourteen hours before it was delivered.

This admission was made in the face of repeated denials that Germany was aware in advance of the action contemplated by her ally, which precipitated the war.

In the war council of July 4 or 5 the Kaiser was represented as taking rather a reluctant part. He was assured by the military leaders that there would be no war. It was expected that Russia would come to the aid of Serbia, but that France would remain out of the situation. It was firmly believed that Great Britain would hold aloof in any event.

When the Kaiser hesitated, it is reported, Von Moltke, Falkenhayn, and Von Tripitz took off their swords and laid them on the table, in tender of their resignations. The Chancellor, the Crown Prince and several others were present.

The action of the military leaders, the spokesmen of the huge machine which dominates Germany and which is now seeking to dominate the greater Germany, Pan-Germania, brought the Kaiser to their terms. The mobilization order was issued, and from that time events moved swiftly toward war.

These two incidents, the occurence of which has been repeatedly denied are interpreted as pointing clearly to the fact that Germany not only decided upon a course of war before the spark at Sarajevo set Europe aflame, but knew sufficiently in advance of the step Austria-Hungary vance of the step Austria-Hungary cataclysm had there been a genuine desire to do so.

The military machine not ony dominated the situation but the Kaiser song with it.

Hungary Calls Her Men Up To 52 Years

ARE ORDERED TO MOBILIZE WITHIN 24 HOURS.

ZURICH, Aug. 6.—All Hungarian members of the Landsturm under 52 years of age were Saturday ordered to report for mobilisation in 24 hours, according to Budapest despatches.

LANDTAG TO DISSOLVE OR FORCE WILL BE USED

ALL RUSSIAN CITIZENS IN FINLAND MUST OBEY ORDERS OF THE PROVISIONAL GOVT.

HELINGFORS, Aug. 6.—The Senate, under the presidency of the Governor-General, decided by seven votes against six to publish the manifesto issued by the Provisional Government dissolving the Langtag and appointing a general election on October 1. The decision was communicated to the Landtag, which then adjourned. Reassembling ten hours later, the President declared the Landtag suspended sine die. The deputies immediately quit the House. The Governor-General with the commanders of the Baltic fleet and the Sveaborg garrison attended a joint meeting of the naval and regimental committees. The Governor-General explained the reasons for the dissolution of the Landtag, and said the opening of the new body coincides with the meeting of the constituent Assembly, when both bodies will be able legitimately to pronounce upon the political future of Finland. He added that if the Diet refused to dissolve force would be used.

At a joint meeting of the Senate and Landtag, in the presence of the Governor-General of Finland, the following resolutions were adopted:

"First, all Russian citizens must obey the orders of the Provisional Governor which is the legitimate organ of Russian social democracy.

"Second, the Finnish democracy made a mistake in proclaiming autonomy without a preliminary agreement with the Russian democracy.

"The only solution of the situation is a mixed commission, consisting of an equal number of representatives of the democracies of Russia and Finland for a settlement of the conflict."

New Greek King Received Ovation

ATHENS, Aug. 4—King Alexander took the oath of office amid great pomp and ceremony. Preceded by a troop of soldiers, the King in a carriage drawn by four horses, proceeded from the palace to the hall of the Chamber of Deputies through the streets lined with cheering citizens.

Reaching the chamber at 10.30 o'clock the line was met by a parliamentary committee, the council of ministers and the clergy and escorted to the legislative hall, which was profusely decorated with flowers and national flags. The diplomatic corps was presented in full dress and the chamber was filled with deputies, ministers and guests.

The King wore the white uniform of a General, with numerous decorations. His entrance was the signal for hearty cheers, which he acknowledged with graceful bows. As he remained standing to take the oath Premier Venizelos was at his right and the President of the Chamber at his left. The oath was taken upon a Bible handed him by the officiating Bishop of the Greek Church. As this portion of the ceremony was concluded the hall rang with cries of "Long Live Alexander;" "Long Live the Constitution," and "Long Live Venizelos."

King Alexander then read the speech from the throne on the future attitude of Greece toward the belligerent powers. He was again cheered at the conclusion of his speech.

Press On Secretary Lansing's Address

"Fighting For Our Rights."

Brooklyn Eagle: "Secretary Lansing shows that we are fighting for both our rights as a nation and for the abstract principle of mankind the world safe for democracy. Our reasons for fighting are both general and specific. Our own outrageous treatment at the hands of a barbarous autocracy furnished conclusive proof that democracy is not safe now and never will be until autocracy is done for."

"Will Entertain No Peace Proposals."

Pittsburg Post: "It is evident that the monarchs of militarism are fighting for their existence, not only against the outside world, but against their people, and democracy has made it clear, both in the utterances and writings of the President, address of Secretary Lansing and in that it will entertain no peace proposals until the time shall come when it can make peace directly with the people. Then and only then will the world be safe for democracy."

"A Good Speech Made at a Good Time."

Charleston News and Courier: "Secretary Lansing's Madison Barracks speech was a good speech made at a good time and made for a good purpose. We need more of this sort of thing. Education as to the fundamental facts and issues of the war is still extremely desirable for our people, for the reason that there is constantly proceedings in this country a widespread and persistent campaign of misrepresentation, and, human nature being what it is, these misrepresentations need be counteracted by frequent restatement of the facts."

"For the Democracy of the World."

Indianapolis News: "In his address yesterday at the officers' training camp at Madison Barracks, N.Y., Secretary Lansing showed that while the government was fighting to make the world safe for democracy, it was also fighting to make liberty and democracy safe in our own land."

"Spoke to the Whole Country."

Rochester Post Epress: "Secretary Lansing spoke to the whole country yesterday when he addressed the Officers' Reserve Corps at Madison Barracks. It is not for an abstract principle of right that we are fighting, he explained, but for the preservation here in our own country of those things for which our forefathers were willing to die."

GERMANS PILLAGE GARDENS.

Farmers Organize in Bands to Shoot Suspicious Characters.

THE HAGUE, Aug. 6.—There are reports of increasing danger of the robbery of fields, crops and gardens in Germany. Notices have already appeared in the German press forbidding work in fields and gardens between 10 o'clock in the evening and 6 in the morning on account of persistent robberies.

A corps of volunteer help has been organized in country districts as protection against this menace, but conditions are getting so serious that farmers have been provided with rifles, bayonets, and ammunition by the state with orders to place themselves, under the military for practice in firing. These men are then to form bands and scour the country by night for culprits hiding behind hedges and in ditches and lanes and are to fire at any suspicious characters.

Some of the stealing is evidently done with the connivance of the owners. Mounted patrols have been used in the Province of Brodenburg.

OBITUARY

JAMES BOOTH.

The death occurred yesterday morning after an illness extending over eight months, of James Booth, at the family residence, 176 Sherbrooke street. The deceased was sixty-one years of age. He leaves besides his wife five daughters, namely, Mrs. Fred Thomas, Mrs. Samuel Thomas, Mrs. Albert Merrett and Miss Lily and Miss Eva, both at home.

Four sisters and two brothers also survive, namely: Mrs. J. Stiner of Uxbridge, Mrs. J. Davis, Mrs. J. Stoner and Mrs. D. George, all of Michigan. The two brothers are William of Green River and Albert of Toronto.

The late James Booth has been a valued employee of the Peter Hamilton Company, Limited, for the past 22 years.

The funeral will take place on Tuesday afternoon at three o'clock from the family residence to Little Lake cemetery. The funeral will be under the auspices of the Sons of England and the Ancient Order of Foresters.

WILLIAM GALLON.

Many friends in Peterborough will regret to learn of the death on Wednesday last of William Gallon, of Apsley, where he had been a resident for a great many years.

The deceased took a very active interest in municipal affairs in the Township of Burleigh and was clerk of the municipality for some time. He was also secretary of the Apsley telephone system. In politics the deceased was a staunch Liberal. The funeral took place on Friday and was largely attended by friends and relatives in the district and from Peterborough.

ROBERT CARTER.

The funeral of the late Robert Carter who died in Montreal on Friday, took place this afternoon from the residence of Mr. Stephenson, Orpington Road, to the Little Lake cemetery.

Partyism and Patriotism

Canada is sick to death of partyism in war time after an experience covering three years. The people want for the rest of the war no more party government—Neither of one variety or the other. They want a government of big, honest, capable Canadians inspired by the single desire to give this country an effective, competent, honest war-time administration.

To say that it is impossible for Canadian public men of this type to work together because of differences about domestic political issues is nonsense. Grits and Tories get along very well together in France. They hold the trenches side by side; they go over the parapets together; and they die together before the German entrenchments. Are we to be told that the fathers of these lads would sooner nourish inveterate and stupid political animosities than co-operate together in the prosecution of the war?—Manitoba Free Press.

Mrs. W. J. Nelson, and daughter, Velma of Toronto are visiting a former sister-in-law, Mrs. McWilliams, 273 Park street.

DUST STORM A BIG FACTOR IN TAKING BAGDAD

RARE COURAGE SHOWN IN MOONLIGHT, DARKNESS AND AT DAWN—GRAPHIC STORY OF FIGHT.

(Correspondence of the Associated Press from Bagdad, Mesopotamia).—The much-maligned dust of the Tigris valley was an important factor in the taking of Bagdad by the British army. It was a dust storm, so thick that one could not see four feet in front of him, that enabled the engineers to bridge the Diala river, where the Turks made their last stand.

The last battle before Bagdad is likely to become historic mainly on account of the fighting at the crossing of the Diala about eleven miles from Bagdad. It was necessary to cross opposite the village of Diala, where the stream is about 120 yards wide, in the face of any enemy sheltered behind thick houses, walls and gardens, armed with machine guns and rifles. There were two days of very desperate fighting before the crossing was effected.

RARE COURAGE SHOWN.

The attack on the night of March 7th was checked, but the quality of courage shown has never been surpassed in war. Immediately the first pontoon was lowered over the ramp, the whole launching party was shot down in a few seconds. It was bright moonlight, and the Turks had concentrated their machine guns in the houses on the opposite bank. A second pontoon reached the middle of the stream when a terrific fusillade was opened on it. The crew of five rowers and ten riflemen was killed, and the boat floated downstream. A third boat got nearly across the river but was bombed and sunk. All the crew was killed, but there was no holding back.

The orders still held to secure the passage. Crew after crew pushed off to an obvious and certain death. The second and third groups of pontoon crews were exterminated in the same way, and their pontoons drifted out into the Tigris to float past the British camp in the daylight with the freight of dead. The pontoon parties were volunteers, so chosen that all battalions of the brigade would share the honours of the night. The loss of all the available pontoons finally stopped the efforts to cross the river.

On the second night the attempt was resumed with equal gallantry. But this time the attack was preceded by a bombardment. Registering by artillery had been impossible on the first day in the speed of the pursuit. It was the artillery barrage that finally secured the troops their footing—not the shells themselves, but the dust storm raised by them. The dust, fine particles of dried Tigris mud was so thick that it formed a curtain behind which ten boats were able to cross.

In the Clear Moonlight.

Afterwards, in the clear moonlight, when the guns were waiting for ammunition and the dust curtain had lifted, the conditions of the preceding night were re-established. Succeeding crossing parties were exterminated, and the pontoons drifted away, but a footing had been secured. The crew of one pontoon which lost its way in the dust cloud, failed to make the bank in time. Directly the air cleared, a machine gun was opened on them, and the rowers were shot down and the pontoon drifted back to the shore. A sergeant called for volunteers to get the wounded out of the boat, and a party of twelve men went over the river bank. Every man of them, as well as the crew of the boat, was killed.

Sixty men had gained a foothold on the other bank of the Diala. They got together and started bombing along the bank. They were soon heavily pressed by the Turks on both flanks and found themselves between two clumps of woods. Here they discovered a providential natural position. A break in the river levee had been repaired by a new levee built in a half moon on the landward side. This formed a perfect lunette. The sixty soldiers, surrounded on all sides but the water, held it through the night, all the next day, and the next night against repeated and determined attacks.

Attack in Dark and at Dawn.

The attacks were delivered in the dark and at dawn. The Turks only attacked once in the daylight, as the British machine guns on the other bank swept the ground in front of the position. Twenty yards west of the lunette there was a thin grove of mulberries and palms. This pontoon position was most vulnerable on this side and it was here that the Turkish attacks were most frequent. British artillery fire, intermittent day and night, on the wood, afforded some protection. The whole affair was visible to the British troops on the south side, who encouraged their comrades by shouting. Attempts were made to get a cable across by means of a rocket, in order to pass the little band of sixty more ammunition, but the attempts were unsuccessful.

Twice during the nights of March 9th and 10th the Turks were on top of the parapet but were driven back. One more determined rush would have carried the lunette, but the little garrison, now reduced to forty, kept their heads and maintained cool control of their fire. A corporal was seen searching for loose rounds and emptying the bandoliers of the dead. In the end they were reduced almost to their last clip of cartridges, and they had only one bomb left, but there were more than a hundred Turkish dead outside the redoubts.

On the morning of the 10th, British troops upstream had begun to turn the Turkish flank and a general retirement began. By 9.30 a.m. in the morning the whole brigade had crossed and the fate of Bagdad was sealed.

Hardware And Metal Markets

There has been a steadily upward tendency in hardware markets during the week with numerous changes in lines that are important commodities of the hardware trade. Scales are now sold at a new list and discount. Eye augers, pinchers and hoof parers, hooks and staples, wrought staples, toe caulks, curry combs, sleighs, padlocks, lantern globes, horse-clippers and sheep-shearing machines, automatic grinders, are among the lines in which changes in an upward direction have been made. One large manufacturer of saws announced a general advance ranging from 10 to 15 per cent., including hand saws, compass saws, pruning saws, butcher saws, buck-saws and cross-cut saws. Plastering, brick and pointing trowels have also been advanced. All hickory, ash, maple and oak handles have been advanced, following higher prices that were recently announced on these lines. Carpet sweepers and step-ladders are also two important lines that have been moved to higher levels.

In the steel and iron market there has been a tendency to mark time during the week, waiting to see what the report of the Federal Trade Commission would be with respect to costs of production and fair margins. Ingot metals were in stronger tone with slightly higher prices on some commodities. Linseed oil was in very firm market with considerably higher prices recorded. Business has been seasonably good. Many travellers of wholesale houses are now taking their vacation and business is expected to be lighter for the next two or three weeks.—"Hardware and Metal."

ANOTHER HUGE LOAN.

U. S. Government Will Launch Three Billion One in November.

WASHINGTON, August 2.— The second liberty loan, for $3,000,000,000, will be launched November 15, Treasury officials said to-day. Before that time it is planned to issue nearly a billion dollars in Treasury short-time certificates to meet immediate needs.

Just Try This When Hairy Growths Appear

(Modes of To-day)

A smooth hairless skin always follows the use of a paste made by mixing some water with plain powdered delatone. This paste is applied to the hairy surface 2 or 3 minutes, then rubbed off and the skin washed, when every trace of hair will have vanished. no pain or discomfort attends the use of the delatone paste, but caution should be exercised to be sure that you get real delatone.

The Grain Crops In Peterboro' County Are About Ten Days Late

Potatoes and Roots Are Looking Fine—Departmental Report on Farm Crops in Peterboro' Districts—Potatoes Will Be Above the Average Throughout Ontario.

SITUATION IN THE WEST

Ottawa, Aug. 7.—A special press bulletin issued by the Census and Statistics Office, gives the following report on the condition of field crops throughout Canada, as compiled from telegrams despatched at the end of July.

Atlantic Provinces.—In Prince Edward Island frequent beneficial rains have assured excellent cereal crops, insect damage reducing wheat below average. Hay, an average crop. Potatoes promise full crop with 15 p.c. increased acreage. In Nova Scotia all crops made excellent growth. In New Brunswick weather was excellent for growth. Potatoes and roots are good; grain is a bad colour.

Quebec, (Rimouski) — Rains frequent; all crops have splendid appearance; good hay crop. Ste. Anne De La Pocatiere (Kamouraska)—Frequent showers favourable to all crops. Hay good. Grains poor, but better than expected in June. Potatoes promise average crop. Lennoxville (Sherbrooke): Hay crops late, about 40 p.c. being harvested. Yield above average. Heat of last few days very beneficial to corn, roots, etc. Aubrey (Chateauguay): Hay averages two tons per acre. All grains promise average crops; roots a failure. Potatoes doing well; also corn, except on low lands where drowned out. Cap Rouge: Hay crop very heavy; pastures fine. All grain suffering from excess of precipitation. Roots promise well; corn for silage, peas, potatoes, fair. Lac a la Tortue (Champlain): Wheat, oats and barley, good; potatoes very good; corn better than in June; beans promise well; hay abundant; roots fair.

Ontario, (Ottawa)—Hay harvesting about two weeks late; crop, average. Grain and roots promise well. Corn with favourable weather, should be an abundant crop. Potatoes promise to be above average. Pastures very good. Prescott (Centreville)—Hay, full crop of good quality, three-quarters cut. Grain promises full head, and filling well. Corn, for husking, doubtful; for fodder, very promising; potatoes, good. Peterborough—Fall wheat ripe, thin, but heads well filled. Barley above average; peas best for several years. Oats and mixed grains specially good; potatoes and roots looking fine; fodder corn large acreage and good appearance. Everything ten days late. Oshawa (Ontario): Hay about average; one-third well saved, third fairly well; rest, poor. Barley, oats and spring wheat prospects above average; corn, mangolds, turnips doing well; potatoes, big crop if blight does not damage. Farm help very scarce. Conestoga, (Waterloo)—Hay crop harvested in good condition. Wheat nearly ready to cut; some rust prevalent. Spring crops look well, but need rain, so do roots and potatoes. Hyde Park (Middlesex)—Wheat badly infested with ball smut and rust. Oats developing open smut, but look well; peas, corn, barley, potatoes, turnips excellent though late; hay, half well saved.

Manitoba (Millwood)—Cereals injured by drought, about half crop; potatoes and roots late, but good. Hay and pastures, half crop; summer fallows very fair; late crops suffering from great heat. Brandon—Drought continued during July. Wheat will not average more than 12 bushels. Oats and barley worse; hay a failure; cutting will begin about August 20.

Saskatchewan, Indian Head—July very dry with hot southwest winds; crops have suffered considerably throughout district. Early sown grain on fallow filling fairly well. Stubble and spring ploughing will be very light. Crops are maturing rapidly. Cutting will commence from tenth to fifteenth, and should be general by August 20th. Saskatoon: Crops very short owing to continued drought. Best grain fields very weedy. Yields of hay much below normal. Many vegetable gardens almost total failure. Rosthern: No rain since July 12th. Hay and corn poor; roots, fair; grain good, but needs rain. Yield about 50 p.c., unless copious rains soon. Potatoes promise above average.

Alberta—The Alberta Department of Agriculture reports hot and dry weather generally throughout the province, except in a few districts. Grain and roots have advanced well, but all need rain, particularly in southwest portions. Haying, general. Barley turning in many districts. If rain comes soon a big crop can still be harvested. Lacombe: High temperature and dry weather last three weeks of July have hastened maturity and reduced prospective yield of all cereals; some districts not suffering from lack of rain, but all Central Alberta would be benefitted by good rainfall. Hay harvest, 60 p. c. completed. Early varieties of grain will be ripe next week.

British Columbia (Agassis) - July exceptionally dry and hot. No rain fell until the last five days. All hay stored in excellent shape. Grain crops maturing rapidly. Corn growing fast; roots and pastures need rain. Live stock in good condition. Summerland: Apple crop will not exceed that of 1916; it is very patchy. Well-kept orchards have held out well during water shortage and heat. Early peaches are just ripe; apricots coming in. Both running small this year. Invermere: Crops under dry farming conditions a failure. Crops under irrigation good and have made rapid growth. Weather good for haying. Fodder crop promises well. Sidney: Very few areas in the Island district received beneficial rains during the month. In consequence of long drought all spring sown grain, roots and potatoes have not developed as usual. A heavy hay crop was gathered in excellent condition Small fruit has given an average crop.

Treat Chafing After the Bath by Applying Dr. Chase's Ointment

THIS rule has been adopted by many mothers, and is becoming general because of the splendid results obtained. Pore-clogging powders have had their day. While they absorbed moisture, they have proved of absolutely no healing value. Permanent injury was often done to the skin by clogging the pores.

In contrast, Dr. Chase's Ointment is antiseptic, soothing and healing. It promptly destroys germs of disease, and therefore prevents the development of eczema or other skin diseases from which so many children suffer.

This ointment affords relief from chafing and skin irritation, and restores the soft, smooth, velvety texture of the skin. It is, therefore, a fine habit to use Dr. Chase's Ointment after the bath.

Important Allied Conference In Progress To-day

Representatives of the British and Roumanian Governments Present; the Situation in Russia.

STANDS FORTH STRONGER

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Aug. 7.— An Allied conference which gave promise of important results, was in progress in Downing street to-day. Premiers Ribot of France, Sonnino of Italy, and Pasitch of Serbia, together with representatives of the British and Roumanian governments were present. With the conference holding forth possibilities of important diplomatic developments, comment was also rife on the German and Russian changes. There was a hope that Premier Kerensky is again fairly on the road to success in his work of regenerating Russia. He has successfully passed through another period of what was apparently complete disorganization, stifled outcropping of renewed peace demands, and stands forth stronger than ever before. Chancellor Michaelis, has given no indication of bending in the least from the militarist programme of his predecessor, and that Dr. Kuhlmann, new Foreign Secretary for Germany, is in thorough accord with his views, is regarded as certain.

Bitter Comment Respecting New German Cabinet

"Great German People Are Exposed to the Strokes of Fate" Says the "Tageblatt"—"A Gift From Above"

HAVE NO POWER

Special to The Examiner:

(By John Grandens.)

BERLIN, Aug. 7.—Open dissatisfaction with the new cabinet was expressed by the Liberal press to-day. The Tageblatt was bitter in its statements that the people had been given no choice in the new government, and declared that "real democratization or parliamentarization resembling an exotic sea monster, is the choice confronting Chancellor Michaelles."

"Germany received the new government as a gift from above. There is no possibility of acknowledging or refusing it," says the Tageblatt.

"Parliament has no more rights than other parliaments. The great German people have neither direct nor indirect influence in the selection of their managers. They have no power and no responsibility. They are exposed to the strokes of fate."

Attack Was Well Planned

Returned Officer at Cobourg tells of Capture of Vimy Ridge.

COBOURG, Aug. 6.—Rev. H. B. Kenny., pastor, formerly chaplain of the 139 Overseas Battalion presided at a service held in the Methodist Church to commemorate the third anniversary of the war, when addresses were given by Lieut. Cecil Peterson of the 1st Cobourg Heavy Battery draft, and Lieut. Paul Skidmore, also of the 1st Canadian expeditionary force. Lieut. Peterson emphasized the need for every Canadian to "carry on" until the war is ended, by reinforcements for the men in the trenches, by the conscription of wealth and all resources of the country and also by the conscription of all labour in order that Canada may measure up to her fullest acme of usefulness.

Lieut. Skidmore in describing the taking of Vimy Ridge and the fighting that took place there a little earlier, told how the Headquarters Staff laid out the plan of the attack and rehearsed it with the divisions that were to be engaged, until not only every battalion and every company knew just what they were to do, but every man. And the best of it all was that they did it, too. No one failed in his part. Lieut. Skidmore told of the great help that the chaplains ale to the men. From their service quarters in the danger zone they were ready with hot coffee or cocoa or bovril and the men who came out of the fight "all in and dead to the world" were cheered and helped until, after a short rest, they were ready to face any danger and do their bit in any way required.

U-Boat Commander Slayer Of Sweetheart In Romantic Tragedy Of Undersea War

Forgiving Father Relates How Friend of Family Was Unwitting Agent of Death For His Daughter and His Son as Result of Remarkable Coincidences.

HIS NEMESIS AGAIN

AN ATLANTIC PORT, Aug. 7. — Lars Larsen, an elderly man, but still vigorous and erect, who arrived here to-day aboard a small cargo steamship, told a story of U-boat romance which, for dramatic interest, is perhaps unparalleled by anything ever narrated concerning the submarine warfare of atrocity.

Mr. Larsen was an officer aboard the Swedish steamship Ada, which was sunk on June 12 last while she was on her way from Gothenburg, Sweden, to Hull, England. At first Mr. Larsen parried questions in regard to his experience with submarines, by saying that the memories were too bitter, and he was trying hard to banish them from his mind, but, finally, he consented to speak. Following is his story:

"Before the war began a handsome young German became acquainted with my son Swen, and, before long, was a frequent caller at our home in Stockholm. He fell in love with my daughter Minna, who was sixteen years old and considered very beautiful. The German, Hans von Tuebinger, was an art student, and had come to Sweden to study some phase of his calling which he said he could not find in any other country. I never understood exactly what that phase was; but, at any rate, it was the means of bringing unhappiness to me and mine; and so I curse it and I would curse him too if I did not know that he was the innocent instrument in the hands of a relentless fate, and that he would gladly have averted the tragedies of which he was the unwilling cause.

Were to Marry After the War.

"Minna soon grew to return the love of the good looking youngster, and when the war broke out and he received notice to present himself at once to the naval unit to whom he belonged in Germany, the poor girl was ready to die of grief. Evidently it cost Hans a terrible struggle, too; but he said he did not believe the war could last a week and that he would return at the latest in two weeks. And it was arranged that when he did return he and Minna were to be married.

"Two months elapsed before we got a letter from Hans. It told us of his having been detailed to submarine work and of the unhappy time he was having counting the hours when the war was to end and he could come to claim his bride. After that we never heard from him again.

"For a while Minna bore up bravely, but she began to fade perceptibly. My wife died three months after Hans had gone away and, as my son Swen was already a sturdy help to me aboard my schooner, the Baldar, I decided to take Minna along on our voyages too.

"Towards the end of April, as we were nearing the coast of England, on a return voyage from the West Coast of Africa, a shell struck the Baldar amidships. A splinter of the smashed woodwork struck Minna and killed her. The rest of us had barely time to get into a small boat and get away before the schooner sank, carrying down the body of my daughter.

"It was only then that we noticed the U-boat from which the shell had been fired. It came close to us and, judge of my horror and that of the Sven when we discovered that the captain of the murderous craft was the man who was to have become the husband of Miana. He also appeared to be greatly affected when he saw my boy and me; and his first question was: 'How is my Minna and does she still think of me?'

"I pointed to the place where the Baldar had sunk. 'What,' almost shrieked Hans von Tuebinger' Minna is dead.'

"His grief was certainly unfeigned when we told him what had happened. He soon braced up, however, and, after saying, 'Well, there is no doubt that war is hell,' he ordered his men to stock our boat with provisions and bade us goodby. A moment later his boat was speeding toward another sailing vessel which had just hove into sight. After many vicissitudes we reached England.

"Last June my son and I were officers aboard the Swedish steamship Ada, under Captain Ternston. Again we were nearing the British coast when a submarine fired a shell. There was no delay in getting into lifeboats this time either; but somehow the gun fire did not seem to do the destructive work quickly enough to suit the submarine captain, and so a torpedo was sent into the vessel, and soon she began to settle and sink.

His Nemesis Again.

"When the U-boat came close enough to enable us to discuss the features of those on her deck, we were again almost paralyzed with the shock of horror to find that the commander was none other than Hans von Tuebinger, my unwitting Nemesis. I had not noticed my son Sven. Evidently the awful horror of the situation had driven the poor lad insane. When we got close enough to the U-boat Sven leaped to its deck and made a rush for Hans. His hand was at the man's throat when one of the U-boat's seamen struck Sven a blow on the head. It felled him and he rolled off into the water.

"Hans tore off his coat and jumped into the sea after my boy. But it was vain. Sven did not reappear. The blow had stunned, if not killed him. Long the submarine remained there and every effort was made to recover the boy. Hans wept his eyes red and swore he would gladly have given his own life to save my son's I believe he meant it.

"There was no need this time to provision our boat. We had supplies and drinking water a-plenty. Do you forgive me?' asked the U-boat captain. What else could I do? He certainly was not personally responsible for the atrocities which he had been instrumental in inflicting upon me. 'Duty, duty!' he exclaimed bitterly; 'oh, this murderous, damned unspeakable duty!'"

Lars Larsen burst into tears.

"I'm trying to forget," he said to the reporter; "do you think God will ever be good enough to let me forget? I can always see my Minna and my son before me; and side by side with them I can see their slayer whom cannot but forgive and whom I cannot find it in my heart to hate."

ONE IN THIRTY WAR DEAD

Boston Statistician Says Majority of Wounds Are on the Head.

NEW YORK—A Boston despatch to the World says: Roger Babson, the eminent statistician of Wellesley, has gathered the following figures from a close study of war casualties:

Fourteen men out of every fifteen so far have been safe.

Under present conditions, where man power is being saved, no more than one in thirty is killed.

Only one in 500 loses a limb — a chance no greater than in hazardous conditions at home.

Br. Babson's conclusions are based on the mortality figures of the French army for the full three years of war. Attention is called to the fact that present fighting is not claiming anywhere near the number of dead recorded for the first two years.

He says: Most of the wounds sustained in the trenches are clean cut and of a nature that a few weeks in the hospital makes the subject as fit as ever. But 300,000 French soldiers have been discharged on account of wounds during the three years of the war.

Most of the wounds received in the trenches are on top of the head, simply scalp wounds. Practically speaking a wound is either fatal or slight, with but few in between these two extremes.

"It's confidence that does it."

The Marseillaise Hymn, the national hymn of France, received its present name from the fact that a body of French troops from Marseilles marched into Paris, where it was unknown, singing it lustily. The words and music of the piece were composed by Rouget de l'Isle, a French officer of Engineers, and it was first produced in 1792 at the House of Baron Dietrich in Strasburg, under the name of the "Chant du Depart de l' Armee du Rhin."

Britain in twelve months will have to import five months supplies, according to the statement by Kennedy Jones, director general of food economy, Great Britain. His calculations included the cereals at present on hand, the rate of submarine losses, the new tonnage to be available, and the results of the campaign to eliminate food waste. Canada and the United States are looked to for the five months supplies necessary to be imported.

CURIOUS AND UNUSUAL QUERIES ANSWERED.

"Men-of-war" is a phrase applied to a line of battleships, and probably originated in the following way: In the English language ships are usually referred to as "she;" "man-of-war-ship" meant a boat full of men armed for war, but in the course of time the word "ship" was dropped, and "man-of-war" was the resulting phrase.

Marabou feathers, of which woman's boas, muffs and hat trimmings are made are taken from beneath the wings of the Marabou stork, a native bird of West Africa.

Did you know that the word "marmalade" originally meant "quince jam," and came from the Portugese "marmalade," from "marmelo," a quince." Nowadays, we call any fruit conserve marmalade, whether it be made from oranges, apricots, plums or quinces.

Home Health Club

By Dr. David H. Reeder

Dressing for Health.—Perhaps if I was to say "Dressing for Comfort and Health," I would more nearly tell you what I had in mind.

To illustrate, at four o'clock this morning I started for Chicago from Lakeside, Michigan, where my four young sons and their mother are getting a rich tan on their skin, and strong muscles under the skin, by caring for two acres of garden and a lot of poultry. I usually arrive at a railroad station in ample time and this morning I had some twenty minutes to spare. I had enjoyed the brisk walk and the cold fresh south-east wind. I was very comfortable while walking and to remain so I put on my top coat.

A few moments later an automobile brought to the station two young ladies that had evidently spent the week-end there. Neither of them had a coat or a wrap of any kind. Their dresses and general apparel indicated a comfortable finacial condition, but the carelessness or thoughtlessness—possibly pride—had led these young women to take a trip to the country at a season of the year when sudden and violent changes in temperature frequently occur, and they were dressed only for very warm days.

They were blue with the cold which the auto ride had made more intense. They were about to sit on a wooden bench directly in the strongest wind, and realising their danger I suggested that they go to the other side of a near-by building and remain sheltered from the wind until the train approached. They were duly grateful, and promptly took the advice. Of course they have an advantage over persons of more advanced years, because their blood circulates more freely, but as one of them was thin and undernourished she was in danger of pneumonia.

On another occasion I saw a middle aged woman and several children arrive at the station on a very hot morning. I could readily see that the children were in the habit of going barefoot and without head covering and in all probability wore but little clothing when at home. They were all dressed up because they were going on the train. Thick stockings, shoes, coats and overcoats, while the mother, in addition to a heavy black dress, had on a long heavy coat and all of them were perspiring quite freely indeed.

How I wanted to tell those helpless little ones to strip off their overcoats and coats and be comfortable, but I knew that the mother's pride would not permit them to do so, and they had to suffer. I did not waste any pity on the mother further than to pity her ignorance.

In order to be comfortable and safe from the extremes of heat and cold it is sometimes necessary to have at hand, even though not perfectly convenient, proper changes of clothing, and these changes should be made regardless of what you may imagine "they will think," because as a matter of fact others pay no attention to the dress of the person that is seasonable further than to envy your good fortune or good sense.

CLUB NOTES.

I will gladly answer all inquiries for information on health subjects from readers of this publication, if same are addressed to Home Health Club, 5039 Cottage Grove Avenue, Chicago, Ill. Send full name and address with 4 cents in postage.

I am going to let you read one of the letters I received this morning. Perhaps it will put new hope and ambition into your life as it has put new pleasure into mine. The only comment I need make is "try it and see for yourself."

Dear Doctor: For several years I have been studying your work on Dynamic Magnetism. I have practiced the exercises up to Chapter 38, almost daily. When I first took an interest in this work I was a frail, worn-out, nervous school teacher. This was four years ago. When vacation time came I made up my mind to do all in my power to get back my health, so I began with daily practice and kept it up throughout the summer. When the fall came I entered the school room well and strong. I kept up my daily practice of the exercises given in your course and as the months went on instead of wearing out and becoming nervous, I appeared to be gaining new power and new vigor and when school closed I was as fresh as when school opened in the fall. Beside my schoolwork each year since I have been able to carry on courses for my own benefit. Sometimes I have to wonder with what ease I am able to accomplish so much.

More joy, love and real happiness have come into my life since I began this study than I can tell. I have tried to solve the mystery and this is my solution. This study and practice has given me a healthy body. My nerves and all of the parts of my body are in harmony with each other. I have studied my own self and have tried to put my mind and soul in harmony with God and man, and by so doing have strengthened my will to do, loved more, and have done more for myself and for those about me, than I did before. All have had a share in spelling the word "success." Do you think that I am now ready to go on from Chapter 38? I would enjoy spending my summer vacation progressing in this work. I feel that there is more in store for me as I go on in the work. I wish to thank you from the depths of my heart what I have received from your books. I am sure that you are rewarded daily for the interest you are taking in the welfare of others.

P.E.E.

Dear Doctor: I wish to ask your advice about using Peroxide of Hydrogen for catarrh. I suppose that is what I have as I am troubled with having to clear my throat, and especially in the morning I cough and have to blow my nose very frequently, though I have not a cold. I tried snuffing peroxide and water and it seems to help the condition. I dilute it in proportions of three parts of water and one of peroxide. I also gargle my throat with it. Would you advise the use of it in that way.

Mrs. C. S.

(Answer.) Yes; the use of the Peroxide of Hydrogen in the way you describe is all right. A complete lecture on the subject of Catarrh is given in Volume II, of the Club books. If you will send in your complete name and address I will be pleased to give you more specific information.

Bird Land Dance Halls.

There are several species of bower birds, chief among them the Satin and the Newton. The Satin bower bird is the best known. When the bowers were first discovered it was supposed that they were playhouses built by the native children; but, as a matter of fact, they are the dance halls of bird land. The nests are built in the trees and have no connection with the playhouses. The male birds build these latter and gather every bright and shining object they can find to adorn the entrance to the bower. When it is completed, according to one who has watched them, little "at homes" are given daily, at which the males meet and pay court to their lady lovers, now bowing and scraping, now playing hide and seek through the bower, and now doing an absurdly dignified dance for their edification. Newton's bower bird decorates its bower with fresh flowers every day, and if a visiting male wants a fight all he has to do is to disturb these flowers. The master of the bower proceeds with the painful duty of teaching him how to behave in company, while the remainder of the party raise a great racket, but never interfere. A naturalist studying them disarranged one of their flowers, but each time he did it the bower master rearranged it with great care.

The Chestnut Blight.

The chestnut blight has already done damage estimated as close to $50,000,000. The disease attacks both American and European species, but does little damage to those from Japan and China. Plant breeders by crossing Japanese chestnut and native chinquapin have produced resistant trees. Some of the Chinese chestnuts are said to grow 100 feet high in their home forests.—Tree Talk.

HEALTH AND BEAUTY HINTS

By MRS. MAE MARTIN

Vera B.: Your skin will grow soft, clear and smooth after a few applications of a plain almocoin jelly-cream, made at home as follows: Put 4 tablespoonfuls glycerine into ½-pint water, and in this dissolve 1 ounce almocoin (which you can buy at your druggist's). Apply a thick coat of this to the skin before retiring, then wash off in the morning and use more of the jelly-cream for massaging. This gradually dispels the wrinkles and lines and banishes pimples, blackheads and the "muddy," oily look. The almocoin jelly-cream is greaseless and will not grow hair.

Mrs. A. T.: You may not require glasses. Get from your druggist one ounce orystos and dissolve in 1 pint water. Then put a few drops in the offending eye several times a day until inflammation and soreness have vanished. This orystos eye tonic is especially good for granulated eyelids, and using it strengthens the eyes and gives them a youthful sparkle.

Adeline: The reason for that dryness of hair after your shampoo is because that kind of soap irritates the scalp's tissues and makes them over-sensitive. Canthrox will correct this, for it is a tonic as well as cleanser and is so stimulating to the blood vessels and scalp tissues that the danger is entirely eliminated. To prepare your shampoo, dissolve a teaspoonful of canthrox in a cup of hot water, then pour it slowly on the head as you rub briskly. This dissolves every trace of dust, dandruff and excess oil, and after rinsing the hair will dry quickly and evenly.

Lucy G.: Loss of weight is a serious matter and calls for prompt action. Get from your druggist 1 ounce hardene and put it, together with ½-cupful sugar, into ½-pint alcohol; then add hot water to make a full quart. Take a tablespoonful before each meal. This simple home remedy increases your appetite and gently cleanses the system of impurities, restores a healthy condition to the vital organs. When this is done your weight will be normal and the glow of health will be upon your cheeks.

Mrs. A. R. J.: I make a good lotion that is very helpful to my skin by dissolving 4 ounces spermaceti in ½-pint witch hazel or rose water, to which is added 2 teaspoonfuls glycerine, which will soon correct that oily, sallow, "worsout" appearance of your complexion. This simple lotion is soothing and healing and imparts a velvety smoothness and natural fullness to the complexion, not possible with powder and rouge. You will like the spermaceti lotion because it is easily applied and cannot be detected when on.

Lucille: I always use a plain quinsoin hair tonic, made at home by pouring 1 ounce quinsoin into ½-pint alcohol, then adding ½-pint water. Rub a little well into the scalp twice a week and you will soon rid the scalp of dandruff and restore the hair roots to health. The regular use of the quinsoin tonic will restore the former gloss and even color to the hair and make it soft, long and fluffy.

Mrs. M. N. T.: Your excess weight can be easily and quickly reduced by taking this parmotis treatment, made at home as follows: Put 4 ounces parmotis (which you can get at your drug store), in 1½ pints hot water and strain when cool. Take a tablespoonful before meals until weight is where you want it. No harm results from the use of the parmotis treatment, and the flesh is left solid and the skin soft and smooth.

MAKING PEARLS TO ORDER.

A Japanese Plan for Putting Oysters Systematically to Work.

One of the queerest farms in the world is situated on the Island of Tatekujima, in the Bay of Ago, Japan. The farm lands lie fathoms deep in water, and the crops are lustrous pearls.

Oyster shells are lined with a smooth coating which is commonly called mother-of-pearl, or nacre. The oyster builds up this lining layer on layer.

If any foreign substance—even a grain of sand—happens to enter the shell of an oyster the oyster immediately begins to allay the irritation it causes by surrounding it with the material it uses to build up the lining of its shell. This process the oyster keeps up year after year.

Pearls are not made by oysters alone. Any mollusk may form them, but pearls formed by common oysters and clams are not particularly attractive.

On the farm at Tatekujima the first steps toward the production of the pearls are taken during July and August of each year. Wherever the larvæ of the pearl-oysters have been found most abundant, small pieces of rock and stone are placed. In a little while oyster-spats will be attached to these rocks. Then the rocks are removed to beds which have been prepared for them in deep waters. If they are left in shallow water during the winter the oysters may perish from the cold. They are left in the deep water beds undisturbed for three years. Then they are taken out of the sea, and into each oyster is introduced a small seed-pearl or a small round piece of nacre, which serves as the nucleus for a future pearl. The oysters are then returned to the sea, where they remain for four years. At the end of that time they are taken out and the harvest of pearls is reaped. During the four years the oyster has been busily engaged in piling layer on layer of nacre around the bit of foreign substance which was so artfully introduced into its shell.

The work of the oyster-farm is done principally by women. The divers remain under water incredible lengths of time.

Grasshoppers at Sea.

The grasshopper would seem to have nothing in common with the seagull, yet grasshoppers have been picked up in swarms at sea, 1,200 miles from the nearest land.

The African grasshopper, according to The Popular Science Monthly, has been known to cross the Red and Mediterranean seas in destructive numbers and even fly to the Canary Islands. For the most part these grasshoppers are of a migratory species (Schistocera tartarica) noted for its great flights. The bodies are about four inches long and are equipped with large air sacs in addition to the usual breathing tubes. These sacs buoy up the insect so that it is able to stay in the air for days at a time, exerting practically no effort at all. During flight its speed varies from three to twenty miles an hour. When it is tired it rests on the water and is borne along on the waves.

Long Horse Railway.

The longest horse railway in the world is in the Argentine Republic.

Uncalled For Courtesy.

The Vicomte Tousaint was formerly a colonel in the French army and mayor of Toulouse. He was a brave man and a dashing officer. During one of the hottest engagements of a terrible year of war, noticing that his troops were bending forward under a galling fire to escape the bullets of the enemy while he alone maintained an erect position, he exclaimed, "Since when, I should like to know, has so much politeness been shown to the enemy?" The sarcasm took instantaneous effect, for the soldiers rushed forward and carried everything before them.

Selenium Is Sensitive.

By substituting a selenium cell for the human eye at the telescope M. Fournie d'Albe believes it would be possible to detect stars five magnitudes fainter than any now observable, thus enormously increasing the powers of the greatest instruments. Theoretically a selenium cell of sixteen square inches would register the light of a twenty-eighth magnitude star, but this would require longer exposure—several days—than would be practicable.

Mighty Arcturus.

Arcturus is one of the most brilliant stars that we can see in the heavens. Its diameter is 62,000,000 miles. The light that comes to us from it is over 200 years old when it enters our eyes. The sun is distant 93,000,000 miles. Just compare the eight or nine minutes it takes for the sun's light to reach us with 200 years.

SALT WATER AND SUN.

Protect Your Hair and Skin from Their Ravages.

DURING August the summer resorts are filled with the gay vacationists, more in search of pleasure perhaps than of health.

Summer devotees throng the dance floors of the hotels and lounge about on the sands of the seashore.

You who go to the salt water resorts for your holidays may find the salt air and the daily dips in the salt water very beneficial to your health, but unless you are very careful they will wreak ruin to your complexion and to your hair.

Uneven Bleaching.

The summer is not apt to improve your appearance in any case. What with the odd bleaching effects of the sun on the hair, the sun's burning and coarsening of the skin, and the result of a combination of dust and wind blowing in the face, it is not probable that you will gain in beauty unless you are very careful.

When salt water and salt winds are combined with the burning rays of the sun the result is sometimes disastrous.

It is a popular fallacy among brunettes and brown haired women that the sunshine can make them blondes by bleaching out their hair.

It is an old trick on the part of the would-be blonde to return from her summer's holiday with hair several shades lighter.

If curious friends inquire how this metamorphosis took place, she answers that the sun did it.

As a matter of fact, it is far more likely that peroxide did the trick for which the sun gets the credit.

The sun will certainly bleach your hair if you sit in the glare of light on the beach long enough each day.

But do not expect to be delighted with the result, for almost never does the sun bleach hair evenly and the color throughout.

If you have ever seen a sun bleached brunette you will never forget the sight.

Usually a head of dark hair which has undergone this treatment looks like a zebra, one stripe of light strands and one of dark alternating, often with a little tinge of red between to make the effect more interesting.

If you do not want to return to town with your hair colored like the rainbow and your skin roughened and tanned an ugly brown, do take a few precautions while you are at the shore.

The trouble with most girls is that they are too busy having a good time to think about protecting themselves against the ravages or sun and salt water.

They dash out of the house without ever thinking about a hat.

They loiter about on the sands in their bathing suits without a thought for the result.

Forewarned, however, is forearmed, and you who are going near the ocean for your holiday must pay some attention to safeguarding your skin and hair if you wish to be presentable looking when you return to town in the autumn.

Wear a hat at all times to cover your hair.

When you bathe don a cap that will keep off the hot sun's rays.

The salt water has a very bad effect both on the scalp and, as a direct result, on the hair.

Fresh Water and Cold Cream.

The only way to avert this is to wash in fresh water each day as much of your hair as the salt water reaches.

Cleansing it daily, however, will dry up all the oil if you are not careful.

If you will rub in a little cocoanut oil every night before retiring it will keep the scalp sufficiently oily in spite of the daily shampoo, which is a necessity for salt water bathers.

To protect your skin from becoming coarsened and tanned rub in a little good cold cream each time before you go out, dusting a little rice powder on afterward to take off the shine.

Wear a wide hat and carry a parasol when possible, and you will be doing your "bit" to protect your good looks.

ECONOMICAL RECIPES.

Recipes have been coming from all parts of the country. Every one is trying to economize without skimping, and these suggestions from housekeepers of experience will be found helpful to those who seek varied nourishing and appetising dishes.

OXTAIL RAGOUT.

Two oxtails, jointed and washed. Six onions sliced and browned in pot with oxtails. When nicely browned add water enough to cover and stew slowly one hour; then add two carrots, if small; one green pepper, sprig of parsley, one-half cup of tomato and six small potatoes and cook until tender. Thicken with browned flour. Cook separately eight lengths of macaroni; place cooked macaroni on dish and pour ragout over it and serve hot.

This makes a delicious dinner for six adults. I often make a double quantity, enough for two dinners. It keeps well placed in a covered dish and set in icebox.

To brown flour take one-half cup of flour, put in pan over moderate heat and stir until nicely browned.

Mrs. J. R. RICHARDS.

WORTH TRYING.

Place in saucepan one pound of round steak ground, add sliced onion, large pinch of thyme and water enough to cover. Simmer over low flame half hour or more. When done season with salt and pepper and thicken with tablespoonful of flour made smooth in half cupful cold water. If liked add bits of left over vegetables or serve plain on toast. A nourishing and inexpensive meal for four persons.

HOUSEWIFE.

SAVING FLOUR AND BUTTER.

Sponge cake is now very much used with berries, ices and sliced fruits for dessert. Here is one that calls for orange flavoring and a delicate yellow frosting that is quite out of the ordinary:—

Four eggs (yolks and whites separated).

Four tablespoonfuls orange juice.

One cupful granulated sugar.

One and a half tablespoonfuls cornstarch.

One teaspoonful baking powder (level).

Flour (less than a cupful).

Beat the yolks of eggs, add orange juice, sugar gradually, using egg beater. Beat until sugar is well dissolved, usually fifteen minutes. Take measuring cup and put in the cornstarch, baking powder and fill up with sifted pastry flour. Add this to the mixture, folding it in carefully with mixing spoon. Beat whites to a stiff froth and fold them in lightly. Bake in buttered angel cake pan.

Frosting:—

Two teaspoonfuls orange juice.

One teaspoonful lemon juice, bit grated rind.

Beaten yolk of one egg.

Add confectioner's sugar until proper consistency to spread.

Mrs. L. E. WHITE.

SCOTCH SCONES.

Three cups of flour.

One teaspoonful of baking soda.

One teaspoonful of salt.

Quarter spoonful cream of tartar.

One tablespoonful of molasses, enough sour milk or buttermilk to make a dough not enough to handle, roll out and cut into pieces and bake in a hot oven. This will make twenty scones. Much cheaper than bread or cake.

Mrs. PAUL HAMER.

A SOUP AND BEEF WITH CORN-CAKES FOR FOUR PEOPLE.

Select a good shin of beef weighing two pounds and boil it in plenty of water until tender and the bone falls out. Then take out the marrow and place it where bone was in beef. Salt and pepper well, put on a platter. Cover and put iron on top to press; set aside until next day. Also put stock away until fat forms on top. Then remove all fat, and keep one cup of stock for beef gravy. Into soup pot pour your stock and let it come to a hard boil, then chop finely one carrot, one stalk of celery, two sprigs of parsley, one small onion, and add one cup of tomatoes.

Cook until tender; salt and pepper to taste. Blend one tablespoonful of flour to make it a bit creamy strained, and serve with bits of toast well browned in butter.

Sauce for beef:—Take one onion and brown it in a little lard. Put in a cupful of tomatoes, a dash of red pepper and salt to taste; one cupful of stock in which beef was boiled. If this is not brown enough take a little sugar and brown in iron spoon; pour in a few drops. This always makes a richer gravy. Then add a tablespoonful of flour well blended to gravy. Cook about twenty minutes, slowly, and then it is ready to pour over your beef.

Cut beef into slices, put in steamer and pour your gravy over. Keep hot until ready, serving on a large, hot platter, beef in centre and cornecakes around edge with sprigs of parsley.

Cornecakes:—Grate three ears of corn, two tablespoonfuls of flour, one egg, half teaspoonful of baking powder, one-quarter teaspoonful of salt; add a little milk, mix well and drop from spoon into hot lard, and fry a golden brown and serve with beef.

This will serve four persons and makes a good dinner, with a lettuce or spinach salad, crackers, cheese and coffee for dessert.

M. C. B.

TWO WAR RECIPES FROM LEFT OVER RICE.

Rice Muffins.—One cup cold boiled rice, 2 cups flour, 1 egg, 2 teaspoons baking powder, little salt, 1 cup milk or water. Makes 10 muffins. Nice without the egg. You can also thin this batter down and make pancakes of it; soften the rice in the milk, sift baking powder, flour and salt together.

Rice Hash.—Take cold leftovers of meat, run it through the meat grinder, add 1½ cups of cold rice, chop them and season with salt and pepper; add a little butter or gravy. A little onion chopped with it is nice.

Mrs. ALVAH SCOFIELD.

Women Will Prospect for Gold by Airplane

A MILE AND A HALF IN THE AIR IN ARIZONA'S COPPER DISTRICT

MRS. FRANCES K. DYAS

"DID you ever hear of any one prospecting for gold and copper in an airplane? No? Well, neither did I. But just the same I think that it's going to be done, and by a woman at that, and I am the woman who is going to make the attempt."

This was the declaration made in New York the other day by pretty and petite Mrs. Frances K. Dyas, of Prescott, Aris., the first woman to obtain a license as a stock broker in that State, owner of several copper and gold claims, and a firm believer that woman can do just about anything which a man can, and that modern inventions should supplant old time customs whenever feasible.

Youthful and rosy cheeked, and arrayed in a gown of some filmy material which made her appear more like a typical "summer girl" than a thorough business woman and one who had roughed it many times while in search of metals through the mountains and deserts of Arizona, she made her startling declaration most seriously and with the air of a woman who realized that she had decided upon a trying experiment but was determined to go through with it.

How She Got the Idea.

"You see, it was this way," she continued. "When, some time ago, I left my home, in Prescott, for New York I hadn't even dreamed of the undertaking I am about to make. In fact, at that time I never even had seen an airplane. Out in the best copper country of Arizona my husband and I have thirty-three claims, but we needed more cash for machinery and other things to properly develop them. I started for the East to interest certain Wall street interests in our mines, and to them expected to sell a block of treasury stock for the purpose of raising a development fund.

"I still am engaged on that errand, but something occurred on my way to New York which gave me the new idea for prospecting—I saw my first airplane. At first I watched it only with the interest of a child seeing a new toy, but suddenly the idea flashed upon me. If other people have learned to manipulate flying machines, why can't I? And if once I learn to fly, why can't I get across some of those Arizona deserts and find the precious metals which I know lie in the mountains beyond them?

Will Make First Flight.

"The more I though over the idea the more I became convinced that it was a good one, and by the time I reached New York city I had determined to learn a great deal about flying craft without delay.

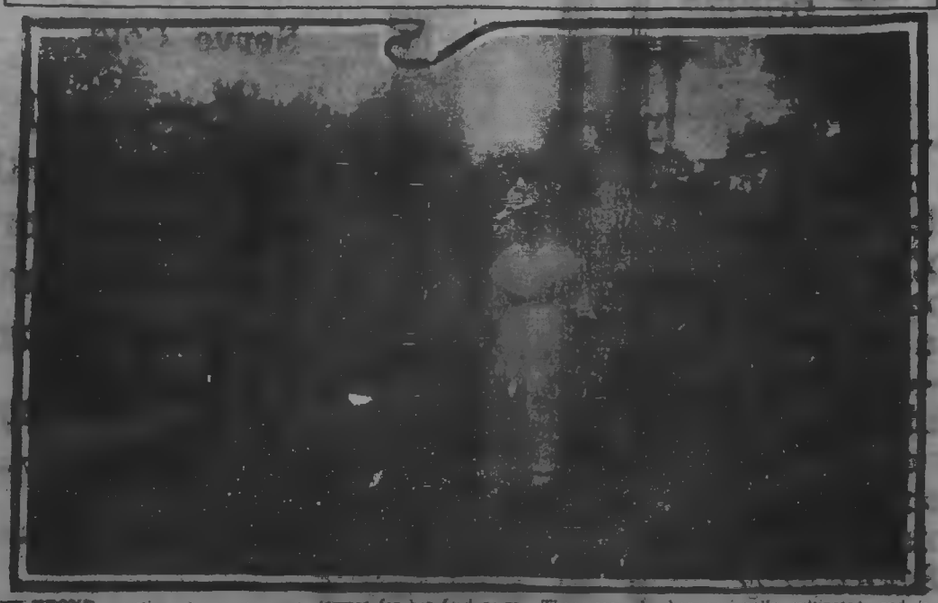
Talks About Her State.

"But I must explain something about my home State for you to understand why I expect to use a flying craft for prospecting. As every one knows, Arizona is the greatest copper State in the country, and great quantities of gold and other metals are obtained there. We are in the Bradshaw Range of mountains, but these have been pretty well looked over. However, there is a certain range across a sixty mile desert beyond Hillsdale which is full of rich ores, particularly gold, which never has been prospected, simply because it is almost inaccessible. Hopi Indians, from the reservation, probably the hardiest people on this continent to-day, have made their way across this desert and have returned with rock which they have chipped from the cliffs with crude instruments.

"This has been assayed and carefully examined and has led the mining men of our part of the country to believe that somewhere in those mountains are veins of gold which would yield more than $1,000 worth of gold to the ton. If such a place could be located it would mean practically untold wealth for the finder. Metallurgists from the Smithsonian Institution and other places have repeatedly studied the character of Arizona and have stated that they believed that the world's greatest upheaval occurred there. The metals we have found already would support this contention, but we believe that even more productive mines will be found once we obtain the means to prospect in the places now beyond our reach, because we cannot carry across the deserts sufficient food and water to sustain us and our burros back and forth and while we are in the mountains.

"This particular desert is composed of the finest kind of sand, and in it one sinks to the knees. My idea is that if a person were able to manipulate an airplane, were familiar enough with its mechanism to repair any mishaps and could carry sufficient supplies, he or she could cross that desert in a very short time without inconvenience, and have all the food and water carried left at the end of the journey for the use of the prospector while in the mountains."

WIFE OF NORTH CAROLINA'S GOVERNOR 'DOING HER BIT'



BEYOND question the most novel garden combination in North Carolina of vegetables and flowers is in the grounds of the Governor's Mansion at Raleigh, and the gardener is no less a personage than the wife of Governor Thomas W. Bickett. She has most happily and artistically blended the useful and the agreeable, and has utilized the terrace for her food crops. There are in vigorous growth squash, tomato, butterbean, cucumber, pepper, snap bean, lettuce and other vegetables, these hob-nobbing with the gorgeous canna, dahlia, shasta daisy, rose and other flowers. The butterbean vines have gone their limit by climbing to a height of sixteen feet on the porches on two sides of the spacious building. Mrs. Bickett's table is daily supplied from her garden, which she has personally cultivated, and in which she and the Governor have great pride. In the photograph she is shown with tomatoes and roses at her right, squash and snapbean plants to the left. She rejoices that she can "do her bit" in this way. Both she and Governor Bickett are zealous in their efforts to do all that Uncle Sam thinks should be done to press the war to a most successful conclusion along all lines.

Making Filet Lace Foundation

TO make the square net for filet lace you fix either to a nail in the wall or to a heavy pincushion with a pin a ten inch loop made of very strong linen thread, as per instructions in last week's lesson, and then you make two loops in the big loop. See Fig. 1.

Take the loop off the mesh needle, turn the work and start again with a new row, increasing with a loop at the row's end until you get the number of loops you wish. (B C, Fig 1.)

This will make the width you wish your filet square to be on the diagonal.

Then to decrease your square you make one row without the extra loop. (See

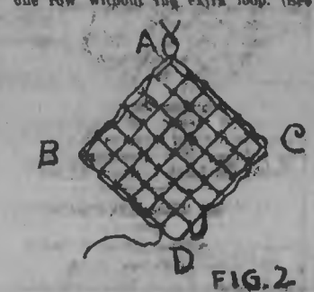

FIG. 2

Fig 1, A B. Then you continue decreasing a loop on each row. You do this by putting two loops in one knot.

When there are only two loops left you square. (See Fig. II, Fig. D.)

Square filet net. (See Fig. 1.) Begin connect them together.

You fix in A 'a long extra loop and you make two loops or three knots in this large loop. Turn the work and start again with a new row, increasing a loop at each row's end until you get the number of loops you wish (B C) and one more. You make one row without increasing. Then you continue, decreasing with a loop at each row. For the decreasing you assemble two loops in one knot. When only two loops remain you assemble them with a knot (see D, Fig. 2). The square net is thus made.

III.) You start in the same way as for the square net. When you have the width you wish (see A, B, Fig. 3) you continue the work by increasing one loop on one side and decreasing one loop on the other side in order that the number of loops remain the same on B C and B C (Fig. 3). You have to watch this increase, which has to be made on the same side all the time. It is necessary for beginners to fix a color thread at one of the edges to remember which side is which.

When the band of filet has a good length (A C and not B B), you have to make the other corner b C D, Fig 3), the same work as for the second part of the square net (i. e., explained above, decreasing one loop in every row, Fig. II., B C B). You take two loops together in one stitch to close corners.

Outdoor Sleeping Garb

ONCE I envied a woman who could make a "pie" bed and sleep in it outdoors, clad only in a crepe de Chine nightgown and a lace breakfast cap. But not now! I have tried it.

Sleeping out of doors is beneficial. It must be done, however, in proper clothes and coverings or not at all. A canvas army bed is best, with army blankets above and below the body. If anything, the blankets underneath are more important.

A "pie" make is essential—that is, a bunching of the bed clothes around the sides and bottom to form a ridge. The bed clothes are rolled up to form this edge and the sleeper lies in a kind of hollow.

Best To Be "Tucked In."

It is impossible to get into a good "pie" bed alone. The sleeper must crawl in and have another person roll up the last section of the edge and throw over the whole bed a large blanket and tuck it in securely, bottom and sides. This blanket preserves the "pie" and holds the sleeper much of a prisoner.

Sleeping out of doors, even on a summer night, is foolhardy in an ordinarily made bed. If you do not believe that lying beneath the sky or on an open porch is colder than sleeping in any bedroom, no matter how many open windows there are, just try it and see!

The night garments are important. Crepe de Chine nighties and lace caps won't do any more than will satin dancing slippers in a rainstorm.

I bought extra long white cashmere stockings and elderdown slippers, or "foot warmers," and wore them every night. Instead of a nightgown, three and a half yards of the softest white flannel I could find—the kind they use for little babies' bands and petticoats—made one robe.

Sort of Sleeping Bag.

I folded the material across the middle of the length of yards and sewed, from the ends, both sides to within about ten inches of the top or fold, much as you would make a bag. The bottom was turned by hand into a small hem, and out of the top I cut a round hole just large enough to let my head pass through. Be careful not to make this too large or your neck will be cold. The edges should be whip-stitched and the sides of the bag should be done by hand, so that the robe will be soft and comfortable no matter how you lie in it.

This slipped on over the head makes a garment that will not work up around the body during sleep. I suppose that is because it is too narrow and heavy. It is also long enough, three and a half yards, with which to wrap your feet in if you are silly enough to vote the stockings and warmers.

Warmth for the Arms.

A soft white crocheted woollen shawl or scarf in stole fashion had never justified its existence, and this I folded lengthwise and crocheted the edges together from the ends toward the middle. This left about sixteen inches open, or about the width of my chest and shoulders. After the robe of flannel had been slipped on over my head I thrust my arms into this reconstructed shawl and had a soft, warm covering for my arms and the back of my neck and shoulders.

There remained only my head and the front of my throat. Of a heavy quality of silk crepe I fashioned a headpiece not unlike an English judge's wig. That is, I fitted a piece across my forehead, covered the whole head to the nape of the neck and had two long pieces coming over my ears and crossing beneath my chin. These tabs were lined beneath the ears with pieces of the soft white goods of the robe.

The point in sleeping out of doors is to have the whole body warm and protected against penetrating dampness. In this get-up I sleep out summer and winter.

The only distinction I make between the seasons is in the number and weight of the blankets beneath and over me. Of course I have a large waterproof covering for damp or wet nights. If the rain is heavy or drives in some one drags my cot into the house.

One would naturally have two or three sleeping outfits. All my materials are washable.

HOW TO BEAUTIFY THE HOME

A WOMAN who loves her home and takes pride in it is always adding something to its beauty and decoration.

Banished are the whatnots of a decade or two ago, that cluttered up the different rooms and which even troubled the children, for I remember hearing one complain, "There are too many things in this house, mother; they worry me."

But there are many features of room decoration that become faded or that become too worn to continue using. New ones have to be found to replace them. Then, too, new kinds of house lighting and advanced ideas in furnishing bring out new ideas.

Every one knows the copper covers to the electric light bulbs which are used for drop or wall lights. These often need, in the schemes of decoration, a softening shade. A lovely throw to cover a copper lamp shade is a circle of silk covered with a square of heavy gold colored net, with an applique design of grapes and leaves made of silk, the grapes stuffed with cotton and the leaves embroidered on their veins and the stems piped over a heavy cord. Gold bull fringe dropping from the corners of a large square lamp shade of net weights it so it does not get askew.

Besides the large square cushions, covered with all sorts of lovely brocade silks, satins and velvets to harmonize with the covering of the day beds which are now a feature of so many homes, there are the little round pillows which fill in the spaces and give variety to the mass of pillows that one sees on divans, couches, lounges and the long, low rocking chairs. Some of these are tufted in quilting effects, some are a pretty patchwork of checkerboard squares.

In padded embroidery such as is used on the lamp shade and the checkerboard cushion the padding is done with cotton wool, and the stems are piped over with thick, but not heavy, piping cord.

CRUDE THOUGHTS FROM THE EDITORIAL PEN

MAKING HOMES

How true it is as the Milwaukee Journal expresses it, that in family life, in the real home, the highest qualities of character may be developed. There is a force in family affection that makes and keeps the heart tender to all. It banishes selfishness, jealousy and malice. In happy home life cruelty finds no place. Even animals feel the benefit of the tender heart. We need, and need greatly, more good will to all with whom we have to do. We need to know how to make allowances for failures in others to make concessions to the wishes and conveniences of others. The friendly give and take of family life tends to make one more fitted for living in the community.

Happy, well-ordered homes are the foundations of society, a solid basis on which to build a state. Home making is something beyond and superior to mere housekeeping. It is a high calling. It requires noble traits of character and fine executive ability and real wisdom. The responsibility of the home making does not devolve on one alone. Every member of the family has his or her share. Friends are dear, strangers have a certain claim on us, but the members of our family are nearer and dearer. Give of your love, your help your sympathy and comfort to your own family first and most. Those with happy homes are more able to give from the heart to others in need. No one can tell how far the influence of a happy home will go.

* *

Don't be cross and hateful because everything in the world don't move to suit you. Of course you are a great deal smarter than any one else, and are justly entitled to more recognition. While you are fully aware of your attainments your neighbor, who is dull of comprehension, has not found out that you are more than an ordinary individual. You have doubtless told him different more than once, yet in his dullness he has failed to comprehend the many brilliant points you know yourself to be possessed of. So do not kick because you are not appreciated. The best thing you can do is to get a divorce from your big head, come down from your high perch, and be a sensible everyday American.

THE GLADNESS OF NATURE

It is our opinion that the new year ought to begin with spring. That sweet, fresh budding season, when the spirit of newness is just awakening from its long sleep and begins with magic power its work of revival, breathing new life and energy into every vein of nature and thrilling the heart of mankind with new joys, new hopes, new aspirations. The soul that can remain insensible to the charm of spring is indeed dull and heavy even unnatural. Howthorne says, "From such a soul the world must hope no reformation of its evil, no sympathy with the lofty faith and gallant struggles of those who contend in his behalf." How joyously the birds are singing this morning and why should they not, for the blighth and decay of winter is passing away and ere long the earth will be arrayed in the full bloom and glory of springtime. Already the air, so soft and balmy, bears the fragrance of delicate blossoms, and the drowsy bee murmurs of newborn delights. Bryant says in his poem on "The Gladness of Nature."

Is this a time to be cloudy and sad,
When our Mother Nature laughs around,
When even the deep blue heaven looks glad
And gladness breaths from the blossoming ground?"

Surely our hearts should respond to the gladness of nature, and we should not only be glad, but we should feel deeply thankful for all these blessings. For are they not but so many expressions of divine love and tenderness?

A COLLECTION OF DON'TS.

Don't turn away a child when he comes to you for comfort and sympathy in a childish grievance and then expect him to love you and confide in you when he reaches difficulties of mature life.

Don't let the cares of the work-a-day world absorb all your sweetness and strength. Take time to be young with the children, to romp with them, to rejoice with them, to read with them, to love them.

Don't become careless in your dress. Adorn yourself for your husband; give him the happiness of finding a lovely woman, as well as a loving woman and a good housekeeper.

Don't make the mistake of believing that you are too handsome or too ugly to be benefitted by careful grooming and dressing.

Don't worry. Work, do your very best, and having done that, laugh away the difficulties to be met and enjoy the rest and happiness you have earned.

Don't be cross; it upsets the children; it distracts your husband; it makes you prematurely old and ugly.

Don't make too many points of difference with a child. Remember the cardinal virtues, be firm in teaching these, but be blind to the little faults and foolishness that time will cure without constant fretting on your part.

Don't wear a frowning face about the house. A mother's smile is the sunshine of the home.

Don't send a child who is afraid into the dark alone. Bear with his infirmity considerately and tenderly until he outgrows it.

Don't forget that children learn by asking questions, and they have a right to sensible answers.

Don't forget that what seems very foolish to you may be of vital importance to your child.

Don't laugh at a child's fears and fancies; try to understand them. If they are false, try to show him the truth.

Don't sacrifice the home to an exaggerated sense of neatness. The home is for the inmates and it cannot be enjoyed if a displaced book or chair calls forth a storm of reproach.

HAIL TO THE HIGHLANDERS

Above the rolling drums is heard
The tune of Bonny Doon.
And Annie Laurie keeps her trust
Beneath the misty moon.
The Flowers of the Forest fall,
And rocky road and glen
Are ringing to the tramping feet
Of Cameron's marching men

The Campbells they are coming, too
By gloomy lochs and braes,
And Afton Water gently flows
Through Summer's golden haze.
The melancholy pibrochs call
The scattered clans again
From miles of heather wild and wet,
And sheep-folds gray with rain.

For lo! the pipes are all awake
And playing as of yore
They played before the Highland chiefs
On Scotia's ancient shore.
The flash of tartan plaid is seen
Along the front in France
Wherever hearts beat high and strong and dauntless troops advance.

The crimson cross, the tricolor,
And the star-flag are unfurled.
And charging side by side to bring
Salvation to the world.
And the Kilties blow the skirling pipes
Until they're out of breath,
To cheer the Allied Armies on
To victory or death.

When Lebas Dared Death.

In 1576 the granite obelisk that stood sentinel before the palace of Rameses III., at Luxor, for more than thirty centuries was taken to Paris. Its erection in the Place de la Concorde was marked by a fine example of civic courage. It had been brought from Egypt by the engineer Lebas in a river boat especially constructed at Toulon to navigate the Nile and the Seine. This boat was towed through the sea by a warship. When the cables used in raising the obelisk in its position in Paris were strained almost to breaking Lebas placed himself at once under the enormous stone as it began to move. If a single cable had broken all would have been over with the engineer. Explaining his hardihood, Lebas said it was to show the crowd of onlookers that he was sure of his calculations. A single error and he would have been crushed, and he preferred a tragic end to dishonor. "This," said Le Cri de Paris, "was before our day of interviews, and Lebas occupied only a few lines in the Constitutionel, no more, no less than the periodical adventures of the sea serpent."

The Graham Bread Myth.

Most people suppose they are getting more nutrition in graham or whole wheat bread than they get in white bread, Another mistake, says the Kansas City Star. This isn't a matter of guesswork, for there are elaborate tables worked out after the most thorough experimentation in laboratories and published, for instance, in Dr. E. A. Locke's book on "Food Values."

Roughly, food is valued in accordance with its fuel contents, which is figured in calories. A pound of brown bread contains about 1,050 calories, a pound of rye bread 1,180, a pound of gluten bread 1,160, a pound of graham bread 1,210, a pound of whole wheat bread 1,140 and a pound of ordinary white bread 1,215. The white bread has more nourishment to the pound than any other kind. The notion that milling deprives it of its nutriment is fiction.

Fine Art In Candle Making.

The making of candles is not ordinarily considered a fine art, but the Italians have made it such. The distinctively Italian votive taper is made by hand. The materials are pure beeswax, which is kneaded and tempered and mixed with a secret ingredient to retard combustion and which has special Egyptian cotton for wicks. The cotton, too, is treated with chemicals to keep it from feeding too fast. Small candles are molded. Large ones are made by rolling up sheets of wax. That gives the candle great strength and enables it to stand erect when a molded candle would bend under the heat. After the candle is fashioned it goes to the decorators, men who are skilled in the use of the brush, and when it leaves their hands it is a work of art.

Dishes and Divorce.

If, as one clever writer avers, most divorces start over the breakfast cups how very important is the selection of one's china. For, despite the time honored legend that would have us believe the way to a man's heart is through his stomach, it is quite certain that beauty of the eyes goes as far toward promoting happiness as does digestion. Often they are one and the same thing. So in providing pretty tableware one never knows what dire calamities may be averted.

"Living up" to a fine bit of china, a good picture or piece of rare old silver has its advantages, not the least of which is the lasting pleasure of owning something really beautiful.—Mother's Magazine.

Drunkenness among women in England has decreased more than half since the war began.

Texas Pastor Mixes Drinks For Soldiers

FORT BLISS, Tex.—"For drinks that touch the spot, we can beat the world." Such is the declaration of Rev. Ora J. Cohee, the champion drink mixer and dispenser of Fort Bliss, Tex. Lieut. Cohee is the chaplain of the Thirty-fourth infantry.

"Our chaplain drove the devil from behind the canteen bar and has taken the place himself," said one of Cohee's admirers.

From the fortifications Cohee has erected it looks like he would hold the position against all comers. He is reputed to be all-round fighter; he is a dead shot, a boxer and wrestler of ability.

Chaplains are supposed to be non-combatant, but Lieut. Cohee is known as the "Fighting Chaplain." He comes of fighting blood and doesn't run from difficulties either spiritual of physical. He understands how to mix enough wholesome amusement with affairs of the army to make life a joy for the soldiers under his care. He is a theatrical manager, conducting movie shows seven nights in the week. On Sunday nights he gives a movie as well as preaches.

The chaplain is also manager of the baseball team and manager of the amusement company, organized among soldiers for amateur theatricals which puts on a show every Monday, Wednesday and Saturday night. He conducts night schools practices on the range, has charge of the Y.M.C.A., calls on the sick, and is superintendent of the army exchange.

"It is necessary to learn from the enemy many times," said Rev. Cohee, when asked about dispensing drinks at the canteen. "It has always seemed to me that if the saloons could furnish tempting drinks it is up to us to do the same thing, except take the sting out of the drinks. Our exceptional success at the canteen is due to the fact that we have drinks better than anybody else can mix, with no ill effects attached. The boys like them and they are refreshing.

Sir William Hearst, the Premier of Ontario, fears that shortage of food supplies will hinder the Allies in winning the war.

"We must look calmly and fearlessly at the present situation. Unless there is greater thrift, economy and conservation of food, there will be a shortage of supplies to Great Britain and her allies that will hinder her chances of winning the war," said Premier Hearst.

ARMY OF CROWN PRINCE OPENS NEW ATTACK ON FRENCH LINES AT VERDUN

Strong Offensive On Three Mile Front Reported---French More Active in Belgium---Enemy Repulsed With Heavy Losses---Berlin Claims Capture of 1300 Russians.

PARIS, August 7.—Heavy fighting broke out to-day in the Verdun sector.

Following a heavy bombardment the forces of the German Crown Prince launched a strong attack against the French lines on a front of approximately three miles on the left bank of the Meuse River.

The War Office this afternoon reported heavy German losses in the attack.

The assault was launched early this morning between Avocourt Wood and Hill 304. French guns poured a heavy fire upon the attacking forces and they were driven back to their trenches.

Renewed activity was also reported among the French forces in Belgium. Violent artillery engagements were in progress there, the War Office stated, especially about Bixchoote and Hurtebise.

In the region of Craonne there were no infantry actions. In the Champagne, the French made successful raids, bringing back many prisoners.

SAFE PASSAGE FOR HOSPITAL SHIPS.

MADRID, August 7.—Germany has agreed to the safe passage of British hospital ships from France to England, providing they carry Spanish officers aboard, guaranteeing that they will transport only sick and wounded from France, the Heraldo stated to-day. Great Britain has thanked Spain, for her assistance in making this arrangement with Germany.

BRITISH AIRMEN ARE AGAIN TAKING PHOTOGRAPHS OF THE GERMAN LINES

LONDON, August 7. — The rain having ceased, British airmen have taken to the air and Field Marshal Haig's latest report says they carried out successful bombing raids and other work. The latter activity probably was the photographing of the new German positions and the gaining of other information preparatory to another effort by the British. German airmen tried to check this activity. Five aeroplanes of the Teuton forces were sent down and three others were forced to descend out of control. Only one British machine is reported missing.

Reuter's correspondent at British headquarters telegraphs as follows:

The Hun is very mechanical in his methods, and his desire for certain places seems irresistible, and, as far as one can see, not always governed by purely tactical reasons. The Germans on Saturday night heavily counter-attacked Hollebeke. Owing to the dense weather our gunners did not see the signals, and the enemy obtained a footing in the village. Runners were sent back with messages, and our artillery, with wonderful promptitude, put down a barrage upon the Germans. When this had lasted awhile the range was lengthened, thus cutting off the back area, and our fault was that when daylight came the ground was seen to be strewn with nuls was that when daylight came the ground was seen to be strewn with German dead.

One might have thought that this experience would have been enough for the Hun. but Sunday night his storm troops again attacked Hollebeke, after a heavy bombardment, to which our guns terrifically replied. A few of the enemy may have reached our wire, but none certainly got further. The attempt was another costly failure. It will be interesting to see now, after the Germans have thrown their waves against this spot, whether indeed they mean to repeat their Verdun tactics against Hollebeke.

Sunday afternoon a big movement of troops behind their lines was plainly visible, and our artillery duly attended to these columns of route.

The weather continues fine and dry, although more misty than our airmen and gunners could wish.

THE GERMANS ARE FAST LOSING CONFIDENCE

LONDON, August 7.—If Berlin, under the pressure of Austria and the disaffected elements in Germany, puts forth a serious, direct peace proposal in the autumn, in order to avoid another winter of war, as is almost universally expected here, it is likely to get a cold reception in London and Paris unless it promises definitely and positively the restoration of all conquered territory, including Alsace and Lorraine, and ample indemnity for the damage done.

It is beyond question that the Germans are fast losing confidence in their ability to withstand another winter of war. Reports to this effect are coming with increased frequency from a variety of sources. Thus the Amsterdam Vescherij Courant, after citing other testimony, says:

"We saw a letter yesterday from a big German manufacturer who has often visited the Kaiser, saying that peace can be expected speedily. Last week another German of considerable importance declared that Germany does not intend to begin a new winter campaign because the country is unable to carry it through to the end."

ALLIES ARE A UNIT FOR VICTORY.

In proportion, however, as German necessities, hopes and plans for peace increase, Great Britain and France stiffen in their resistance to all peace efforts which are not accompanied by an initial assurance of restoration of territories and reparation for losses.

Telegrams exchanged among the rulers, premiers and war chiefs of the various belligerent powers on the third anniversary of the war unanimously breathe courage and a determination not to stop short of victory.

SAVE THE CROP AND WIN THE WAR BY SPEEDY HARVEST HELP

The Crisis has come; the crops are ripe and men must be had at once to help harvest them in good condition.

Food Controller Hanna says there is a food situation in Britain that demands every ounce Ontario can send.

He says 10,000 volunteer workers are needed to help gather Ontario's bumper crop.

One hundred are expected from Peterborough.

A local committee of the Organization of Resources Committee has been appointed for Peterborough—composed of Messrs T. F. Matthews, Chairman; Edgar Worth and W. R. Breyfogle. This committee will meet in the Council Committee Room to-night and several of the Aldermen will also be present to help.

All citizens are asked and urged to cooperate—with informal advice and active assistance.

We must face the situation. The need of food is great. The need of help to harvest the crop is great.

A hundred men from Peterborough are asked. Surely we can supply that many.

Government Without "Preda-tory" Interests

If Liberals Win, Says Pamphlet Distributed in Winnipeg, the Liberal Government Will Be a People's Government.

BLUNDERS DOWN BORDEN

WINNIPEG, Aug. 7.—"Treason my lords, treason," shouts an anonymous pamphlet with which the western Liberal delegates were supplied before the session opened to-day. Excusing its own appearance on the ground that there is now no Liberal press, and that the so-called Liberal papers are now being used to "knife Liberalism at the vitals," the pamphlet declares that there is only one way to "save the soul of Canada," and that is to elect a government not controlled by the "predatory interests." The first two syllables of the word predatory could be cut off and the meaning of the assertion remain the same.

The document goes on to declare that the Borden government cannot win because of its fiscal mistakes. "If the Liberals win with a popular majority everywhere except that part dominated by Toronto, in other words everywhere but in the habitat of the big interests, the Liberal government will be a people's government."

Th pamphlet further accuses the "Winnipeg Free Press coterie" and other Liberal papers with plotting to destroy the party. "As to the method," it says, "of disrupting the Liberals, there is just one way, that is by getting Liberals and pretended Liberals within the Liberal party to play the traitor."

One of the first resolutions to go before the committee of the conventions is proposed by Miss Lynnflett, of Winnipeg, and calls for the equality of women with men in homestead rights. It will be presented by Hon. T. H. Johnson, Minister of Public Works in Manitoba.

Western Liberals United To Carry War To Victory

WINNIPEG, Aug. 7. — They sang "God Save the King" at 10.30 a.m. today. Premier Norris, as temporary chairman, made a speech and the Liberal convention was off to a good start.

"You talk about selective draft," said Norris. "I think this is a selective draft here before me. We have representatives from four provinces, each of which has a Liberal government, a tribute to its intelligence. I ask everyone of you to forget that you are at a Liberal convention and consider only the general good of Canada."

Mr. Norris declared that provincial differences could be wiped away by getting together in convention ottener. He disclaimed any prejudice against Eastern Canada, which," he added, "has practically asked us to help them do things. This convention," he said, "should clear a lot of barnacles off and if we can prove ourselves above partisanship, Winnipeg will be the hub from which the affairs of Canada will be conducted."

The Call From Flanders.

Premier Norris went on to pay an eloquent tribute to the thousands of Canadians helping on the fields of Flanders, that Canada might enjoy her freedom. "Their blood," he said, "is calling to us, will you leave us alone? There may be something suggested at this convention as to properly looking after the wives and dependents." (Loud applause.)

Mr. Norris further declared that there is no machine at the convention. He for one, did not know what was going to happen. The convention was its own master. Let every man accept his own responsibility.

C. M. Hamilton of McTaggart, Sask., was then elected chairman and Clifford B. Riley, of Calgary, Alta., vice chairman. The cheirman called numerous notables to the platform and the pro-Laurierites got applause.

Greeting to Oliver.

"There's the boy" declared the delegates with enthusiasm when Hon. Frank Oliver took his seat.

Dr. Molloy, the other Federal member from the west who stood by Laurier in the conscription fight, also got a great reception.

The convention cabled to Sir Douglas Haig, commander of British forces in Flanders, unanimous resolution of continued support toward winning the war.

Dr. Michael Clark and several other conscriptionist Liberals, have left Winnipeg for Ottawa, intimating that their presence at the convention is useless.

KINGSTON GIRL IS HEIRESS TO $50,000 LEFT BY SOLDIER

Gunner Galloway of the 22nd Battery, With Military Honours From Three Nations Died on Home Journey

FORTUNE TO FINANCEE

Special to The Examiner:

KINGSTON, Ont., August 7.—Miss Edith Villard, of Napanee, Ont., became heiress to a fortune of fifty thousand dollars on Sunday when her soldier hero, Gunner Galloway, of the 22nd Battery, died on an hospital train between Halifax and Quebec, on his way home from Flanders where he was fatally wounded. Galloway won the Victoria Cross, French Legion of Honour, and Belgian Cross for Gallantry. Before leaving for France nearly two years ago he made his will in favour of his fiancee. The estate consists of negotiable securities and two well stocked farms in the west.

Labourer Had Ribs Fractured

Denis Guerin, 120 Sophia street, an employee of the Leonard Construction Company, was painfully injured this morning at nine o'clock at the Quaker Oats plant.

Mr. Guerin, who was unloading a car of lumber paused for a moment apparently, and leaned against a board which had been placed across the door. The board slipped, throwing him to the ground. Comstock's ambulance was called and the man taken to St. Joseph's Hospital, where Dr. McNulty found several of his left ribs to be fractured and his left arm badly broken.

Died Of Injuries He Received At Burketon

J. F. Aiken Fell Beneath Wheels of Special Train—Had Lunch and Was Running to Catch His Coach—Spent Week-end at 'Cayugeon

A TORONTO TRAVELLER

J. F. Aiken, a traveller for the Dominion Glass Company, of Toronto, died this morning at the Nicholls Hospital from injuries received in an accident at Burketon Station last night.

Mr. Aiken had, with an excursion from Toronto, of which city he is a resident, spent the week-end and Civic Holiday in Bobcaygeon, and was returning home by a special train. At 10 o'clock it stopped at Burketon, and Mr. Aiken jumped off and had lunch, and in catching the train which had started to move, was thrown under the wheels, and two coaches ran over him.

Fatal Injuries.

Mr. Aiken was placed on the midnight train for Peterboro, where Dr. McArthur of Blackstock rendered first aid. He was then taken to the Nicholls Hospital, where it was found by Dr. McArtnur and Drs. Cameron and Carmichael, who were called, that his injuries were fatal. He had his left arm, part of his right hand, and half of his left foot amputated, and his skull badly fractured. He died at five o'clock.

The late Mr. Aiken, who is a middle aged man, leaves a wife and several children, residing in Toronto.

"MOUNTAIN MADNESS"

New Serial Story by Anna Alice Chapin Will Commence in Thursday's Issue of the Examiner

"Mountain Madness" is the name of the Examiner's new serial story, the first instalment of which will appear in Thursday's issue. High up in the Southern mountains, in a spot where the folk are wild and primitive and lawless, is a place where four trails cross. The trails of four young lives also made their crossing at this point. They met, they were shaken in the shock of meeting, and then went forward again with new understanding, with new joy.

If you have read "The Eagle's Mate" you will enjoy this book. The scene offers a splendid opportunity to the writer's skill—a skill that is adequate to the task. It is a story of the mountain heights and of the depths that lie between—and the like in the souls of men and women. There is action in every line of the story. There is, too, a fascinating, psychological study. Best of all, there is a genuine heart interest that is delightfully human.

Do not miss the first instalment in Thursday's issue of the Examiner.

Admiralty Changes Only Half Measures

Special to the Examiner.

TORONTO, Aug. 7.—A delayed cable from London, dated yesterday, says:

Official announcement was made at the Admiralty to-night that Admiral Sir Cecil Burney, second sea lord, had been replaced by Vice-Admiral Sir Rosslyn Wemyss. Alan Garrett Anderson, hitherto vice-chairman of the Wheat Commission, succeeds Sir Eric Campbell Geddes, the new First Lord of the Admiralty, as controller of naval construction.

The changes are attracting much attention, and are interpreted as the first step in a re-organization which Sir Eric Campbell Geddes, First Lord of the Admiralty, was appointed to carry out.

In quarters where the existing Admiralty methods are regarded as unsatisfactory, the present step is denounced as a "procrastinatory half-measure," and it is declared the change ought to have been so complete as to "give the country a resolute and energetic Admiralty permeated by an offensive spirit."

Fine Success Of Mr. Geo. Kenyon

Mr. George Kenyon, the talented Organist and Choirmaster of Knox Church, is to be congratulated on having been awarded the Diploma of Licentiate of Music at the McGill University examinations, held recently. Mr. Kenyon took a high standing, securing second place among those who wrote.

Mr. Kenyon has the reputation of being an industrious student and will doubtless, 'ere long, add the title of Mus. Bac. to his name.

FOOD CONTROLLER WANTS 100 PETERBORO' MEN TO HELP HARVEST THE CROPS

Manufacturers' Association Has Been Called Upon to Enable Workmen to Assist Farmers During Present Critical Month--Ald. Worth Calls Attention of Council to Hon. W. J. Hanna's Appeal.

LOCAL MANUFACTURERS MEET TO-NIGHT

Through the Canadian Manufacturers' Association the Hon. W. J. Hanna, Food Controller, has applied for the labour required to harvest the crops in this province. Peterborough has been asked to supply one hundred men, and to notify the secretary of the Association of this city's decision not later than to-morrow, Wednesday.

This is the most direct, concise, and will doubtless prove the most efficacious appeal that has been sent forth soliciting, practically imploring, support for the harvesting of the bumper crops that are fast ripening in Ontario's fields. The public men who are anxious that this labour crisis shall be surmounted have intimated to the Manufacturers that they are the only organization that can save a situation that has not been obscured or underestimated at least in these columns. And the Manufacturers' Association while refusing to assume the responsibility which they say belongs elsewhere, have immediately undertaken to co-operate with the Food Controller to the best of their resources.

Hence, Mr. T. F. Matthews was simply notified that he has been delegated to organize whatever effort Peterborough decides to make, and Mr. W. R. Breyfogle and Alderman Edgar Worth have been asked to assist him.

MEETING TO-NIGHT.

A meeting of the local manufacturers will be held this evening in the committee room at the City Hall, and following Alderman's Worth's suggestion last night, members of the Council will attend. He pointed out that the Food Controller's request was so urgent it warranted the city's assistance by the cessation of all unnecessary work that the men so engaged might be rendered available for this duty. Alderman Worth said that the policemen might be relieved of their regular duties for a few weeks, and the patrolling of the city left to the firemen, thus enabling the police force to cooperate. It is expected that the manufacturers will give this appeal their serious consideration to-night.

In fact, they have already done so and stand committed by promises made early in the spring that they will open the way to any of their employees who will assist in harvesting the crops.

The Association's Letter.

Ald. Worth broached this subject last night by stating that he believed the communication from the Manufacturer's Association to its members was of sufficient importance to warrant introducing it to the Council. The letter and its enclosure follow.

Toronto, August 4, 1917.

E. Worth, Esq.,
Bonner-Worth Co., Limited,
Peterborough, Ont.

Dear Mr. Worth,—Enclosed you will find copy of a letter which Mr. Parsons and myself have sent to Mr. T. F. Matthews, of the Matthews-Blackwell Co., Limited, of your city. We have the authority of the Honorable W. J. Hanna to say that he is appointed chairman of your locality, and we have the same authority to say that you are constituted one of his assistants for such time as may be necessary to carry this important work through to a conclusion.

We will ask you, therefore, to report yourself immediately to him. In case he should be away from home, please take the responsibility on your own shoulders in co-operation with Mr. W. R. Breyfogle, whose name appears at the foot of the attached copy of letter.

Yours faithfully,
G. M. MURRAY,
Secretary.

(Enclosure.)

Toronto, August 4, 1917.

T. F. Matthews, Esq.,
Matthews-Blackwell, Limited,
Peterborough, Ont.

Dear Sir,—Re men for Ontario harvest, Sir William Hearst, Premier of Ontario, and the Honourable W. J. Hanna Food Controller, have represented to us that the food situation is exceedingly serious. Confidential reports from England are very distressing. Britain must not be allowed to be starved outt, nor must our Allies at the front be left without the food necessary to carry on the fight. All eyes in Europe are turned expectantly to Canada to help relieve the food shortage. The crop in the west is a poor one. Ontario's crop is the largest ever, but owing to weather conditions crops which would ordinarily have followed one another in sequence, will all mature at the same time. Farmers cannot do the impossible. They will work from dawn to dark and their women folk will do the same, but despite their best efforts a considerable part of the crop will go to waste unless help in large quantities is immediately forthcoming.

In this emergency the Canadian Manufacturers' Association has been appealed to for help—in fact the authorities say we are the one organization that can now save the situation. On behalf of the situation we have refused to assume a responsibility which properly belongs elsewhere, but we have undertaken to do our best under the critical circumstances facing Canada and the Empire. Nor will it help matters any to say that if the farmers offer sufficiently high wages they can obtain all the help they want. The fact of the matter is they are being swept off their feet by the extraordinary condition and nothing but quick and thorough organization will get them anywhere. The crop, every bit of it, must be saved at any cost.

Immediately upon receipt of this letter we beg of you to call together all large employers of labour in your locality, explain the situation to them and get each of them to round up all the men he can, preferably those who have had farm experience, and put it up to them to do what is clearly their duty. No sacrifice that can be made by any man who has not gone to the front would be comparable with the sacrifice that our soldiers are making. To help the soldiers, therefore, and to keep England from starving, all of us can surely drop our regular occupations for a month and do our bit to win the war by working in the harvest field. We say it advisedly that it would be better to close down all except the absolutely essential industries of Ontario for a period of six weeks, rather than jeopardize our common cause by letting any of Ontario's crop go unharvested.

So please form your local committee, secure the services of a local secretary to enroll volunteer farm workers and report all names to F. C. McRae, Norwood, who will see that they are placed without loss of time on farms where their services are most urgently needed.

We may add that the number of men the Food Controller expects from your locality is 100, and through us he will want to hear by Wednesday whether your locality is going to supply the quota of farm help expected of it.

Just one word in conclusion—should you find that the securing of recruits is made difficult by the fact that the wages they will earn on the farm are less than they are earning in the factory, will you not ask employers, as a patriotic duty to make up the difference? We would not suggest such a course were we not convinced that it would be suicidal to allow any financial consideration to stand in the way of harvesting the entire crop.

Yours faithfully,
S. B. PARSONS, G. M. MURRAY,
President. Secretary.

PEACE HAS ITS CASUALTIES.

The barbarous German air-raids on England, with the big loss of life of men, and especially women and children, strike us with a new horror. The horror is all the greater because it is caused by gratuitous cruelty and lust of destruction. The actual loss of life is not the most deplorable feature, but the useless cruelty of its infliction.

In actual and usual loss of life by accident London suffers more than from Zeppelin raiders. Since the war began, in the London metropolitan area, 366 persons have been killed, and 1,092 injured in air raids. During the same period, according to a statement in parliament of the Home Secretary, 2,412 persons were killed, and 7,833 injured in ordinary street accidents in the same area of territory, a total of 9,976, or nearly seven times more casualties in the streets from ordinary accidental causes than the three years' total of casualties from the German brutes. This, however, should not lessen one iota our indignation at the gratuitous butchery of the Hun, or our determination to make him pay to the uttermost farthing for the indulgence of his heathenish impulses.

Governments are demanding of Labour the pound of flesh, in the way of service, but governments are not tumbling over each other to give labour recognition by fair representation.

A NEW GOVERNMENT.

The Kaiser's grandiloquent brag is in inverse ratio to the German achievements over which it is emitted When we read of the Hohenzollern Hun winning victories with his mouth and trumpetting triumphs that do not materialize, we should be diguasted by the futility of mere words and distrustful of their employment to cover lack of deeds.

Premier Borden should be one of the first to take the hint. He is a fine talker, but platitudes can easily be overdone, and at the best they cannot take the place of accomplishment. In his reply to the deputation from the "win the war" convention in windy Toronto, he made a beautiful reply—"Only by very real and very specific deeds can we win this war." Brave words, but words that anybody could say, but nobody with the power and authority of Sir Robert, to make his words mean something, more than "mere profession, hollow and futile," of which the Premier truthfully said, "we have had more than enough." Sir Robert!, after so much talk in the past, so much "mere profession" that has proven "hollow and futile," must not complain if a little salt is applied to a new instalment.

He makes a "pledge that both political parties "shall be fully and fairly represented in the government"—coalition—and it "shall include special representatives of the great agricultural interests and of labour." This is a tantamount to confessing that for the three strenuous years of the war these interests have not been adequately—only theoretically — not "specially" represented as they should be represented in every live government. We have had three years during which agriculture, the backbone of our war contribution, and labour, which has furnished nine-tenths of the fighting forces, have been virtually unrepresented in the Borden government.

Sir Robert Borden is understood to offer a coalition government; but "timeo Danaos et dona ferentes." He made one offer of coalition on conditions that repelled cooperation; he insisted on retaining a discredited element in his cabinet; and at the very time of his offer was laying, or had laid, pipes to "whitewash" a member to insure his retention in the government.

After past experience with a government, composed in part, as Sir Robert admits, of useless elements, we have no assurance that other simular elements will not be retained? And we are to also assume that the same weak leadership will be retained. Does not this present emergency, do not all the interests of Canada's participation in the war, demand that we shall have a new government outfit—lock, stock and barrel?"

General Haig's foirth year war talk: "We have proved to ourselves, to the enemy and to the world that we have the power to win success."

SUMMER PLEASURES AND DANGERS.

Hundreds of our citizens, like ducks, have taken to the water for their summer pleasures. There are rare summer pleasures at Stony Lake. There are also summer dangers. It is stated that many gasoline launches run at nights without lights. This is exceedingly dangerous and, at the same time, destructive of the pleasure of canoeing and boating. Lake residents go out in canoes and boats, especially at nights, to enjoy the coolness of the waters. They go out for pleasure, but their pleasure is marred if they have to keep their attention tense to avoid the moving launches careering through the darkness at reckless speed, without warning lights. Boat and canoe occupants have to keen on the alert when they hear the puffing of a motor boat, before they can see it, to avoid being run down. And, besides, some motor launches make reckless turnings and a good deal of commotion of the water to the risk of the overturn of small croft. The lakes are for the pleasareu of all, and no one kind of craft has the monopoly of the use of the waters at the expense of the peace of mind and safety; at the expense of others. The law requires that launches should carry lights and the requirements of the law should be carried out. The hot weather drives us to the lakes to enjoy ourselves; and nothing should be permitted that mars our pleasures without contributing to the pleasure of those committing offences, unless they have a streak of the German spirit of wanton disregard for others, and take pleasure in doing wrong.

Lloyd George chirps cheerfully, but he has earned the right to talk by having done and by doing something.

THE FOURTH YEAR.

We have entered upon the fourth year of the world's greatest war, still undecided, but with the all-round trend towards victory for the cause of liberty and civilization. The Mother Country and her self-governing dominions entered the war as the champion of justice and fair play to a minor nation whose territory had been violated and its rights and liberties outraged. Canada went into the war willingly and heartily, and the part we have played in the first three years, though with much sacrifice of manhood and means, has partial compensation in the credit the country has won and the glory of victory won in the field by Canada's soldiers. All this has had it price in the loss of precious ives, the darkening of many homes and the saddening of many hearts. Peterborough has suffered the loss of many lives, some of the best and most promising of our citizenship. Still the struggle goes on at home and abroad, and still the duty of doing our share in bringing victory faces us .Our people are still called upon to make sacrifices. We must continue to furnish munitions and food supplies, the latter in larger measure that ever before. We must supply more fighting men to keep our fighting forces up at the front and help them win the victory as they have so gallantly and nobly done in the past. We in Canada have done well; but we must not become weary in well-doing, nor can we sit down satisfied with the bit of our bit we have so creditably done, from the knitting of socks to the winning of battles. We enter our fourth year of war with undiminished determination to be with it, and in it, to the end. But we need wise guiding to show us the way and to put into play a winning share of our resources in means and men.

If the Government had as good a moral claim to continued existence as Parliament has, we could not complain.

FOREST FIRES.

We haven't, with all our forest wealth, any forest to waste by fire, and it is hasd to understand how any camper or sportsman can, unless he is a German, leave camp fires unquenched, with the almost certainty, in dry weather, of starting forest fires. The recent and perhaps still burning forest fires in British Columbia, owed their origin, it is said, to the neglect of campers to thoroughly extinguish a camp fire. A man, who is thoughtless enough to do this, is criminally careless. If he is not a German destructionist he does their work, for destruction is the German policy and practice; to destroy for destruction's sake, and lessen the resources of the enemy.

With these facts and with the recollection of the forest fire disaster of last summer in Northern Ontario in mind, it does not seem necessary to warn campers and sportsmen against carelessness, and urge the greatest precaution in making fires to prevent spread, and the most religious care to see that every spark of fire is extinguished before the spot is left. This would only take a few minutes, for there must be water where a camp is pitched The little time spent in leaving things safe would be well spent if it prevented forest fires such as we had last summer in the north, with such appalling destruction of life and property. It is estimated that the loss to Canada from forest fires, including loss of standing timber, country and village homes, destruction of undergrowth, injury to soil, etc., amounts to, from five millions to eight millions a year, and most of this destruction due to fires started by carelessness.

It is necessary to appeal in the most earnest manner to campers and tourists to see that there is no danger from the cooking fires they start, either in the manner of placing, or from neglect to extinguish them to the last and tiniest spark. In hot weather, after a long dry period, every inch of forest is like tinder, and even a lighted cigar end or cigarette end, or the still burning remains of a pipe carelessly thrown down or knocked out, may cause millions of dollars of loss of timber, crops and buildings, and possibly many valuable lives.

Nobody who values his or her life should venture into a canoe without knowing how to swim.

Accounts Passed By Finance Committee Of The City Council

The report of the Finance committee was passed by the Council last night as follows:

We recommend that the Relief Officer be directed to collect from John McDonald the amount that the city may be charged with for his maintenance in the hospital, and authorized to hand the account to the City Solicitor for collection.

We received a notice that Blanche Deline had been admitted to the Toronto General Hospital and that her maintenance had been charged to this city. We recommend that the hospital be notified that she is not and was not a resident of Peterborough, and that she came here from Kingston temporarily and also that, as she is a soldier's wife, she will have assigned pay and patriotic fund allowance from the Belleville branch to the amount of at least $30.00 a month.

We recommend that George W. Powell be given a refund of $7.50 of the amount he paid for a butcher shop license as he has gone out of business.

We recommend that the following accounts be paid:

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A Girl's Error

She Mistook a Rogue For an Honest Man.

By EDWARD T. STEWART

I am in a quandary. I had supposed I would marry Donald Chase, and now comes Oscar Richmond to mix me all up. Donald is steady, honorable, has excellent judgment; Oscar is handsome, full of sentiment, fascinating. I know I should remain true to Donald, but Oscar carries me right off my feet.

The question of money does not enter into the matter. Donald is doing very well, earning a fair salary and with a prospect of being a partner. Oscar is out of business just now. I don't exactly understand why. He is very reticent. I like reticence in a man; it bespeaks self control. Oscar can talk with me by the hour without revealing any of his affairs. Of course if he proposes to me I shall expect that he will tell me everything.

I have tried to get Donald to tell me why he distrusts Oscar. He says he doesn't himself know why. It is quite likely that his distrust is due to jealousy. Donald is so honorable that he would not like to believe himself capable of doing a rival an unjustice. He is unconscious that he is moved by jealousy.

I wonder who is this Girard Roberts he has brought to see us. He has known us but a few weeks, yet it seems that we have all been friends for years. It's strange how some people have a faculty of insinuating themselves at once into one's good graces. Already I call this man by his first name, and, though I have known Donald since I was sixteen years old, I still call him Mr. Chase.

I have sounded Girard Roberts as to what he thinks of Oscar Richmond. His reply was, "He's a bang up good fellow." That doesn't help me. But it's the most I can expect from Girard, who is all on the surface. Those people one becomes familiar with on short acquaintance seldom have any depth. I asked Girard what he thought of Donald and received the same reply, "He's a bang up good fellow too." I was served right for relying upon the opinion of such a lightweight person.

Girard Roberts seems to have plenty of money as well as a taste for jewelry. The other day Aunt Alida was showing him a diamond she wished to turn into funds. He told her to go among the jewelers, ask them to fix a price on it and he would give her $10 more than the highest bid. She did so and got a bid of $270 for the stone. Girard told her it was cheap at $300 and he would give her that for it. She accepted the offer. Oscar and I were present when the sale was made, and Girard laughingly told us that he would rely on us as witnesses in case aunty backed out. He didn't have the money with him, but said he would bring it the next afternoon at 5 o'clock.

When he called aunty was out. Oscar and I were in the library. Girard called to me to say to aunty when she came in that she would find the money for the diamond under a vase on the mantel in the parlor. I promised to do so.

Oscar asked me to go to walk with him. I consented; went upstairs to get my hat, and we walked to the park. When I returned I had forgotten all about telling aunty that the money for her diamond was on the parlor mantel. Indeed, I never thought of it till just before going to bed; then I told her. She went downstairs to get it. It was gone.

Everybody is dissatisfied with me, and I am dissatisfied with myself for being so thoughtless as to have left $300 so long in an exposed position. It has upset the whole household. The servants who consider themselves under suspicion are going about looking very glum.

Aunty is furious with me. I expected Girard would show his feelings toward me very decidedly. What a lovely fellow he is, after all! He told me not to give myself any concern about the matter; that doubtless the money would turn up, but if it did not there was no one to blame but himself since he should not have left so much money in such a place. He explained that he did not leave it with me because I was "flirting," as he called it, with Oscar and he didn't like to intrude upon us.

I asked him whom he suspected, and he said that since the front door stood unlatched and any one might have come in while we were at dinner or during the evening when we were all upstairs doubtless some person entered possibly for an ordinary purpose and, seeing the money, took it and left.

* * * * * * *

I have had a blow—an awful visitation! Donald Chase turns out to be the thief who took the bills from the mantel to pay for aunty's jewel. This morning when he was at business a constable called at his room with a search warrant and found the bills in his bureau drawer. To think that Donald, whom we have all known so long and considered the very soul of honor should have done such a thing!

How could he have taken the money without our knowing it? What Girard Roberts told me is the only thing that fits the case. Doubtless Donald called, came right in, was waiting for some of us, when he noticed the bills. He must have taken them and gone out without making himself known.

I am broken hearted by this discovery that Donald Chase is a common thief. Singular, isn't it, that a girl doesn't know she loves a man till he turns out to be a thief? That's the way with us women; we are always acting by contraries.

Not long ago I was uncertain about Oscar and thought Donald a splendid man. But I was fascinated with Oscar, and Donald seemed devoid of romance. Now that Donald is in trouble, through his own fault, I am giving him my heart.

Girard Roberts has just come in. He says that Donald has given bail for his appearance when the trial comes off and is now free. Girard says that, notwithstanding appearances are against Donald, he doesn't believe him guilty. "Then," I said, "I don't believe him guilty either." But the next minute I reproved myself for being influenced by this easy going man. Did he not say when I asked him his opinion of Donald before this matter occurred, "He's a good fellow too."

What's the use of considering the views of one who talks like that? I told Girard to tell Donald to come and see me, but he said he did not think Donald would until his innocence has been proved. I really believe there has been some mistake, but it is very hard to feel sure about it. It all happened so naturally—Donald's coming in just when the money was where he would see it—at least, who else could have come in?—and the bills being found in his bureau drawer. Oh, dear! I must stop thinking of the horrid thing or I shall go crazy.

One thing more I will say: After all, there is something just too lovely for anything in Girard Roberts saying that he doesn't believe Donald guilty. If any one should take anything of mine and it were found in his bureau drawer I couldn't be so generous as to attribute the theft to an error.

Donald has been to see me. He did not act or talk like a guilty man. What's more, he didn't seem to realize his awful position. I supposed that he was more sensitive. Though charged with stealing money that was intended for aunty, with whom he has been on friendly terms for years, to say nothing of his devotion to me, he seemed very unconcerned. When I learned he was downstairs I nerved myself for a very painful interview. For fear I should say the wrong thing I thought over what I should say. When I entered the room I dreaded to look at him. Indeed, I kept my eyes on the floor.

"Donald," I said, "you know how interested we all are that you should clear yourself of this horrible charge. We will all do anything in the world to help you—Aunty, I, Oscar"—

I looked up, and what was my surprise to see an amused look on Donald's face. Indeed, he was smiling.

Then he advanced, took my hand and gave it a gentle pressure.

"Don't be troubled, little girl," he said. "There are always wheels within wheels. There is also such a thing as being too smart. I have something to say to you. Had I not I would not have come to see you resting under the imputation of being a thief. Listen. From the first I suspected something wrong in your friend Oscar Richmond. From what I heard I believed him to be a thief. I introduced into this house hold Girard Roberts, who is really a detective"—

"A detective!"

"That's what he is. He laid a trap for Richmond and caught not Richmond, but me. He bought your aunt's diamond for the purpose of laying this trap. He put the bills to pay for it on the mantel as a decoy for Richmond. They were all marked, that he might prove them his property. Richmond took them, but, being a smart rogue and suspecting that we were on his track, sent a man with them to my room. This man represented himself as an old chum of mine, and my landlady permitted him to go to the room to wait for me. Once there, he put the money in my bureau drawer and went away. The next day Richmond arranged that a constable should go to my room to search for something he claimed he had lost. You know the result."

"But," I said, "Oscar Richmond did nothing criminal. You were trying to catch him, and he turned the tables on you."

"Wait a bit. Richmond was an accountant for a firm in San Francisco, from whom he skipped with $20,000. Roberts was employed by them to track him. My employing Roberts was a coincidence. Richmond's real name is MacEnery. He was arrested this morning and is now awaiting extradition papers to take him to San Francisco for trial."

And now I am alone in my room, trying to get settled down to the fact that I am myself. Oscar Richmond is not Oscar Richmond at all, but somebody else and a criminal. Donald Chase is not going to the penitentiary, but is to be my husband instead. Girard Roberts, who came to us with his apparently light character and trivial words—a skin deep man whom nobody either loves or dislikes—turns out to be one of those cunning detectives one reads about in stories. But now I know that he is a real detective he seems very different to me. Just as soon as it was all out, instead of calling me Alice he called me Miss Avery. I was so mad I could have choked him. Besides, I thought he was quite a gentleman. He is very plain. Indeed, Donald says he served a term as a policeman.

Well, well; I shall never again think I can tell the difference between a rogue and an honest man.

I am mightily relieved. I'm going to set the day for the wedding at an early date. I don't care to go through any more such experiences. Donald has come out all right, and that's enough of it for me.

Australian Slang.

Many colloquial expressions used by Australian soldiers are American in origin, and may present little difficulty to their English friends, but some of the commonest are indigenous, and of these an explanation will perhaps be useful. "Bonzer," the constantly recurring word to express satisfaction, is used wherever an English high school girl would say "ripping" or "topping." It is said to come from the Japanese "banzai," probably a false derivation. Applied to persons, "cronk" means shady, while "crook" means seedy or "off color." "Boshter," common a few years ago to describe "a good fellow," seems to be obsolescent. To "poke borak" at anyone is to chaff him unmercifully. "He hasn't Buckley's" means that he hasn't a ghost of a chance, and "He's gone a million," used recently by a state premier in a speech in Parliament, has the same significance. "That's up against his duckhouse" indicates that the person named is placed in a dilemma or false position, and the much less cryptic phrase "not within copee" would be used of an unattainable result or an incorrect calculation. Two perversions of common words are found in all classes of Australian society. "To infer" is invariably used in the sense of "to imply," and "financial" is not only the usual synonym for "solvent" but also has further service to perform. In the rules of most social and sporting clubs there is a proviso that only financial members may vote at a meeting. This means that they have paid their subscription. In the same way trade unions and similar bodies state their right to debar a member from any benefit "in the event of his becoming unfinancial."—Manchester Guardian.

Machine Shop for Field.

The Electrical World describes a portable machine shop similar in every respect to the ones now in use on the continental battlefields and recently completed for the United States army. The shop is mounted on a motor truck which carries a complete electric generating outfit for operating the motors driving the machine tools and also to supply electricity to the lamps. A separate gasolene engine is used to drive a direct-current dynamo, which is specially constructed to withstand rough usage. There is a lathe, drill press, and bench grinder, in addition to a forge and little arbor presses, work bench, vises, and a complete assortment of machinist's and blacksmith's tools. Over 250 items are included in the equipment, among the interesting features of which are an electric vulcanizing apparatus and a complete truck chassis is of standard three-ton heavy-duty design. It has a British army type of driver's seat, suitable for four men, and is equipped with a varied assortment of motor accessories.

Milton's Opinion.

Milton was once asked if he intended to instruct his daughter in the different languages. He replied: "No, sir. One tongue is sufficient for a woman."

Its Complaint.

A somewhat weather beaten tramp being asked what was the matter with his coat replied: "Insomnia. It hasn't had a nap for ten years!"

WANTED AUSTRALIA.

Germany Planned to Plant Colony in Commonwealth.

Germany's designs upon Australia as part of her reputed comprehensive policy of attaining command of the Persian Gulf and control of the sea routes converging upon the Suez Canal have been revealed among certain striking facts just made public by the federal authorities of the Commonwealth. These revelations deal with German espionage—chiefly on the eve of the war.

As northern West Australia is but a few days by steam from southern Asia, and, of all the Australian states, West Australia is the most thinly peopled, it would appear that German scheming and spying were directed upon that part of the continent in particular. An intercepted detailed report from a German missionary who had lived for nine years at Broome in the northern part of West Australia is believed by Australian officials to bear out this presumption.

The missionary is the Rev. Joseph Bischofs, of the Pallotiner congregation, Limberg, Prussia. An organization styled "The Society for the Protection of Germans Abroad" put fifty questions to him. His answers comprise a minute and intimate account of the physical and commercial attributes of north-western Australia. The report is marked "strictly confidential," and is dated July 10, 1914. Among other things the Rev. Mr. Bischofs was asked if he could furnish photographs, and "correct maps of your town, your country, province, etc." To the former question he replied, "Perhaps, later."

According to information in possession of the Commonwealth Defence Department a German representative in Australia remarked to an Australian official some time before the war broke out that the commonwealth was making very little use of the north-western part of Australia and that it would serve admirably for a German settlement. The department officials are convinced that the questions put to the Rev. Mr. Bischofs were with the ulterior motive of providing the German Government with data about what it believed to be a vulnerable part of the commonwealth. The Bischofs report was made public by the Australian authorities.

TO DEFY SINGLE TORPEDO.

Expert says that it will take Two or More to Sink New Vessels.

That it will take two or three torpedoes to sink one of the steel ships to be built under the direction of General Goethals for the new American merchant marine, is the statement made an article in the current issue of The Popular Science Monthly. The writer says that the ships will be built on the principle evolved in the oil tanker, which is built in many sections and therefore hard to sink.

"Of course, no vessel afloat or to be launched in the near future will be unsinkable if a sufficient number of torpedoes are exploded against her sides," he says. "Even the latest battleship is not immune. But Uncle Sam's new boats will have no unprotected portion of the hulls and it will take at least two, and perhaps three, well-aimed torpedoes to sink one of them.

"The new type will be fully armed. It will be of steel construction, and patterned after the present-day oil tanker, which is practically immune against single torpedo attacks, except in the way of the engine and boiler rooms. If struck there she is done for and settles by the stern with no power to proceed. The new boats will have fuel oil tanks extending clear around the ship from main deck to main deck, from the front of the boiler space to the rear of the engine room. If a torpedo strikes her there, and blows a hole in the outer skin, the inside of the tank will act as a new hull to keep her afloat until the submarine rises to view its prey. None of the oil tankers have been sunk so far in the war by one torpedo unless hit in the engine or the boiler space.

"The bulk oil in the tankers is carried in a dozen or more separate tanks or compartments, into which the hull of the tanker is divided by bulkheads. This is why one torpedo will not sink her. A torpedo exploding against the hull of the ship, and crushing one or two of these compartments, does not sink the ship because of the relatively small size of the few compartments punctured, compared with the dozen or so that are left intact."

Ice cream croquettes are made by grinding a cupful of browned almonds to these add a cupful of dry, sifted macaroon crumbs, then dip spoonfuls of hard-frozen cream and roll each in the nuts. Serve at once.

Work Of Late Sergt. Clayton Was Appreciated

Letter of Appreciation From Former Commanding Officer

Mrs. Herbert Clayton, 694 George street, has received the following commendatory letter from Major J. Betts. The letter is self explanatory:

2nd Army Central School,
A. P. O. S. 2,
B. E. F.
8-7-14.

Dear Madam,—I am very sorry not to have answered your letter sooner, but have been away on leave. I deeply regret that I am unable to obtain any particulars of the death of your husband, excepting that he and two other N.C.O's were wounded by a stray shell, and all three died from wounds. I am extremely glad you wrote me, as I wanted so much to tell you of the excellent work your husband did while serving under me. He was a very keen and hard-working instructor and highly spoken of by all with whom he came in contact. He served under me in the Second Army since last December and I never wish for a more capable and conscientious man. He helped to prepare the gallant troops who stormed Messines and Whycheate, and I enclose a copy of letters received from Major-General Harrington and Col. Campbell. A copy has been sent to each instructor serving with this army and, had your husband lived, he too would have had a copy. I send you this as a momento of the excellent and hard work done by your husband and all the other instructors. I sympathize with you most deeply on your sad loss, also with your dear children, if any. Being a family man I can readily understand what this terrible loss means to you and yours. Trusting the little information I have been able to send you will ease your mind, and again assuring you of my deepest sympathy in your very sad bereavement.

Believe me, dear madam,
Yours very truly,
J. Betts, Major.

Enclosed in the above letter was the following expression of appreciation, a copy of which would have been received by Sergeant Clayton had he lived.

Lieut.-Colonel R. B. Campbell, D.S.O. Deputy Inspector of P. & B. Training.

Will you accept for yourself and convey to Captain J. Betts, and officers and other ranks of the staff under you, the Army Commander's best thanks and appreciation for all the excellent work that has been done towards reaching the standard of efficiency in this army which enabled it to inflict a severe defeat on the enemy.

The work of your staff has been invaluable throughout and has gained the admiration of all. Of all the many factors that have contributed to the recent success of the Second Army none has been of greater value than the work of your staff who, through their untiring energy and devotion to duty have done so much to cultivate what we value so much, viz., an army spirit.

(Sgd.) C. H. Harington,
H. G., G.S.,
Second Army.

14th June, 1917.

Captain J. Betts, D.S.O.,
Superintendent of P. & B. Training,
Second Army.

Will you please accept the congratulations of myself and the remainder of the staff, who are serving with the British armies in France, upon the above letter which I have received from HG., C.S., Second Army.

I entirely endorse the commendation of yourself and staff contained in the letter, and I am convinced that this splendid tribute to the value of your work will act as an incentive to greater efforts in future, although, at the same time I am certain that neither commendation nor honours are necessary to stimulate the zeal and enthusiasm which always have been the hall-mark of the work of your staff and yourself.

R. B. Campbell, Lieut.-Col.,
Deputy Inspector of P. & B. T.
R. Q. P. & B Training,
1st June, 1917.

City Offers Mr. A. Swartz $47.28 For Damage By Hose

The city will offer Mr. Abraham Swartz $47.28 to cover the damage caused by water when a broken hose during street-flushing work shot a stream through his bedroom window facing George street, and trickled through to the store on the ground floor. Chief Howard reported that the affair was altogether accidental. Acting-Mayor Duncan and Ald. Dobbin deputed Mr. A. W. Cressman to appraise the loss and his investigation was presented last night, recommending $27.28 for store goods and $20.00 for furnishings upstairs.

TRIP TO HEALEY FALLS
On Wednesday, August 8th, the Steamer "Stoney Lake" will leave George Street Wharf at 7:30 a.m.; St. Railway Wharf at 7:55 a.m. for Hastings and Healey Falls. Round Trip 75c. Meals on Board. 3d-29

ORDER-IN-COUNCIL APPROVES MUNICIPAL FUEL YARD HERE

And Council Authorizes Ald. Dobbin's Committee To Buy If Cost to Citizens Is Not More Than $10 a Ton.

A copy of the Order in Council, authorising the establishment of a municipal fuel yard in Peterborough was received by the City Council last night, and Ald. Dobbin asked for further instructions regarding the purchase of coal. He stated that any supply the city might obtain would probably be on a basis of $6 a ton at the mine. Ald. McIntyre moved, seconded by Ald. Saunders that the committee by empowered to buy coal for a municipal yard providing that it could be delivered to local consumers at a cost not exceeding $10 a ton.

Ald. Dobbin stated it was proposed to deliver direct from the cars.

The present situation means that, after months of negotiations, Peterborough has a free hand to proceed with the establishment of a municipal fuel yard while the abnormal conditions of to-day obtain. Ald. Dobbin's committee may or may not enter the market. In the final step they will doubtless be guided by economic considerations. From the present prospect, however, the municipality will probably bring quantities of coal for distribution to the citizens providing the factor of price is favourable.

The Thrills Of An Air Raid

Nephew of Mr. Finch Miller Describes a Few of the Sensations

Mr. Finch Miller has received a very interesting letter from a nephew in England, in which the writer refers to one of the many raids that have occurred during the past few months. The letter in part reads as follows:

Well uncle I suppose you heard all about the great air raid on London the other Saturday. Well, I don't want to see a sight like it again as long as I live. I was working inside one of the factories when some of the officials came tearing through the building shouting, "Get out; run for your lives." And you bet everybody did run, girls, men, the whole bunch went tearing out as if death was on their heels. He wasn't on their heels, but he certainly was over our heads, for as soon as we were outside we saw the great fleet of German 'planes in perfect formation coming straight over the fatcory. In our excitement there seemd to be about fifty (although the official estimate was 22) and then as the guns all round began to bang away and the fragments of shell began to fall, and we got under cover to wait for the end, for I don't believe there was one in a thousand who didn't believe our end was come. And then to our great relief the fleet turned in such perfect order that we couldn't help admiring the wonderful picture it made, even though we knew as they turned that there intention was to try and destroy London, and so they passed in perfect order on the errand of destruction and we watched them as they spread out and took up their positions over the city ond then with the sharp bark of the guns there came mingling the deep rumbling of heavy bombs that told its own tale of death and destruction. And then we saw them turn eastward again, and as they receded into the distance so the various batteries that that took up thir turn in the game got gradually quieter and quieter, and quieter and about an hour after the first alarm had been given the signal, 'all clear' was sent out and many were the hearts in Waltham that breathed a note of thankfulness at a further deliverance and we have had many such in this town.

A Plea For The British Sailors' Relief Fund

To the Editor,
The Examiner,
Peterborough, Ont.:

THE BRITISH SAILORS' RELIEF FUND.

Dear Sir: In view of the mighty task, it is not any wonder that the real significance of the allied naval situation is not begun to be fully grasped by the public.

In the present war Britain's command of the Seven Seas is the outstanding achievement of mankind in world history.

It is the splendid result of modern scientific progress, in the marshalling of all known devices for the conquest of time and distance.

It is a magnificent demonstration of what mankind has been able to accomplish in the eternal conflict with Nature.

To few minds has been given the capacity of grasping the real greatness of this achievement. Due appreciation will only come by way of the perspective of history, in the pages of which it will stand out as a great milestone in the progress of mankind and summation of ceaseless toil.

Who will dare to place a limit on what we owe to the British sailor. Rather let us uncover our heads and offer all the aid and comfort that we may to his widow and his orphaned babies.

Contributions to this Fund will be thankfully received at any Bank, and acknowledged through the press.

V. EASTWOOD,
Secretary, Peterborough Branch.

Not Near Abbey Or The Arsenal

In reference to the interview in this paper of August 6th, Mr. Coleman wishes to state that an error occurred as to the objective of the squadron of aeroplanes on July 7, as on that day no bombs were dropped within 8 miles of the arsenal, or anywhere near the abbey. In fact during the year he was in England no bombs at any time were dropped within two or three miles of the arsenal.

According to the German reports the arsenal, London bridge, St. Paul's, etc., have been blown up several times

Charles Payne Seriously Ill

The many friends of Mr. Charles Payne, 73 Smith street, will regret to learn that he has been taken seriously ill, and has been removed to the Nicholls' Hospital in a critical condition.

It was three years ago this week that Charlie left the city, being one of the first to answer the call of duty. He was on the reserve of the British army.

That terrible first winter in the trenches may have something to do with his present illness.

WIN-THE-WAR HARVEST HELP IS MOST URGENTLY NEEDED

Ten Thousand Workers Needed to Help Farmers Harvest the Crops of Ontario

The Organization of Resources Committee of Ontario has issued the following appeal to editors and the public:—

Parliament Bldgs., Toronto, Ont., August 6th, 1917.

Dear Mr. Editor:—

Ontario needs 10,000 men to assist the farmers to garner her harvest. This need has arisen within the past few days and is largely due to weather conditions.

It is unnecessary to tell you that the world needs every pound of food that we can produce, and that no one dare suggest that Ontario's harvest must not be fully gathered. The Honourable W. J. Hanna, Food Controller for Canada, made this abundantly clear to a meeting of employers of labour last Thursday. Nothing that we have issued about the need of food in the Homeland and among our Allies is an exaggeration of the real condition.

The men needed to harvest the present crop must come from our cities, towns and villages and, in these, from the ranks of those now employed. No apology is necessary for asking men under the pressing circumstances of to-day to volunteer for the next few weeks for farm service. The Canadian Manufacturers' Association the Ontario Retail Merchants' Association, our Boards of Trade and similar bodies are behind the movement to secure these men.

Will you be kind enough to do what ever you can, through your editorial and news columns, to keep the people of your community fully informed as to the need, and to call upon them in the strongest possible way to help in meeting it?

Steps were taken to ascertain the need very accurately before this call was made, and we have the assurance of the District Representatives of the Department of Agriculture that our estimate, that 10,000 mne are needed is not too high.

The Ontario Government will pay the railway fare both ways for men who volunteer for farm service, and the present employers of these men are being asked to make up to the men the difference in the wages which they may receive from the farmer and those which they are now getting.

It is hardly necessary to point out that if there is a world shortage of food, the men who are fighting for us cannot be allowed to go hungry. The shortage will be felt right at home, in this land of plenty if export facilities can be provided to take the food overseas.

In the face of these conditions, no condemnation too strong can be placed upon those at home who refuse to seriously face the need and do their best to meet it.

Yours faithfully,
ALBERT H. ABBOTT,
Secretary

It looks like Charlie Chaplin.

He will be one of the main features at the Royal Theatre to-morrow along with a gripping drama in which the play and pictures will make an excellent bill. With an up-to-date ventilating system, a cool breezy atmosphere and a programme of exceptional merit, and an intensely thrilling photoplay, the Royal will be the coolest and pleasantest play spot in Peterborough. Capacity crowds are expected. Don't miss to-morrow's matinee, only 10c. Manager Pappas spares no expense, and keeps prices down in the shell holes.

Thieves Got Only Stamps in Visit To Feinberg's Store

S. Feinberg's store, 283 George street, was entered on Sunday by thieves and a large quantity of stamps stolen. That the thieves were amateurs is evident by the fact that the doors through which they entered in the rear of the building were badly smashed up and a window broken. Their work in the store, too, was crudely done, and in their apparent hurried flight, a typewriter and several boxes were upset.

Mr. Feinberg is congratulating himself on the fact that contrary to his usual custom, he removed all the cash from his safe on Saturday night. The exact extent of the robbery is not known yet.

Private Hopcroft Reported Wounded

Another member of the 93rd Battalion has been reported wounded. This time it is Private James Hopcroft, whose home is at 69 James street, East City. Private Hopcroft was admitted to the 22nd General Hospital, suffering from a gunshot wound in the right leg and arms.

Short shoes and shoes that don't fit cost a lot in the long run.

TRIP TO HEALEY FALLS

The Steamer Geneva will run a trip to Healey Falls, Thursday, August 9th. Boat leaves George Street Wharf at 7.15. Street Railway Wharf at 7.40. Tickets limited to 150. Round Trip 75c.

GARDEN PARTY AT "HOLMEWOOD HALL"

Mrs. John Holmes, McKellar Street, Gives Her Grounds to the Red Cross

A Garden Party in aid of the Red Cross will be given on the beautiful grounds of Mr. and Mrs. John Holmes, McKellar street, on Tuesday, August 28th.

"Holmewood Hall" is situated at the end of the George Street Car Line overlooking the river and is an excellent spot for a Garden Party.

It will be held both afternoon and evening. There will be a number of booths for amusement and refreshments. Bridge and Five-hundred will be played during the afternoon and evening. Further announcement later.

Large Attendance at the City Playgrounds

Between Three and Four Hundred Girls and Boys Visit the King Edward Grounds

The attendance at the city playground during the recent hot spell, fell off somewhat, but both grounds, especially King Edward, have been largely attended all summer. From attendance records at the King Edward grounds, it is shown that between three and four hundred girls and boys come regularly for amusement. The daily attendance of those who come and go throughout the day, has run as high as four hundred and fifty.

On account of the older boys being engaged in one form of work or other, the girls are in the majority usually. Many interesting articles such as pillow covers and work baskets are being made by the girls in the industrial work and the management is kept busy furnishing material to be used. Aside from the attraction offered by the swings, football, baseball, tether tennis, lawn tennis and other games are greatly enjoyed by the youngsters.

Swimming Lessons.

Groups of from twenty to forty boys under twelve years of age report twice a week at the Y.M.C.A. for swimming lessons, while the older boys are taken to various points along the river for the same purpose. The girls are provided for in the same manner and they seem to turn out in even larger numbers.

Because of the lack of dressing facilities the bushes furnish the dressing rooms for both boys and girls.

The boys and girls are perfectly safe when they go to the river, as the supervisors are in charge and also teach the youngsters to swim.

Something in the way of a treat is being considered for the kiddies, and efforts are being made to get free transportation to one of the parks for a picnic.

THREE LOST A MONTH SAYS BERLIN OF U-BOATS

BERLIN August 7.—It is officially declared that, contrary to rumors of overwhelming losses in submarines, the monthly average is little more than three underwater boats lost during the period from February 1 to August 1, while the monthly increase in submarines constructed is many times greater.

Advance In Price Of Gas Announced By Hydro Commission

Owing to the increased cost of coal and other material, the Hydro-Electric Commission announce an increase in the price of gas to take effect in the present month.

Domestic and cooking—$1.40 per 1,000 cu. ft.

Manufacturers—$1.30 per 1,000 cu. ft.

This represents an advance of 15 cents per thousand for domestic and 30 cents for manufacturing uses.

The Commission has a supply of coal necessary for the demand until the early summer of 1918. In making these advances, the report stated that this was done with great reluctance and only as a last resort. Private companies had increased their rates long ago.

A friend who is never in need is most unusual.

New Wooden Floor For County Bridge

(Bobcaygeon Independent)

The County Council was asked by Reeve Brock, of Bobcaygeon, to put a cement floor on the north bridge and as a result of this request a committee representative of Victoria and Peterborough counties visited here on Wednesday and inspected this bridge, which is a boundary bridge between the two counties. The committee recommended a wooden floor for the present, but the engineer from Toronto, who was here also, will determine whether the bridge can be made to carry a cement floor or not. Those from Victoria county council were: Warden A. E. Tiers and Messrs. Neil Ferguson, A. Brock, Wm. Robertson and Clerk McNeillie, those from Peterborough were: Maxwell Brown, Warden; Messrs. F. J. Bulliod, C. J. Darling, G. P. Nicholls and Elliott.

Envy, jealousy and wrath will ruin any digestion.

TURNBULLS

Notes of Council Meeting

The city's coal by-law received its third reading.

A by-law to fix the assessment of the B. F. Ackerman & Son, Co., Ltd., at $28,790 for ten years in consideration of the fact that the company is establishing a shoe manufacturing industry in Peterborough, was passed and will be voted on by the ratepayers on September 6th. All citizens entitled to vote at the Mayoralty and Aldermanic elections have a vote on this by-law.

-Taxing Hydro Land.

The property of the Hydro-Electric Commission was assessed on July 26th at $24,100, representing land value only, which will yield $638.64 to the city. It was not assessed for 1917, but under an amendment it is now taxable by the municipality.

Increase for Mr. Evans.

Street Commissioner Harry Evans received an increase of $100, his salary being now $1,850 a year.

Says He Needs Increase.

Plumbing Inspector Thompson asked that his salary be increased from $40 to $60 a month.

Considering a "Jitney" Service.

The Hydro-Electric Commission reported the receipt of a letter conveying Alderman Smith's former motion that an auto-bus service be provided for Ashburnham until the Street Railway line crosses the river. The request is under consideration.

$160 for His Horse.

Mr. Daniel McMillan's horse died in the traces of its snow plow on Weller street on Good Friday when it trudged into the field of a "grounded" wire that had been blown loose by the storm of wind and snow. The Utilities Commission long since decided that they were under no obligation to compensate the owner, but his solicitor, Mr. F. D. Kerr, has urged the Council that in justice to Mr. McMillan some department of the city should make good his loss.

Alderman Worth last night gave Mr. McMillian a certificate of faithful service as the westward snow plowman, and supported his appeal for financial consideration.

Alderman Smith remarked that whether the Council or the Utilities Commission paid Mr. McMillian, it was practically a case of either Peter or Paul bearing the loss and moved that $100 be offered. Alderman Worth seconded the motion, which carried. Alderman Weir considered the animal worth $160, and proposed that $125 be offered, but withdrew his amendment when it threatened to defeat the motion and leave Mr. McMillan empty-handed.

Claim for Injured Mare.

O'Connell and Corkery wrote on behalf of E. A. Stinson, that he would hold the city responsible for injuries received by his mare on July 23nd, when it broke through a decayed plank over a culvert on the Monaghan Road at the end of McDonnel street.

Ask for Sewer.

Edward Elsom, Walter Kitney and other residents on Dufferin street requested that a sewer be built on that street between Concession and Ross streets.

Boiler Report.

The Fidelity and Casualty Co., of New York, reporting on the condition of the boiler at the City Hall, found that the tubes are slightly pitted, but not serious; the blow-off pipe is thin, and should be renewed before the boiler is again put in operation.

Lieut. J. B. Mann Married In London

An interesting wedding took place at St. Mary's Church, Paddington, London, England on June 20, 1917 at 2.30 p.m. when Lieut. J. B. Mann, Royal Flying Corps, son of Mr. and Mrs. Aaron Mann, Bridgenorth, was united in marriage to Miss Vera Marjorie Eustace, daughter of Mrs. J. G. Eustace, 305 Edgewone Road, London, England. The bride was given away by her uncle, Mr. Henry Wood. The bridesmaids were Misses Ivy Gwynne and Dolly Eustace, sisters of the bride and Miss Annie Clonke and Miss Eva Wood as flower girls. The groom was supported by Bombadier J. G. Powell of the Canadian Expeditionary Force. After ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride, 305 Edgewone Road, where over one hundred guests attended after which the happy couple left for a short honeymoon at Brighton. Lt. Mann is well known in sporting circles as a well known athlete, being a competitor in the road races several times and held the all-round championship and Eastwood cup in 1911.

Notice To Farmers Who Need Help

Farmers are asked to note that Mr. G. A. Gillespie has a number of men who are prepared to help with the harvest. Their number will be largely increased in the next few days and in this district a big effort will be made to garner all the crops. Hence those who need help should apply to Mr. Gillespie immediately.

FOOD CONTROLLER'S ATLANTIC FISH IN PETERBORO' TO-MORROW

The first consignment of fish which the Food Controller has brought east from the Atlantic ocean will arrive in the city to-morrow and be sold in the local fish market by G. A. Pringle at the same price as it is being sold in Toronto at present, or 10c. per pound.

The appeal for the consumption of more fish, the food value of which is as high as meat, should be responded to to help conserve the supply of meat for the men at the front, and the low price of this valuable food should serve as a factor for boosting the sale of a food which heretofore been too little used.

Under the system of transporting the fish, which includes cod and haddock, it arrives in the city practically as delectable and fresh as on leaving the sea. Care has been taken to see that the shipment included fish of all sizes so that the needs of the smallest families may be supplied without waste.

Mr. Pringle secured his supply from the James Wholesale Fish Firm, Toronto, who handles the fish for the Food Controller in Toronto.

Ottawa's Eyes Are Focussed On West

Ottawa, Aug. 7.—All eyes here are turned to the West. The thought in every one's mind is: "What is the Western Liberal convention going to do?"

It is realized that any action which may be taken there will materially affect the whole political situation.

News carried to-day would indicate that four Western provinces are going to line up solidly behind Sir Wilfrid Laurier. This was more or less contrary to general expectations.

It was thought that the West was going to kick over the traces, and kick hard, but instead, right from the start, they are rooting for the G. O. M.

"Now where does this land everything?" is the question asked here.

MOTOR FIRE APPARATUS BY-LAW PASSES COUNCIL

Not Without a Last Effort by Ald. Worth to Get a Pumper.

Ald. Worth made a final effort to secure a motor driven pumper instead of a chemical engine and hose waggon combination at last night's Council meeting. Ald. Dobbin seconded his amendment to the by-law, and Aldermen Smith and McIntyre supported it. Aldermen Duncan, Saunders, Langford and Weir, who shied at the shadow of an overdraft, and for other stated reasons, preferred to suspend the pumper purchase until next year.

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Sir: Any one passing the Grand Trunk Railway yards on Charlotte street, cannot help but notice the amount of dust that blows out of there up and down the street. The pavement is the dirtiest east and west of the street, and is harder to keep clean than any other part. If the oil cart was run up and down the yard it would be much appreciated by pedestrians on—

"Charlotte Street."

SECOND BATT. MAN ILL.

Pte. Chas. Mongour has Double Abscess on the Leg.

The many friends of Pte. Charles Mongour, 2nd Batt., son of Mrs. Mongour, 414 Dublin street, will be sorry to learn that he has to undergo another operation for double abcess in the leg.

Mrs. Mongour and a daughter, Rose, recently returned from England after spending the last eight months with her husband and son, and they were both quite well at the time of leaving England. But the son was taken suddenly ill while on furlough.

PTE. HAROLD H. JOLLIFFE

DO YOU WANT TO JOIN THE FLYING CORPS?

Young Men of Peterboro' Have An Opportunity to Enlist--Information From Local Branch

Any young man who desires to enlist in the Flying Corps can get all information and blank forms from the local Board of the Aero Club of Canada, composed of Messrs. G. H. Logie, C. G. Graham, Roland Denne and James Lynch. This is one of the most attractive branches of the service. A number of young men have got the necessary forms and signed the applications. Some will go forward to-night. See any of the above named and have your papers go forward in the next lot.

INQUEST HELD THIS AFTERNOON

There is some doubt as to the identity of the man whose death occurred early this morning in Nicholls Hospital as a result of injuries received at Burketon station last evening. An inquest was opened this afternoon at 3 o'clock in Comsock's undertaking parlours. Coroner Dr. Greer, who presided, was unable to adduce sufficient evidence to satisfy the jury as to the identity of the deceased. An unsuccessful effort was made to locate a couple of Toronto travellers who are known to be in the city. According to a slip of paper found on the body at the hospital the man's name is John Forester Aitken, and he is a traveller for the Dominion Glass Company of Toronto. Crown Attorney Hatton was informed that he was a blacksmith.

After viewing the body the jury was dismissed until the afternoon of August the fifteenth, when the inquest will be resumed. The jury is made up as follows: George Evans (foreman), R. Wilson, A. E. Fowler, R. Routley, W. D. Campbell, E. Reid, R. Sturgeon, E. V. Warne, C. Lech, W. H. Meredith, P. J. Scollard and J. Picard.

The authorities are in communication with Toronto, and relatives of John F. Aitken will reach the city this evening. The body is being held here for identification.

Average Wheat Yield About 15 Bushels

Harvesting will be General in West in a Fortnight.

WINNIPEG, Man., Aug. 7.—Harvesting will be general in Manitoba on August 15, and in Saskatchewan and Alberta about August 20. From 12 to 15 bushels is the estimated average wheat yield for Manitoba, 12 or 13 bushels for Saskatchewan and around 20 bushels for Alberta, says the Manitoba Free Press, in issuing yesterday its fifth crop report for the season of 1917.

In the last report—July 17—it was pointed out that, with immediate and plentiful rains, there was time for material recovery. The rains did not come immediately, but very hot and windy weather instead, says the Free Press, so that the hoped-for improvement has not taken place. There have been considerable rains, but they appear to have been largely confined to localities. There has been no general soaking rain during the past three weeks. Rains that have fallen have materially helped wheat to fill, but they have not been sufficient, nor did they come soon enough to help to make a crop of the wheat on stubble, nor of the coarse grains, says the Free Press.

Are Parceling Up Roumanian Crops

BERLIN, Aug. 7.— In addition to the conference of representatives of the Central Powers called to meet at Budapest to discuss the Danube problems, there will be this month an important conference of German and Austro-Hungarian representatives in Vienna to discuss the future disposition of the Roumanian crops.

The present understanding covers only the current year.

Lt. Garnet Dolman Killed in Action

Mr. J. W. Carey received a letter this morning from his sister, Mrs. Dolman, Campbellford, stating that her son, nephew of Mr. Carey, Lieut. Garnet Dolman, was killed in action in France, July 30th. Lieut. Dolman is well known to many in Peterborough, as he attended the Normal School here and passed his examination three years ago.

Important Meeting Of Veterans To-night

The members of the Great War Veterans' Association are reminded of to-night's meeting in the club rooms of the Barrie building. Those who have not yet signed their papers for three months back pay are urged to do so. Returned soldiers who have not yet joined up will have a good opportunity to-night. Final arrangements for Friday's excursion will be completed.

LITTLE BOY HAD DIARRHOEA
Only Blood Passed Bowels

Diarrhoea, dysentery and summer complaint are responsible for more deaths, especially of children, during the summer months, than any other form of disease.

Diarrhoea does not need to persist for any length of time until the whole system is weakened and no other disease so quickly undermines the strength and brings about a condition of prostration and often collapse.

Mrs. E. Stoddard, Lower Clark's Harbour, N.S., writes. "When my little boy was a year and a half old he was taken awfully bad with diarrhoea. I had the doctor, but he got worse so that only blood passed his bowels. I tried everything, but he got no relief. One day while I was at work, I picked up a piece of paper, and on it was an advertisement for Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry. After trying a bottle he began to get better and the second one made a cure. I would not be without it in the house for my little ones. I am proud to say "Dr. Fowler's" saved my little boy's life."

Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry has been on the market for the past 72 years and there are many imitations of this wonderful bowel complaint remedy. See that you get the genuine when you ask for it. Price 35c.

LITTLE INSIDE BASEBALL FANS READ ABOUT BUT SELDOM SEE

That queer play in Pittsburg the other day, when Chuck Ward of the Pirates failed to touch the plate when Stengel threw to Mack Wheat, and continued to the bench, where he was called out by the umpire for running out of line, after Wheat chased him again, has started all the old timers to talking. Umpire Byron took counsel with all the veterans, and none of them could remember seeing the case of a runner tagged out on the bench, although the subject frequently comes up in the discussion of hypothetical questions about baseball rulings.

Since then Wilbert Robinson has recalled a similar instance, and it was only natural that the hero, or victim, should have been Walter (Steve) Brodie, the strange genius who was an outfielder for the Baltimore three-time champions, for whom your uncle was the star catcher, says the manager of the Brooklyn team:

"I remember now that Brodie came tearing into the plate and missed touching it, but was not aware of the fact. Some sort of a long and violent argument with the umpire started and while it was going on one of the Orioles tipped Brodie to the fact that he was neither safe nor out, as he hadn't touched the pan. Brodie was on the bench and started back for the plate. About the same time the opposing catcher got on to it and yelled for the ball, which was in the hands of one of the debaters.

"Brodie saw he would have to act quickly. He sprinted and then slid into the plate in most approved fashion from the bench (first base side), but doggoned if the catcher didn't tag him as neatly as you please."

That seems to end that argument.

The day before the big jam about Ward not touching the plate a Brooklyn runner was on first when a Brooklyn batter drove to Hans Wagner, slowly, straight on the first base line. Hans came tearing in and picked up the ball a few feet ahead of the batter, who thereupon turned and went back toward the plate. That disconcerted Hans, who chased the batter and tagged him, the man on first getting to second.

The runner going to first has a perfect right to pull up and go back toward the plate, and it will almost invariably have the effect it had on Hans. It disconcerts the first baseman if he is too far in to touch the bag immediately, and prevents a throw for a double play after retiring the batter.

Umpire Byron said that the understanding among umpires was that the batter could retreat as far as the plate and three feet beyond in dodging a fielder on a batted ball, but if he went more than three feet beyond the plate he would be called out for running out of line.

That is something of a new wrinkle to the general run of fans and amateur umpires and is worth remembering.

Major Leaguers May Go To France

Offer Made to Finance two Teams for Series of Games Behind the Trenches.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6—A wealthy baseball enthusiast has offered to finance the undertaking of Clark Grifth, manager of the Washington Americans, if he will take two for a series of games behind the lines for the entertainment of the American soldiers and their allies. Mr. Griffith said to-night that he would submit the project to the secretaries of the War and Savy Departments. If official approval is given, volunteer players will be sought, with a view to getting the back-of-the-front series started as soon as possible after the season here closes. A condition of the offer is that Walter Johnson, the Washington pitcher, be one of those selected for the trip.

Wearing the same weight underclothing the year around will save you a lot of colds.

WEEKLY FINANCIAL REVIEW

COURSE OF THE MARKET.

The lull in the stock market during the past week has been due in large measure to a continuance of the uncertainty as to the effect of pending legislation upon the immediate future of invested capital. In proportion as the legislative situation becomes comparatively clear the trading in securities should recover a more certain tone. An index of this probability was contained in the improvement in the price of United States Steel common in the last two days in the light of its quarterly report showing what its earnings would be less a very liberal allowance for an excess profits tax. While the needs of the Government in the way of taxation will undoubtedly be heavy, there will probably be no hardship involved provided industries are treated with approximate uniformity. It is becoming evident that the volume of Government business will be much larger than had been anticipated in any financial quarter. This makes it reasonably certain that the volume of earnings upon which taxes will be payable are likely to be much larger than the financial community had expected. Assuming that that will prove to be the case, the outlook might easily make for more intense optimism than the investment world had considered likely. There are increasing reasons for belief that the course of the market may come to depend largely upon the course of the value of the dollar. If the value of the dollar goes down, the prices of stocks should advance. The prospect of another large Liberty Loan some time in the fall would have a tendency in this direction in so far as stock market influence is concerned. This decreasing value of the dollar is undoubtedly one of the factors in regard to the present situation of the money market. It should be remembered that interest rates are determined not by cash but by capital, that interest is the price paid for the use of capital rather than cash, and that capital consists of accumulated savings. Conservative optimism would seem to be desirable at the present time, for while the market gives evidence of an apparent latent strength, it has not had any serious untoward news development with which to contend recently.

THE BUSINESS SITUATION.

The dominant feature in the iron and steel industry for the week has been the activity of the Government in regard to purchases. The "Iron Age" has this to say: "Chief of passing developments have been the buying of 150,000 tons of rails by the Government for the building of a double-track railroad from its French port to its battle front, a marked reduction in output of steel works and rolling mills due to the extreme heat in all producing districts, and the efforts of manufacturers in steel and metal-working lines to have exempted from conscription enough employees to hold output of war materials where it is. The Washington Government's railroad operations in France will be on a large scale, and a vast engineering programme is involved." In regard to general conditions, Dun's "Review" says: "The slowing down of business, customary with the approach of midsummer, is accentuated by the uncertainties engendered by international conditions, and less strength appears in prices. Reaction from the extreme levels has occurred not only in seasonable foodstuffs, but also in other commodities in which there had seemed no end to the advances, such as in pig iron, and belief that the crest of some of the leading markets has at last been passed is spreading. With expectations that the yielding tendencies may become more pronounced and general, there is no longer the same rush to cover far-distant wants at almost any figure, and current commitments are in many instances confined within the closest possible limits. While hesitancy and waiting appear in not a few quarters, and there are signs of reaction in commodity prices, bank clearings are sustained in large volume and set new precedents for this period. The total at leading centres this week is $4,947,211,401, or about 16 per cent. less than last week, but 34.8 and 36.5 per cent., respectively, greater than in 1916 and 1915."

OTHER FACTORS.

Copper and tobacco shares seem to be acquiring a degree of attention only second to steel and commodity specialties such as sugar stocks. The interest in railroad issues remains quiet, and might easily continue comparatively neglected until it becomes evident that there is some prospect of reversed action by the Interstate Commerc Commission in regard to freight rates in October.

FORD OUTPUT JUMPS; PRICES UNCHANGED

The Toronto Mail of Monday has the following:

During the fiscal year ended July 31, the Ford Motor Co. manufactured 735,000 cars, an increase of 200,000 cars as compared with the production in the previous fiscal year.

The company is 80,000 cars behind in its orders. The record month of the year was May, when 83,706 cars were sent out. The biggest single day's out-turn was on July 25, 3,595 cars.

A one-ton motor truck to retail for $600 will be made by the company in 1918.

There will be no reduction in the price of cars.

Sunday Service At Juniper Island

Divine services were held on Sunday, Aug. 5th, at Juniper Island. The following artists rendered a very excellent programme:

Mrs. L. Lloyd of St. Paul's Choir, Peterborough, gave an excellent solo accompanied by a violin obligato by Miss Harma Telgmann of Kingston; a violin solo (Salut D' Amour), also by Miss Telgmann, was rendered with great taste. Miss Brock also gave a very excellent solo. Mr. Cole occupied the pulpit and gave a very impressive address.

Evening gowns for women are dignified rather than extreme.

Tiny pieces of sausages cooked until brown and then scrambled with eggs are delicious for a hot supper or a chilly night.

Failure To Speak English Prevented His Getting Work

Antonio Dandurand pleaded guilty to three charges of theft in the police court this morning, and was sentenced to one month in jail, with hard labour.

He admitted stealing a shirt, razor, hat and tie from the Quaker Oats "bunk house," and $7.07 from the till of Mr. Bert Herd's grocery store, George street. The prisoner said he was 18 years old and that his home is Montreal. His excuse for taking the money was that he wanted to return to Montreal. When he came to Peterboro he worked one day with the Quaker Oats Company, but could not understand English, and was forced to quit. He then worked with the Peterboro Cafe, but his bilingual deficiency rendered him useless, and he was soon idle again, and broke. Magistrate Dumble remarked that he had a bad record, and if he had really desired to work could have overcome his lack of English. His hands were soft and without the horny callouses of labor. Dandurand's face was of the pasty pallor the cigarette smoking youth shows in these neurotic days. And the number of "pale faces" is a legion that is growing without a protest.

CANNOT SURVIVE DEFEAT.

New York World:—"The Hohenzollern dynasty and Junkertum cannot survive defeat. They can probably survive a stalemate, in which case their control over the German people would remain unshaken and they could begin anew the preparations for another war of 'self-defence.'"

FORM A CURIOUS MIXTURE

Boston Post:—"The Kaiser's proclamations to the people and to the army form a curious mixture of impudence, brag and scarcely concealed desire for peace.

"His impudence is exemplified by the old threadbare phrase, "this righteous war of defence," begun by the Teutons when not a single vital interest of Germany was threatened; carried into unoffending and almost defenceless Belgium, and started against France before the latter had made a single hostile move."

LITTLE INSIDE BASEBALL FANS READ ABOUT BUT SELDOM SEE

That queer play in Pittsburg the other day, when Chuck Ward of the Pirates failed to touch the plate when Stengel threw to Mack Wheat, and continued to the bench, where he was called out by the umpire for running out of line, after Wheat chased him again, has started all the old timers to talking. Umpire Byron took counsel with all the veterans, and none of them could remember seeing the case of a runner tagged out on the bench, although the subject frequently comes up in the discussion of hypothetical questions about baseball rulings.

Since then Wilbert Robinson has recalled a similar instance, and it was only natural that the hero, or victim, should have been Walter (Steve) Brodie, the strange genius who was an outfielder for the Baltimore three-time champions, for whom your uncle was the star catcher, says the manager of the Brooklyn team:

"I remember now that Brodie came tearing into the plate and missed touching it, but was not aware of the fact. Some sort of a long and violent argument with the umpire started and while it was going on one of the Orioles tipped Brodie to the fact that he was neither safe nor out, as he hadn't touched the pan. Brodie was on the bench and started back for the plate. About the same time the opposing catcher got on to it and yelled for the ball, which was in the hands of one of the debaters.

"Brodie saw he would have to act quickly. He sprinted and then slid into the plate in most approved fashion from the bench (first base side), but doggoned if the catcher didn't tag him as neatly as you please."

That seems to end that argument.

The day before the big jam about Ward not touching the plate a Brooklyn runner was on first when a Brooklyn batter drove to Hans Wagner, slowly, straight on the first base line. Hans came tearing in and picked up the ball a few feet ahead of the batter, who thereupon turned and went back toward the plate. That disconcerted Hans, who chased the batter and tagged him, the man on first getting to second.

The runner going to first has a perfect right to pull up and go back toward the plate, and it will almost invariably have the effect it had on Hans. It disconcerts the first baseman if he is too far in to touch the bag immediately, and prevents a throw for a double play after retiring the batter.

Umpire Byron said that the understanding among umpires was that the batter could retreat as far as the plate and three feet beyond in dodging a fielder on a batted ball, but if he went more than three feet beyond the plate he would be called out for running out of line.

That is something of a new wrinkle to the general run of fans and amateur umpires and is worth remembering.

Major Leaguers May Go To France

Offer Made to Finance two Teams for Series of Games Behind the Trenches.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6—A wealthy baseball enthusiast has offered to finance the undertaking of Clark Grifth, manager of the Washington Americans, if he will take two for a series of games behind the lines for the entertainment of the American soldiers and their allies. Mr. Griffith said to-night that he would submit the project to the secretaries of the War and Savy Departments. If official approval is given, volunteer players will be sought, with a view to getting the back-of-the-front series started as soon as possible after the season here closes. A condition of the offer is that Walter Johnson, the Washington pitcher, be one of those selected for the trip.

Wearing the same weight underclothing the year around will save you a lot of colds.

RACING AUTOS IN PILE-UP KILL ONE, INJURE THREE

Tire of Leading Car Blows Out on the Track at Milwaukee, Wis.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Aug. 6.—Three racing automobiles were piled in a heap, killing one man and injuring five, when the leading car in a race at the State Fair Park blew out a tire and was thrown across the track, blocking the course. Two cars immediately behind were unable to stop.

Karl Healey, of Milwaukee, a mechanician, was killed, and three drivers and another mechanician seriously hurt. Joseph E. Cross, fifteen years old, a spectator, was struck by a flying fence paling and internally injured.

WEEKLY FINANCIAL REVIEW

COURSE OF THE MARKET.

The lull in the stock market during the past week has been due in large measure to a continuance of the uncertainty as to the effect of pending legislation upon the immediate future of invested capital. In proportion as the legislative situation becomes comparatively clear the trading in securities should recover a more certain tone. An index of this probability was contained in the improvement in the price of United States Steel common in the last two days in the light of its quarterly report showing what its earnings would be less a very liberal allowance for an excess profits tax. While the needs of the Government in the way of taxation will undoubtedly be heavy, there will probably be no hardship involved provided industries are treated with approximate uniformity. It is becoming evident that the volume of Government business will be much larger than had been anticipated in any financial quarter. This makes it reasonably certain that the volume of earnings upon which taxes will be payable are likely to be much larger than the financial community had expected. Assuming that that will prove to be the case, the outlook might easily make for more intense optimism than the investment world had considered likely. There are increasing reasons for belief that the course of the market may come to depend largely upon the course of the value of the dollar. If the value of the dollar goes down, the prices of stocks should advance. The prospect of another large Liberty Loan some time in the fall would have a tendency in this direction in so far as stock market influence is concerned. This decreasing value of the dollar is undoubtedly one of the factors in regard to the present situation of the money market. It should be remembered that interest rates are determined not by cash but by capital, that interest is the price paid for the use of capital rather than cash, and that capital consists ...ulated savings. Conservative optimism would seem to be desirable at the present time, for while the market gives evidence of an apparent latent strength, it has not had any serious untoward news development with which to contend recently.

THE BUSINESS SITUATION.

The dominant feature in the iron and steel industry for the week has been the activity of the Government in regard to purchases. The "Iron Age" has this to say: "Chief of passing developments have been the buying of 150,000 tons of rails by the Government for the building of a double-track railroad from its French port to its battle front, a marked reduction in output of steel works and rolling mills due to the extreme heat in all producing districts, and the efforts of manufacturers in steel and metal-working lines to have exempted from conscription enough employees to hold output of war materials where it is. The Washington Government's railroad operations in France will be on a large scale, and a vast engineering programme is involved." In regard to general conditions, Dun's "Review" says: "The slowing down of business, customary with the approach of midsummer, is accentuated by the uncertainties engendered by international conditions, and less strength appears in prices. Reaction from the extreme levels has occurred not only in seasonable foodstuffs, but also in other commodities in which there had seemed no end to the advances, such as in pig iron, and belief that the crest of some of the leading markets has at last been passed is spreading. With expectations that the yielding tendencies may become more pronounced and general, there is no longer the same rush to cover far-distant wants at almost any figure, and current commitments are in many instances confined within the closest possible limits. While hesitancy and waiting appear in not a few quarters, and there are signs of reaction in commodity prices, bank clearings are sustained in large volume and set new precedents for this period. The total at leading centres this week is $4,947,211,401, or about 16 per cent. less than last week, but 34.8 and 34.5 per cent., respectively, greater than in 1916 and 1915."

OTHER FACTORS.

Copper and tobacco shares seem to be acquiring a degree of attention only second to steel and commodity specialties such as sugar stocks. The interest in railroad issues remains quiet, and might easily continue comparatively neglected until it becomes evident that there is some prospect of reversed action by the Interstate Commerce Commission in regard to freight rates in October.

FORD OUTPUT JUMPS; PRICES UNCHANGED

The Toronto Mail of Monday has the following:

During the fiscal year ended July 31, the Ford Motor Co. manufactured 735,000 cars, an increase of 200,000 cars as compared with the production in the previous fiscal year.

The company is 80,000 cars behind in its orders. The record month of the year was May, when 83,706 cars were sent out. The biggest single day's out-turn was on July 25, 3,545 cars.

A one-ton motor truck to retail for $800 will be made by the company in 1918.

There will be no reduction in the price of cars.

Sunday Service At Juniper Island

Divine services were held on Sunday, Aug. 6th, at Juniper Island. The following artists rendered a very excellent programme:

Mrs. L. Lloyd of St. Paul's Choir, Peterborough, gave an excellent solo accompanied by a violin obligato by Miss Harma Telgmann of Kingston; a violin solo (Salut D'Amour), also by Miss Telgmann, was rendered with great taste. Miss Brock also gave a very excellent solo. Mr. Cole occupied the pulpit and gave a very impressive address.

Evening gowns for women are dignified rather than extreme.

Tiny pieces of sausages cooked until brown and then scrambled with eggs are delicious for a hot supper or a chilly night.

Failure To Speak English Prevented His Getting Work

Antonio Dandurand pleaded guilty to three charges of theft in the police court this morning, and was sentenced to one month in jail, with hard labour.

He admitted stealing a shirt, razor, hat and tie from the Quaker Oats "bunk house," and $7.07 from the till of Mr. Bert Herd's grocery store, George street. The prisoner said he was 18 years old and that his home is Montreal. His excuse for taking the money was that he wanted to return to Montreal. When he came to Peterboro he worked one day with the Quaker Oats Company, but could not understand English, and was forced to quit. He then worked with the Peterboro Cafe, but his bilingual deficiency rendered him useless, and he was soon idle again, and broke. Magistrate Dumble remarked that he had a bad record, and if he had really desired to work could have overcome his lack of English. His hands were soft ...dly without the horny callouses of labor. Dandurand's face was of the pasty pallor the cigarette smoking youth shows in these neurotic days. And the number of "pale faces" is a legion that is growing without a protest.

CANNOT SURVIVE DEFEAT.

New York World:—"The Hohenzollern dynasty and Junkertum cannot survive defeat. They can probably survive a stalemate, in which case their control over the German people would remain unshaken and they could begin anew the preparations for another war of 'self-defence.'"

FORM A CURIOUS MIXTURE

Boston Post:—"The Kaiser's proclamations to the people and to the army form a curious mixture of impudence, brag and scarcely concealed desire for peace.

"His impudence is exemplified by the old threadbare phrase, "this righteous war of defence" begun by the Teutons when not a single vital interest of Germany was threatened; carried into unoffending and almost defenceless Belgium, and started against France before the latter had made a single hostile move."

Draft Objectors Shot To Death

Extreme Penalty to be Asked in Case of Men Arrested.

MUSKOGEE, Okla., Aug. 7—United States District Attorney McGinnis announced yesterday afternoon that the men arrested on the charges of resisting the army draft in connection with the Oklahoma uprising, will be tried for treason and that the death penalty will be asked by the Government.

The District Attorney has sent two deputy attorneys to the infested districts of the state to gather evidence. The centre of the uprising of armed bands of objectors to the selective draft, which for nearly a week has spread terror through four central Southern Oklahoma counties changed from Seminole County to Hugher County, where two men were killed, and two were injured last night.

Shortly before midnight Ed. Blaylock, an objector, was shot to death near Holdenville, and two members of the posse which his band encountered were wounded. Later, J. F. Moosoe, of Okemah, was shot and killed as he drove a motor car toward Holdenville. He apparently was unaware of conditions that had resulted in a cordon of armed citizens being thrown around the town. He was killed when he did not heed or hear an order to stop.

France Permits No Profiteering

EVERYTHING FOR FEEDING AND CLOTHING POPULATION INCLUDED.

PARIS, Aug. 7.—The precise terms of the law just passed giving the civil authorities requisitioning powers were published in the Journal Officiel. Under the provisions of the act these authorities may, during the duration of the war, seize in the first place, every thing necessary for feeding and clothing the civil population and supplying it with heat and light. In the second place, they may seize all industrial and commercial materials and establishments used in the production, fabrication, manipulation or conservation of supplies needed for the population.

Industrial or commercial establishments may be seized wholly or in part. In the latter case, if the operators of the establishment, to be partly requisitioned, agree to produce supplies as determined upon by the Minister of Commerce, the requisition will be held up.

WOULD CHANGE BY-LAW
Ald. Smith Would Make Property Bear Entire Cost of Sewers.
A motion to repeal the by-law that apportioned the cost of sewer construction at 55c per foot to property fronting was passed by the Council last night, when Ald. Smith had introduced it. The proposed change would place all the cost on the property immediately affected, except in the construction of outfall sewers and intersections.

Give British Troops a Turn in the Limelight, writes Journalist.

London, Aug. 7.—"A Londoner's Diary," in last night's Standard, writes: "Journalists have written from the front recently that Dominion troops are genuinely fed up with the extravagant amount of adulation poured upon them by certain writers. This is really a legacy from the earlier days of the war when Imperial authorities being so anxious to secure as much publicity as possible for Dominion assistance, under the impression seemingly that the Dominions were less ready to work quietly and unostentatiously than these at home, encouraged the writing up of what the Dominion troops were doing and left our own men out of the limelight. A Dominion journalist has received an unexpected intimation that this boosting is not acceptable. A letter addressed: care of the High Commissioner from Toronto, said: 'I am a Canadian and am sick of reading about Canadians at the front. Tell us of the two and a half millions in the English army, and tell the truth.'" The Evening Standard says: "I am rather inclined to think the letter, after all, is that of an Englishman, but I am sure it accurately reflects Canadian opinion."

OBITUARY

MRS. HARRY MARTIN.
The death is reported in Ottawa, of Mrs. Harry Martin, a former resident of Peterboro. The remains will be brought to Peterborough for burial. Mr. and Mrs. Martin formerly resided at the corner of King and Park streets, and were members of St. Paul's church.

Press Comment On The Kaiser's Speech

KAISER IS ON THE DEFENSIVE
Philadelphia Record:—"The Kaiser is on the defensive in a different sense from that in which he would have the world think his country is. Germany was not attacked, and therefore it cannot be fighting a defensive war. But the Kaiser knows he has been attacked by his own subjects or he would not assume a defensive attitude."

WALL OF DESPAIR EVIDENT
Troy Record:—"His cooing song may be able to deceive the 'dear people' of the empire, but to the non-German world the wail of autocratic despair is only too evident behind the dulcet tones of the lullaby, the pretence of righteousness is drowned in the martial sounds of three years of aggressive and brutal warfare.

Yes, Builds You Up in 5 to 10 Days

Iron For the Blood and Phosphorus For the Nerves

Weak, anaemic, run-down, nervous persons will be glad to know that they can be restored back to their youth vigor by the discovery of this new drug called Bonized Phosphorus with Iron.

It is spring time now and every person needs something to build them up. Now you know as well as any doctor will tell you, the curse of spring time is impure blood. It pimples, eruptions, dizziness, headaches, ruins health, makes you weak, runs you down and finally you are a physical wreck.

This new drug is a combination of iron and phosphorus. The iron runs directly on the blood while the phosphorus soothes and strengthens the nerves. You start today and take two or three tablets of Bonized Phosphorus with Iron after meals and in 5 to 10 days you will be 100 per cent. stronger.

This drug does not act like other iron tonics you have taken, but instead, it does not blacken the teeth, upset the stomach or make you constipated. This new drug is dispensed by one druggist in each city. F. C. Weber dispenses it for Peterborough.

BLISTERS COVERED DAUGHTER'S HANDS

Could Hardly Stand Burning. Could Not Sleep. Healed by Cuticura Soap and Ointment.

"When the cold weather started my daughter's hands would get covered with little blisters. They itched so that she scratched and rubbed her hands till the blood would come. Then she could hardly stand the burning. She could not sleep.

"It lasted for seven years. Then I sent for a free sample of Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I afterward bought more, and her hands were healed." (Signed) Mrs. Robert Valncourt, Franklin Centre, Que.

If you have a poor complexion improve it by using Cuticura Soap daily and Cuticura Ointment occasionally.

Second Draft Calls Issued To Fill Up The District Quotas

Boards Speed Up the Work of Examining Registrants —Brooklyn District Wins First Honours—Officials Estimate Twenty-One Per Cent. of Men Examined Have Not Claimed Exemption.

ALIENS ANXIOUS TO SERVE

NEW YORK, Aug. 8—Local boards in 189 exemption districts in New York are in full operation drafting soldiers for the new army. Monday was the big day of the draft so far. Most important developments were:

The Provost Marshal General decided that all aliens, exclusive of Germans, may enlist in the new draft army. That will mean that thousands of men in New York city who have een barred and who are eager to bear arms against the Kaiser will be accepted to the draft army, and counted in district quotas.

The board in District No. 40, Third avenue and Forty-seventh street, South Brooklyn, reported its quota filled and ready for certification. That is the first board in the Metropolisc to fill its list. Only 500 men were examined to get 221 soldiers. That is said to be the best record so far made in the city, if not in the State.

Numerous districts posted second calls of several hundred names. That was found to be necessary because district quotas had not been filled from the first call. Those summoned to the colours Monday will answer next Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

Aliens Anxious to Enlist.

With thousands of men passing through the draft mill there was no disturbance, no resistance and no trouble of consequence. There were a few hitches, but the officials reported the draft was progressing with surprising smoothness.

Announcement that aliens would be taken into the army was indorsed warmly throughout the city. Thousands of Italians, Frenchmen, Austrians and others who have declared their eagerness to go to the front, have een barred automatically because they were subjects of other governments. It is estimated that there may be several thousand men in the city who will go into the service now that the bars have been let down. Many who are known to be fit physically will have another opportunity to appear before local boards. They will be asked to waive their exemption privileges as aliens, and then will be accepted as volunteers. Germans will not be admitted even if they have taken out their first papers.

Many Germans have in the last few weeks taken the first step toward becompig American citizens. It is believed some are trying to get into the army with a view of getting information rather than because of their desire to serve the United States. They will not be accepted.

First Hong to District No. 40.

District No. 40 captured first honours by completing its work ahead of all others. The board has been working so quietly even the officials in charge at the State Arsenal did not know what was happening. Roscoe S. Conkling, representing the Adjutant General's office, nearly lost his breath when Thomas F. Monahan, clerk of the board, called on the telephone, and said:

"We are ready to certify our list; our quota is filled."

"Great," said Mr. Conkling when he had recovered. "How many men have you examined?"

"Only 500; South Brooklyn is full of fighting men," Mr. Monahan said.

The district was asked to furnish 221 men. Of the 500 examined only 102 were rejected as being physically unfit and as aliens. Many of the aliens now may be accepted. One hundred have claimed exemption, and thirty did not repeat to their names. Two hundred and eight declared without reserve or qualification their readiness to serve. Under the rules prescribed for the draft, the thirty who did not answer the call may be certified as having been drafted.

LIMBURG-ON-THE-LAHN

Historic Town Where English Prisoners Are Held

It is in a historic spot that English prisoners are now being confined when captured by the Germans. Of course, a far greater number of Germans have been captured by the British than the number of British taken by the Prussian war party. A despatch says that the prison for English captives is at Limburg-on-the-Lahn. To Buffalonians it may sound somewhat like a cheese factory on the Erie, but in reality it is a historic spot. Nor is it to be confused with the Galician city of Lemberg, nor the Belgium city where the aforesaid dairy product has its origin.

Limburg-on-the-Lahn is one of the oldest towns of Germany. It is situated in the principality of Hesse-Nassau and is thirty-two miles east of the important Rhenish city of Coblenz. As a prison camp it has the advantage of being comparatively near the battle fronts of France and Belgium, yet sufficiently far removed to be out of the danger zone of possible raid and rescue. It is at least 160 miles in an airline northeast of Verdun, the nearest important point of conflict at the present time, and lies 100 miles almost directly east of Malmedy, a town on the German-Belgium frontier Germany's great cathedral city, Cologne, is sixty-five miles in an airline to the northwest.

At the outbreak of the war Limburg was a town of slightly less than 10,000 inhabitants, and its chief interests were tobacco factories, soap and pottery works, machine shop and breweries. To the east, along the Lahn extends the Limburg basin, for three or four miles, and it is probably on this plain that the English prisoners are confined. One of the exasperating features of being a prisoner in Limburg must be the recollection to many of the English unfortunates that at this very season of the year in peace times they were wont to flock to the famous baths at Ems, just twenty miles down the river. Ems, was accustomed to entertaining 12,000 visitors during July and August, and the sufferers from pulmonary troubles gathered there from all parts of Europe and the British Isles.

During the Middle Ages Limburg belonged to the Counts of Lahngau, but early in the fifteenth century this line became extinct and the city passed under the jurisdiction of the Electors of Treves, who governed the city for nearly 400 years. The most interesting building in Limberg is the famous seven-towered cathedral, whose history dates back to 909. It was founded by the powerful salic Count of Niederlahngau, Conrad Kursbold, the remains of whose castle adjoins the church. The present structure was erected in 1213-42, and was restored during the last quarter of the nineteenth century. One of the most famous bridges in Germany is the one which spans the Lahn here. It was built in 1315 and stands as a remarkable monument to the engineering skill of six centuries ago. A few miles up the river, perched on a rocky eminence is another ancient structure, the famous old church of Dietkirchen, built in 801.

One of the most highly prized possessions of this city is the famous Limburg "Chronicle," or Festi Limpurgeness, a source for the history of Rhineland during the fourteenth century and especially valuable on account of the light it throws on the German manners and customs of that period and for its preservation of old German folk-songs. It is a common error to think of this city of Limburg as the place made notorious by a certain brand of odoriferous cheez, but the dairy product, the subject of many jests, originated in the province of Luttich, Belgium, in the neighborhood of Herve, and was first marketed in Limburg, Belgium. Its manufacture has spread through Germany and Austria, and large quantities of it are made now in New York and Wisconsin.—Buffalo "Times."

300 Germans Killed In Munitions Factory

LONDON, Aug. 7—According to reports received from the German frontier by the correspondent at Amsterdam of the Exchange Telegraph Co. the explosion at Henningsdorf was one of the worst catastrophes of its kind that has happened in Germany since the war began. A munition factory was wiped out, 300 people were killed or injured and enormous damage was done. Henningsdorf has been isolated by police and troops.

The Shoestring Republic.

Chile is as long as from New York to San Francisco and as narrow as Lake Erie. Truly a "shoestring republic." She is squeezed tightly between the mountain range and the coast. Her cities look up to the hills and down to the sea, with, as Arthur Ruhl puts it, "the Andes hanging like a beautiful drop curtain at the eastern end of every street." Chile contains twenty-four provinces, and the largest province is big enough to hold all Pennsylvania, Vermont, Rhode Island and Massachusetts. The Chilenos are the Yankees of South America, aggressive keen, making fortunes from nitrate erecting a chain of wireless stations from the near tropical north tip of the Chilean shoestring to the Antarctic south tip and preparing for Panama trade by expending $12,000,000 on port and dock improvements. Chile is elbowing her way in among the most forward pushing nations of the twentieth century

Is Lacquer Ware Doomed?

The ancient Japanese art of lacquering is in danger of extinction, for the supply of lacquer is threatening to give out. Lacquer is made from the juice of the lacquer tree or varnish tree. It forms a very hard surface and stands heat to such an extent that the Japanese use lacquered vessels for hot drinks. They consume about 1,000 tons of lacquer every year for all sorts of articles, both for export and home use—work boxes, tables, fire screens, trays, bread baskets, carriages and musical instruments. Three-fourths of the lacquer comes from China, but so much has been used of late years that the demand exceeds the supply.

The lacquer tree is something like an ash and takes a good time to grow to maturity. The method by which the sap is handled is wasteful, it costs a great deal to get the varnish to a market and the native exporters have the monopoly of it. These causes together account for the shortage of the supply.—London Standard.

Bell With the Wail of a Child.

A queerly shaped gong which occupies a position of honor in the center of the city of Seoul, Korea, is said to be one of the largest in the world and is called "the bell with the wail of a child in its voice." When first cast the bell sounded with a harsh and cracked note, and the superstitious emperor, fearing an ill omen, consulted with his magicians. These gentlemen held a long confab and finally stated that the bell would never sound right until a live child was given to it. The mass was then melted again, and a live baby was thrown into the molten metal. The wail of agony uttered by the little tot as the bronze engulfed it seemed to be repeated every time the bell was tolled, and today the Koreans still claim that the wail of a child can be heard in the voice of the metal.

How Popular Songs Are Boosted.

In the American Magazine is an article by E. M. Wickes called "'Putting Over' Popular Songs," in which he describes the way that hoped for "hits" are foisted on the public with the aid of actors and vaudevillians.

"The public seldom takes to a song without first hearing it from the other side of the footlights. The publishers, knowing this, often pay theatrical performers for singing their songs. The rate of payment ranges from $5 to $100 a week, depending on the performer's standing. Now when a publisher's plunges to the extent of buying up 200 or 300 acts, as some of the big ones do, he may lose a goodly sum if the song does not make a big hit."

The Jocular Sleuth.

"Do you see that man over there?" The world famous detective spoke in a whisper, and his friend looked quickly round, scenting a mystery.

"Yes," he replied, just as cautiously.

"Well, he's a professional forger."

"Then why don't you arrest him?" asked his friend in surprise.

The world famous detective grinned aggravatingly.

"Can't!" he said briefly. "It's not breaking the law to make horseshoes."—Exchange.

A Cycle.

The word "cycle" is used in chronology to denote an interval of time in which certain phenomena always recur in the same order.

Numerous periods or cycles have been invented "in such a way that after a certain number of revolutions of the body whose period is to be compared with that of the earth on her axis, the body shall at last occupy the same place in the heavens and calendar as it did when the cycle commenced."—New York Times.

Her Great Fear.

"What is it that makes you so nervous, dear?"

"Why, Jack is to have an interview with papa this afternoon."

"I see, and you are afraid your father won't give his consent."

"No. I'm afraid Jack won't show up."—New York Telegram.

Where He Fails.

"It's too bad the average man can't be satisfied with a good living and not be hungering for more money."

"The average man is satisfied with a good living. The only trouble is that his idea of a good living grows with his income."—Exchange.

Court Etiquette in Olden Times

ROYAL personages as well as those members of noble families who have the privilege of attending on them would find the cares connected with their high position considerably increased if the extravagant formalities which attached to Court life two or three centuries ago were still in vogue.

Precedence ruled in all things at the Court of Louis XIV., at Versailles. Even the king's morning toilette was made in the presence of the courtiers, who were continually arriving. As the king put on his outer garments, these were handed to him by the nobleman of the highest rank in attendance.

The story is told that, as the king was pulling on his waistcoat one morning, it was handed to him by a count; but before the count had passed the garment to the king, a duke came in.

This made it necessary for the count to hand the waistcoat at once to the duke, as it would have been against etiquette for a person of lower rank to pass the garment. And as it must be handed with bare hands, the king had to wait while the duke removed his gloves.

When this operation was performed, and the duke was about to advance with the waistcoat, the door again opened and a royal prince of a younger branch of the family entered. The duke, of course, at once presented the waistcoat to the new comer, as he was of higher rank.

But the prince was also gloved; and when he had performed that somewhat tedious operation of ungloving, there arrived on the scene another prince, who happened to be of the elder branch.

So the unfortunate king had to wait once more; and as the room was cold, it is recorded that he took a violent chill.

At King Louis' dinner, when the cook brought in the meat for the royal plate, he was attended by armed soldiers and preceded by a herald, shouting "Gentlemen, the king's viands!" Whereupon the company all uncovered, and the sentinels saluted the roast chicken or the royal mutton cutlets.

When the king was about to drink, a chamberlain announced the fact at the top of his voice, and two functionaries, whose duty it was to taste the wine or water in order to prove that it had not been poisoned, stepped forward, poured out a little, and drank it off. Then the king drank.

The great mass of royal formalities and points of etiquette disappeared with the 18th century, but the rules of precedence are still very strictly observed in royal courts.

Cynical Sayings.

There are few men in the world successful enough to have secrets, and no women.

Of all vices to which the modern woman is addicted the most vulgar is her love of gambling.

There is no hatred like the hatred of a woman for a man with whom she once fancied she was in love.

The artistic temperament covers a multitude of sins.

It is easy to recognize the sort of women who haven't been kissed.

Divorce is the consolation prize in the lottery of marriage.

Everything comes to him who waits—even the girl who sends word that she will be right down—providing he waits long enough.

The best way to stop a woman's mouth is to kiss it.

One art worth studying in life is that of taking nobody too seriously.

Desire for something—or someone—is the motive power of the world.

All life is a matter of bossing; you've either got to boss or be bossed.

A man may be lord of creation, but a woman is queen of the earth.

Woman's one good deed—to look beautiful at man's expense.

A girl is either a man-eater or a total abstainer.

About the only thing the modern girl can't do to a man is to make him happy.

Spirit of Christ in the War.

An English paper tells us of a touching incident that occurred in the war zone not far from Perronne. A village, occupied by the Germans, fell into the hands of a British regiment on the retirement of the former. The Germans had reverently laid some forty or fifty of their dead comrades to rest in a plot of ground, marking the graves with wooden crosses. When the English arrived the spot had become overgrown with weeds and briars, and in a short time the little cemetery would have disappeared. But the "Tommies" set to work, cleared the place of weeds, marked out the graves with bricks from the ruined houses, and when all was done, erected a wooden cross six feet high, with the inscription, "Forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us." Thus even midst the horrors of war does the spirit of Christ find a place.

To Keep the War Going.

Two English workmen were discussing the war.

"It'll be an awful long job, Sam," said one.

"It will," replied the other.

"You see, these Germans is takin' thousands and thousands of Russian prisoners, and the Russian is takin' thousands and thousands of German prisoners. If it keeps on, all the Russians will be in Germany and all the Germans in Russia. And then they'll start all over again, fightin' to get back their 'omes."

Cocoanut Oil Fine For Washing Hair

If you want to keep your hair in good condition, be careful what you wash it with.

Don't use prepared shampoos or anything else, that contains too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and is very harmful. Just plain mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and entirely greaseless), is much better than anything else you can use for shampooing, as this can't possibly injure the hair.

Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. One or two teaspoonfuls will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather, and cleanses the hair and scalp thoroughly. The lather rinses out easily, and removes every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves it fine and silky, bright, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at most any drug store. It is very cheap, and a few ounces is enough to last everyone in the family for months.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

My Watcher

A Story of the Opening of the Great War.

By F. A. MITCHEL

I went abroad to travel for pleasure as soon as I had been graduated from college. I went to England, then over to France, and from there I went through Switzerland to Germany.

I was in Berlin in July, 1914, just before the breaking out of the great European war. I was walking one evening on that broad thoroughfare called Unter den Linden when I met a man whose eye I happened to catch. Until we had passed our eyes were fixed upon each other, why I could not divine. I presumed that he saw me looking at him, and he looked at me for that reason. Such things are quite liable to happen. There was nothing noticeable about the man except that he was very well dressed. As to his nationality, I did not know what it was; but, meeting him in Germany, I concluded that he was a German. From his lineaments he might have been of almost any of the white races that had their origin in a northern climate.

The same evening I went into a restaurant for dinner, gave my hat and cane to a waiter and, taking a seat at a table, scanned the menu. On raising my eyes from it I looked into those of the man I had met in the afternoon. He was regarding me with an expression which I could not exactly interpret. It might be expressed as ill at ease, but again it might have indicated cunning.

I still believed that it was a matter of happening, coincidence, whatever one may choose to call it, that was between us, and we had no more actual interest in each other than any other two men who happened to meet twice on the same day. Nevertheless during the dinner I occasionally cast a glance in his direction, and it always happened that he cast one at me at the same moment.

Intending to leave for America, I went the next morning to the American embassy to have my passport vised. As I was coming out whom should I see going in but the man I had twice met before. He started at seeing me and hurried on into the building. I went across the street and remained where I would not easily be seen waiting till he came out. When he did so he stood on the sidewalk looking up and down the street. I believed that he was looking for me. Presently he moved away.

I mentioned these meetings to a German friend of mine. His theory was that the man was a spy in the employ of the government. "The city is full of them," he said, "and I fancy every stranger who comes here has a guardian assigned to him to watch him during his stay." This put a new idea into my head. I no longer considered our meetings accidental. I believed that I was being shadowed.

The next day the world was startled by a declaration of war. I had intended to leave for home on that day and, being ready, boarded a train. It was the last or one of the last regular trains to leave Berlin. I stepped into a compartment and was placing my hand baggage on the rack when the door was darkened by some one entering. There was not light enough to make out who it was, but when we were both seated and the train pulled out of the station, with a better light, there was my watcher.

There was a change in him since I had last seen him. He was now clean shaven. Had not my attention been so thoroughly called to him I question if I should have recognized him as he now appeared.

I confess I was worried. I had esteemed myself lucky to get out of Berlin, but I now feared that this man would not permit me to leave Germany. Was I not in danger of being arrested and held for a spy? I remembered with anxiety some photographs of historic places that I had in my trunk and was not sure but that one of them took in distant fortifications. If so, and this man was on my track, I might be taken off the train at any moment, detained in prison and possibly executed.

When we stopped at a station long enough to enable me to get something to eat I went to a lunch counter and while eating saw my watcher sitting at the other end of the counter. He looked aside at me at the very moment I looked at him.

After finishing my luncheon I went back to my compartment, expecting the man to return and resume his seat. But the guard shut the door, and the train started on without his having entered. Looking up into the rack where I had seen him place a satchel, his only hand baggage, I saw that it was not in its place.

I wondered what he was up to by this move. Had he left the train or only the compartment? Why had he ceased to keep me under his eye? I could not answer these questions. But I believed the move meant something to his advantage and to my disadvantage. I shuddered lest he had relinquished his watchfulness over me to turn it over to the soldiers.

As we approached the border my anxiety increased. I did not believe the man would permit me to get out of Germany. Why he had let me go so far I could not imagine. But I knew that the German police have their own way of doing things, and I supposed there was method in their madness. Just before we reached the border, where the train stopped, an officer of the army put his head into the compartment evidently looking for some one. I was in a condition of mind to cry out, "I am the man you're looking for; take me and shoot me and have it over with." After what seemed to me minutes—it was only seconds—he withdrew, and I heaved a long drawn sigh of relief.

When the train stopped at the border we were all compelled to pass an examination that took a long while, though the government had not at that time instituted the rigorous examinations of a later date. While thus detained during a transit from one room to another I saw my watcher talking with an official. He was pointing to some one or something, and I was sure he was pointing at me. But in another moment I knew he had not seen me, for on catching sight of me I saw him suddenly make an effort to appear unconcerned.

There has been no moment in my life when I have felt such exquisite happiness and relief as when I found myself beyond German territory and rolling along on the rails in France in the direction of Paris. I was convinced that if my watcher was employed by the German government to arrest me he would have done so before I got out of Germany. My theory was that I was a suspect, but proof against me had not been adduced. Likely the man had been directed to keep me in sight to note any act on my part that would indicate treason to the government. Not having discovered any such act, he had felt obliged to allow me to leave the country.

Well, I got safely to Paris, where I found greater commotion than in Berlin. At the same hotel where I stopped was an American family, Mrs. Turnlee and her two daughters. She approached me soon after my arrival and asked me of the situation in Germany, being anxious about her husband, who was there. I gave her what information I had, but it was not such as to reassure her. I became acquainted with her daughters—an introduction was dispensed with, considering the troublous times—and we became quite chummy. The elder, Miss Lillian Turnlee, and I took a desperate fancy to each other the moment we met, and I prolonged my stay in Paris in order to remain near her.

Some ten days after my arrival, Mrs. Turnlee received a letter from her husband from London, stating that he had succeeded in leaving Germany, and since matters in England had required his attention he had concluded to go there instead of Paris. His family were instructed to join him there, and they would all sail for home as soon as they could secure passage.

Before getting away from Paris, Mrs. Turnlee received another letter from her husband informing her that communication with America had been almost entirely cut off, and if she preferred Paris to London she might remain there until he could get a passage home. Mrs. Turnlee and her daughters very much preferred Paris to London, and wrote that they would remain where they were.

In Miss Lillian Turnlee I met my fate, and within a few weeks after my arrival in Paris we were engaged. I was acceptable to the mother, and my fiancee was naturally anxious that I should make a good impression on her father. She wrote him that she was engaged to the "loveliest man on earth" and was sure he would approve of her choice. As to that I well knew nothing could be determined till he saw me.

A time came when Mr. Turnlee succeeded in securing passage on a liner bound for New York and wrote his family to come at once to London. I found it convenient to go with them—indeed, they felt the need of a man's services on the journey. We crossed the channel at night with the lights darkened and arrived in London the next morning. I separated from my friends at the railway station, going to my favorite hotel, having arranged to call on them in the evening and meet my future father-in-law.

I have said that my getting safely out of Germany was the moment of greatest happiness and relief of my life. The moment of greatest astonishment and horror was when I met Mr. Turnlee. The whole family were present. Lillian took me by the hand and led me to her father. He was staring at me as if he had seen a monster. I returned his gaze in kind. His family, especially Lillian, wondered.

"What object had you in shadowing me in Berlin," he asked angrily, "and afterward on the train?"

"My dear sir," I said, "I supposed you were shadowing me."

There was a silence during which he and I stared at each other, while the family gaped first at one, then at the other of us.

"All I have to say to you, young man," said Mr. Turnlee, "is that you caused me the fright of my life. I expected every minute that you were about to turn me over to the police. Can it possibly be that you are not a German spy?"

"Such I supposed you to be. I never dreamed that you were an American and the father of the loveliest girl in the world."

By this I broke in upon the antagonism Mr. Turnlee and I felt for each other; Lillian pushed me toward her father; he put out his hand, and we began a hasty dialogue on the incidents of our mutual mistrife. I am happy to say that I soon secured his good will and his approval as a son-in-law.

We all sailed together for America, and Lillian and I are now man and wife.

Ely's Cream Balm is just what every cold and catarrh sufferer has been seeking. It's just splendid.

The Work of Coughing.

If you cough once every fifteen minutes for ten hours you expend energy equivalent to two hundred and fifty units of heat, which is equivalent to the nourishment contained in three eggs or two glasses of milk. So says a German who has specialized on the waste of energy in coughing.

At a normal rate we expel air from the chest at the rate of four feet per second, but in violent coughing we expel it at the rate of three hundred feet a second. Thus a persistent cough not only weakens the constitution, but it is a direct cause of emaciation according to the same authority. Such weighty statistics lead to a reiteration of the oft-repeated injunction, "never neglect a cough."—Popular Science Monthly.

Philip's Reminder.

Philip, father of Alexander, had a servant whose sole business it was to remind him that he was human. It is said accordingly that he never went from the house and, having returned, never gave audience to any one without first this servant saying to him three times in a loud voice, "Philip, thou art but a man!"

Right In Line.

"Have your millions enabled your children to marry well?"

"Rather. My daughter married a cabaret dancer and my son is engaged to a prominent chorus girl. We're headed for the best society now."

Breakfast Habits.

Mrs. X.—When my husband stays out all night I refuse to get him any breakfast. Mrs. Y.—When my husband stays out all night he never wants any.

The Waste of War
is terrible, but the waste of food in times of peace is colossal. Rich and poor alike eat tons of food that has little food value—and this useless food breaks down the so-called eliminating organs and depletes the physical and mental powers. Shredded Wheat Biscuit is all food, prepared by a process which makes every particle thoroughly digested. It is 100 per cent. whole wheat. Two or three of these Biscuits with milk, make a nourishing meal, supplying the greatest amount of energy at lowest cost. Delicious with sliced bananas, berries or other fruits.
Made in Canada.

His Word For It.

There was an old lecturing dominie who was strong in astronomical similitudes and calculations. "Arcturus," he would declare, "is 702,048,925 miles distant from the sun."

"But, dominie," some surprised auditor would interrogate, "how in the world do you arrive at these specific figures?"

The answer would come with crushing dignity and the tone of intellectual superiority: "I assert it, sir. Disprove it if you can."

The Perspective of Light.

Velasques recognized that light is elastic and illuminates the air; hence he was the first to discover a new kind of perspective. Men long ago had learned to make lines vanish from the eye, to make the figures diminish in size and shape as they recede from the front end to explain the distance by contrasts of light and shade. But he discovered the perspective of light. By the most delicate rendering of the quantity of light reflected from each and every part of the room and the figures and objects in it he has given to the latter the reality of form and to the room its appearance of hollowness and distance.

Game Increasing.

The gratifying announcement is made by wild game conservation societies in different parts of the United States that game is no longer decreasing. With the rapid clearing of forests and with too lax laws for the protection of birds and animals the country apparently faced, until a few years ago, the extermination of wild life. Reforestation and the setting apart of large forest reserves have helped in the work of conservation. The result will be more noticeable from year to year. In many sections of the country, too, laws have been passed supplementing the federal migratory bird provision, which insure valuable and timely protection.—Christian Science Monthly.

CHOICE RECIPES

RECIPES WORTH KEEPING AT HAND.

Gooseberries.

Gooseberry jam— Select firm, ripe gooseberries. To three pounds of gooseberries allow two pounds of sugar. Wash and stem berries and boil in porcelain lined kettle for one hour, stirring frequently. Turn into small jars or glasses while boiling hot and seal.

Bar-le-Duc gooseberries — Only large and perfect berries should be used. Wash, drain and shell carefully Make a small slit on one side of each berry, and through this with a sharp needle remove seeds, handling gently and seeing that berry retains its shape. Allow equal weight of strained honey to that of berries. Heat honey in saucepan and when hot carefully add gooseberries and let simmer for a few minutes. Skim out fruit. Boil syrup down to half the quantity. Pour over fruit, place in wide necked bottles and seal.

Gooseberry and pine apple jam—Peel and remove the eyes from one good sized pineapple; shred with silver fork. Wash, stem and remove the calyx ends of four quarts of gooseberries. Allow three-quarters of a pound of sugar to one pound of prepared fruit. Put the pineapples, with sufficient water to keep it from burning, in saucepan, and cook fifteen minutes. Add gooseberries and sugar and cook until thick, stirring frequently.

Green gooseberry and currant jelly—Wash, drain and stem gooseberries and currants. Use in the proportion of one part of currants to three of gooseberries and an equal amount of sugar to that of fruit. Mash berries and currants and boil together in a saucepan for fifteen minutes. Strain through jelly bag. If the seeds from the gooseberries clog the flow of the juice, scrape the inside of the bag with a silver spoon. Heat sugar in flat pans in oven. Add equal amount of heated sugar to that of juice and boil thirty minutes. Skim as needed.

STICKINESS.

If scissors with which marshmallows are cut for candy, puddings, icings, etc., are held under a hot water faucet every few minutes during the process you will find that it does away with all the stickiness on the blades which is so annoying.

MOTHER OF FOUR CHILDREN

How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Kept Her Well and Strong.

Lincoln, Illinois.—"I have used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for ten years with good results and I have four healthy children. This summer I was in a very run down condition and the very hot weather seemed more than I could stand, but I commenced taking your Compound in June and from then until September 26th, when my last baby was born, I got along much better than I had before. My baby was a girl and weighed 14 pounds at birth, and I recovered very rapidly which I am sure was due to your medicine. I am well and strong now, nurse my baby and do all my work. I had the same good results with your medicine when needed before my other children came and they are all healthy. My mother has taken your medicine with equal satisfaction. She had her last child when nearly 44 years old and feels confident she never would have carried him through without your help, as her health was very poor."—Mrs. T. F. CLOYD, 1855 North Gulick Ave, Decatur, Ill.

Expectant mothers should profit by Mrs. Cloyd's experience, and trust to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

THERE HAS BEEN NO CONVERSION.

Indianapolis News:—"The war which was begun by the autocracy without consulting the people is now described as the people's war, and it is to them, as its supposed beneficiaries, that the Kaiser yesterday addressed himself. There has been no conversion. The change of attitude must be the result of pressure exerted by a deceived and betrayed people. What the Kaiser seeks is continued support in his hour of trial."

THE HOME CIRCLE COLUMN

Pleasant Evening Reveries—A Column Dedicated to Tired Mothers as They Join the Home Circle at Evening Tide

CRUDE THOUGHTS FROM THE EDITORIAL PEN

Who of us is so immersed in the cares of business or so hardened by the grind of daily toil that we cannot find in this magic word, Home, a charm beyond the spell of the amulets? Home! Home! The very name itself is an anthem in an acorn! Composed of only four letters of the English alphabet, it is one of the simplest words known to the tongue of Tennyson and Shapespeare. It takes but a breath to voice it. It takes but a stroke to write it. But an ocean plummet cannot sound its crystal depth of meaning. It has been the dream of all poets. It has been the burden of all songs. It has been the inspiration of all heroic thoughts and deeds and lives.

* * *

Spend some of your evenings at home with your wife and children. If you have an amiable gentle wife surely your home must be a pleasant one, but if, from increasing cares or other reasons, she has grown fretful or sullen, who knows but a little more attention or kindness on your part might do a great deal towards the return of the amiability you so much admired in her girlhood. If you would stay at home oftener evenings, treating her with something of the old tenderness, making her believe, at least, that you are not wholly indifferent to her happiness, you would soon see a change for the better in your household.

* * *

What's the use of getting into a worry and fret over gossip that has been set afloat to your disadvantage by some meddlesome busybody who has more time than character. These things can't possibly injure you, unless, indeed, you take notice of them, and in combatting them give them character and standing. If what is said about you is true, set yourself right at once; if it is false, let it go for what it will fetch. If a bee stings you, would you go to the hive and destroy it? Would not a thousand come upon you? It is wisdom to say little respecting the injuries you have received.

* * *

Teach your children to love the beautiful. Give them a corner in the garden for flowers; encourage them to put it in the shape of hanging baskets; show them where they can best view the sunset; rouse them in the morning, not with the stern "time to go to work," but with the enthusiastic "see the beautiful sunrise." Buy for them pretty pictures and encourage them to decorate their rooms in his or her childish way. Give them an inch and they will go a mile. Allow them the privilege and they will make your home beautiful.

* * *

Setting a young man afloat with money left him by his relatives, is like tying a bladder under the arms of one who cannot swim; ten chances to one he will lose the bladder, and go to the bottom. Teach him to swim and he will not need the bladder. Give your child a good education. See to it that his morals are pure, his mind cultivated and his whole nature made subservient to the laws which govern man and you will have given what will be of more value than the wealth of the Indies. You have given him a start which no misfortune can deprive him of.

* * *

What chance has a young lady a little out of style who has to earn her own living, to shine in society by the side of one of our fashionable ladies whose papa is a millionaire? Socially we are the slaves of gold. Old fashioned people look at it in the old fashioned way and say it is all wrong. And so it is: but it is a fact that that stares us in the face that those who are worth the most are considered as the most worth. After all, perhaps the wisest man was right when he said, "the love of money is the root of all evil."

* * *

Mothers sometimes forget that the active and receptive stage of child-life in the nursery is never surpassed at a later period. The little one is taking impressions every moment, acquiring gentle habits or the opposite, picking up words and sentences, surprising his elders by the facility with which he learns what they would rather he should not know. In the baby's home the foundation is laid for the good or bad manners of the mature man.

* * *

Why should you go out to tea and praise your neighbor's muffins, when you have forgotten to tell mother how good hers were? Why should you announce how much Mr. Wilson over the way knows, when father is a great deal better informed man, and it has never entered your little head to whisper quietly to him how much you appreciate his wisdom? You keep your ability to discover faults for the home while the eye that should look for vitures is closed tightly until you go out.

* * *

We should strive to make ourselves such members of the household band that our absence is like the loss of sunshine from a summer day. We can do it if we enter into the right spirit of home. The idea seems to exist among us that to be polite to each other in the family circle is foolish and like "putting on airs." We must rid ourselves of this notion and act on the principle that whatever helps to make our intercourse pleasanter with those outside the family circle, should be brought into use there.

* * *

Profanity never did any man the least good. No man is the richer, the happier or the wiser for it. It commands no one to any society. It is disgusting to the refined; abominable to the good; insulting to those with whom we associate; degrading to the mind; unprofitable, needless, and injurious in society. Young man, do not be profane.

* * *

If you think a house should have only one head, and that be yours, postpone your wedding indefinitely.

BELGIUM—ALIVE AND KICKING

(Chicago Tribune).

The most Belgian thing left in captive Belgium is not the Gothic spire at Antwerp or the flaming vehemence of Mercier. It is a saucy little newspaper called La Libre Belge, and devoted to anti-Boche hilarities of the gayest inspiration.

For two years the Germans in Belgium have camped on its trail, yet out it comes, unscared, always with a free copy for General von Bissing, always an announcement of its telegraphic address ("German Military Bureau, Brussels!"), and always its editorial address, "a cellar on wheels." Repeatedly its editor has been exposed in letters to the police. Whenever that happens they rush to the spot designated, and usually catch a German army officer or one of their own number. Still, La Libre Belge owns up to certain disadvantages attending a life of pleasure. Its circulation it describes as "regularly irregular," and its price as "elastic, ranging from nothing at all to adinfinitum. Patrons will please not exceed this limit."

The Tribune's compliments to La Libre Belge, Strength to its kick!

Sodom and Gomorrah were the two cities, said by some to be north, by others south, of the Dead Sea, which, according to the biblical story, were destroyed, 1898 B.C., by fire from heaven as a punishment for the extreme wickedness of their inhabitants. Lot and his wife were the only ones who escaped, and Lot's wife, you remember, was turned to a pillar of salt for looking back at the ruins.

Crucifixion, as a form of punishment, was in use among the Carthaginians, the Persians, Assyrians, Scythians, Indians, Germans and from the earliest times among the Greeks and Romans. It was abolished by Constantine, Emperor of Rome, toward the end of his reign, probably because of his increasing reverence for the cross. Exemption from crucifixion was the privilege of Roman citizenship, and punishment by the cross was confined to slaves or malefactors of the worst class. You will remember that Christ was crucified between two thieves.

PUBLIC OPINION

EACH BUSHEL MEANS SIXTY LOAVES.

(Grain Growers' Guide.)

The spectre of hunger is not confined within the battle lines of Germany and her allies. The whole western world is face to face with a food shortage. Millions of men have been withdrawn from agriculture to man the trenches and the munition factories and their places are but partially and less efficiently filled. The production of last year was still further reduced by widespread unfavourable weather conditions, while of the grain that was marketed large quantities have been sunk by submarines.

The 1917 wheat crop will not solve the world's food problem. No combination of favourable circumstances can remove the threat of famine before the 1918 crop is marketed. The increase in British crop acreage for 1918 may avert actual starvation in Britain, but will be far short of the ordinary food necessities of the Allies. Every motive calls for the best efforts of Canadian farmers to ensure maximum production for that year. Work in the preparation for that crop is already under way.

Ginger-bread mixture, with ground nuts added, then baked in the form of drop cakes, is delicious.

Shower Baths for Hogs.

Shipping hogs to the slaughter-house in freight cars is a precarious business. Strange to say, hogs, as a rule, do not suffer while the cars are in motion, but a great many die from overheating while the cars are not moving. Furthermore, the first warm weather of the season is more severe on hogs than the hot weather later in the season. A train may become stalled upon arrival at a division point and within 24 hours enough hogs may die from overheating to cause the shipper or the railroad a great financial loss.

To afford the shipper the protection he needs and to protect itself against loss, the St. Louis and San Francisco Railroad has installed a hog-watering device at its principal division points. Immediately upon arriving at these points the freight trains carrying hogs are stopped and the hogs are given an impromptu shower bath. As a general thing a stream of water is first turned into the bedding underneath the hogs. After the bedding is well saturated the nozzle of the hose is turned to the roof of the car and the water falls on the hogs. A drain box is provided under the car to carry off the waste water.—Popular Science Monthly.

A Valid Excuse.

"Madam, why do you want to get out of doing jury duty?"

"Judge, I haven't a thing fit to wear."

"Talesswoman excused."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Hands Across Border

LT.-COL. JOHN S. DENNIS,
Who has been loaned by Lord Shaughnessy as Commanding Officer British Recruiting Mission, Western Division, for the recruiting of British and Canadian subjects in the United States. Col. Dennis is stationed in Chicago at the present time.

YOU wouldn't exactly call it hands across the sea, because Canada is only across a lake; but Canada is part of England, which is a long way from South State Street. Anyway, what I'm driving at is this:

Lieutenant Colonel J. S. Dennis, officer commanding the western division of the British Recruiting Mission, recently clasped hands with Captain F. R. Kenney, officer commanding the recruiting district of Northern Illinois for the United States army.

When two belligerent parties shake hands there are only two things which the referee or third party can say—either "Take your corners" or "Bless you, my children."

I said neither. But I held my breath, for it was an impressive moment, the formal enactment in Chicago of immortal history; the physical union of the fighting strength of two great nations. And the spirit of patriotic co-operation in the common cause of justice sanctified the alliance.

Colonel Dennis and Captain Kenney joined in plans. What they want is men to send to the front. Neither has any choice as to whether the men go in Canadian kilts or American khakis.

At every one of the dozens of scattered stations under Captain Kenney's command volunteers of Canadian citizenship are being taken for the expeditionary forces of the Dominion; at every headquarters over which Colonel Dennis has control volunteers of American allegiance are being taken for our own National Army.

Captain Kenney is credited with being a bit of a bearcat on the science of recruiting. But he was immensely impressed with the policies and ideas expressed by the distinguished Canadian man of war.

The solid week of British rallying days will show some fireworks illustrative of the spirit that created and transcontinental Canada's first 100,000. A Hippo band will whoop it up, there will be many meetings and monday midday and thousands of direct appeals by mail and an advertising and newspaper campaign with no limits determined.

Colonel Dennis says that there are 157,000 Canadians in Chicago. Calgary, with a total population of 60,000, sent 16,000 soldiers to the front. What then might Chicago yield. There are about 350,000 British subjects here, and some sixty-five St. George and Maple Leaf societies. There is no shortage of material hereabout for the British recruiting mission.

A thrillingly interesting man is Colonel Dennis. He is the most versatile individual I have ever met. If one were suddenly to inquire in Ottawa, "Who is Dennis?" one might get back the typically British answer, "Who is he not?"

For years he was assistant to the president of the Canadian Pacific Railway, Lord Shaughnessy. He has fought Indians, is a veteran with honors of the South African expedition, has engineered road building where Indians had to be killed as regularly as ties had to be laid in the progress; but he is more—he is a dilettante journalist, a devotee of art, a snappy after dinner talker, an occasional enthusiastic Broadwayite, a raconteur of modest but fascinating personality. Robust and mighty of stature, he rings with military melody all over. The colonel is making headquarters in the Marquette building and his residence at the Blackstone. Welcome to our city!—By Jack Lait.

Rehearsals Counted

Sergt. J. A. Anderson of Victoria, formerly a member of the original 30th Battalion, was the first Vancouver man who went through the big battle at Vimy Ridge to return home. "Our regiment was stationed at Mount St. Eloi, on the right flank," he said. "The brigade was stretched out for a distance of three miles, and, aided by our rehearsals, we were able to drive the Heinies off the ridge."

Indian Offered His All

"Take my men, take my money, take me." That remark, uttered by one of India's maharajahs, exemplified the spirit of India in connection with the war, according to the statement made in Vancouver by Miss Arnold, who for 23 years had been an inspector of schools for the Indian government in the Madras Presidency.

Horses on the French front have gas masks.

Protect Cream in Transit

The cream should be kept in the cooling tank until it leaves the farm. While being hauled on the wagon and waiting for the train at the station, it should be properly protected against heat in summer and cold in winter. This can be done by using a covered wagon for hauling, or by hauling the cream in insulated cans, or by slipping a jacket over the cans, or by covering the cans with a wet blanket in summer and a dry blanket in winter. If the cans arrive at the station long before train time, as is often the case, a cooling tank filled with water and located in the shade, should be provided.

Under the operation of a drainage law, Prince Edward Island is expected to increase its farm values by $4,000,000.

One of the newer electric irons is made to retain much of its heat after the current is shut off and then save electricity.

Refused to Use Land

Summoned by the Leicestershire War Agricultural Committee for failing to cultivate a seven-acre field, William Peberdy, a Barwell farmer, was fined $25 or 25 days' imprisonment. He replied that he had the money but would sooner do "time."

Surgery in the Stone Age

A flint knife has recently been found in Fraserburgh, Aberdeenshire, which had been used in performing surgical operation in the Stone Age. It is almost identical with the operating knife adopted by surgeons within the past few years.

Save the water in which peas, beans or potatoes are cooked. This makes good material for the stock pot.

VEIL OVER THE FLANDERS FRONT BELIEVED TO BE OF GREAT SIGNIFICANCE

Official Silence During Past 24 Hours May Be of Unusual Import—Canadians Have Tightened Their Grip on Lens—Naval Activity Reported.

NIGHT RAIDERS ACTIVE

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Aug. 8.—An air of expectancy for big things on both land and sea prevailed in London to-day.

Slowly, but surely, the grip on Lens, the great coal centre of France, held by the Germans, is tightening. The Canadians are now astride the Lens-Bethune road, and within striking distance of the positions in which the enemy will make his last stand to hold the present line. The official silence regarding operations in Flanders during the past twenty-four hours is regarded as probably holding the greatest significance.

In the meantime speculation has been revived in London as to whether the German fleet may yet be planning another sally into the North Sea. Frequent appearances of small German vessels from their bases are being reported. British scout ships and aeroplanes have brought in word of sighting these warships, though no actual engagements have been reported.

The Flanders battle is following the course of the usual British offensive, a violent attack, then a period given over to consolidation and new preparations, followed by a renewed assault.

Roar Of Big Guns Distinctly Heard In London District

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Aug. 8.—The roar of big guns as they hurled their tons of metal against the German lines, was distinctly heard here last night. Windows in the south end, on the Thames, thirty miles from London, vibrated from the concussion of the bombardment. The intense bombardment heard in England served to increase the general feeling of expectancy of impending big events. Field Marshal Haig was silent as to operations about Lens to-day, but further word from that section is anxiously awaited.

Artillery Activity Reported By French

Special to The Examiner.

PARIS, Aug. 8.—Great artillery activity on the Aisne front, beginning last night, was reported by the War Office to-day.

East of Vauxillon and west of the Californie plateau, enemy detachments attacked the French lines, but were thrown back. North of St. Mihiel and in Alsace, German raids failed.

Minor Operations Reported By Haig

Special to the Examiner.

LONDON, August 8.—Renewed activity at both ends of the Flanders battle line, but without any major operations, was reported by Field Marshal Haig to-day. Near Lombartzyde, on the coast, night raiding parties successfully entered the German trenches, capturing a few prisoners and a machine gun. To the east and north of Ypres, particularly in the neighbourhood of the West Hoek-Ypres Railway, artillery was active throughout the night.

MR. GILLESPIE AGAIN SWEPT CHEESE BOARD

Bought 2727 Boxes at 21 3-16 cts. This Morning—Session Was Uneventful and Delayed in Opening

NEXT BOARD IN TWO WEEKS

CHEESE BOARD SUMMARY.

To-day's sale—2,727 boxes at 21 3-16c
Three weeks ago—3,002 boxes, at 20 7-8c.
One year ago—2,368 boxes, at 17 5-8c

This morning's session of the Cheese Board opened one-half an hour late. Owing to difficulties in telephoning to their commission houses in Montreal, the buyers were delayed, and arrived just when the salesmen were about to adjourn and sell off the board. It was a tame, routine meeting, marked only by Mr. John Riddell's buying opposition to Mr. Gillespie.

The factories boarded as follows:

Keene	60
Warminster	120
Ghearer	125
Selwyn	140
Villiers	130
Warsaw	140
Westwood	225
Oakdale	95
Missing Link	80

Stoney Lake	44
Mount Pleasant	60
Norwood	219
Fleetwood	115
Killarney	133
Apsley	75
North Dummer	77
Total	2,727

THE BIDDING.

Mr. Gillespie opened at 20 cents, with Messrs. Kerr, Thompson, Riddell and Morton competing, and obtained first call at 21 3-16 cents. He swept the Board of all but Warsaw factory, which after refusing to sell, accepted Mr. Kerr's offer at the same price.

The next meeting will be held on August 22nd.

Serial Story Begins To-morrow

"Mountain Madness" Will Make Its Initial Appearance To-morrow

"Mountain Madness" is a notable contribution to the list of serial stories that have appeared in the Examiner from time to time. The first instalment of this new addition will appear in Thursday's issue. There is interest in every sentence. It is a story of the mountain heights and of the depths that lie between. Every character and every situation is convincingly real. Do not miss the first instalment which will appear in to-morrow's issue.

GERMANS IMITATE TOBACCO.

Strawberry Leaves, Lavender, Fennel, and Woodruff in Mixture.

AMSTERDAM, Aug. 8.—The recognized standard substitute for pipe tobacco placed on the market in Germany is a blend of strawberry leave, lavender, fennel, and woodruff, and sells at a price equivalent to about 75 cents a pound.

Smokers say it is "passable, but apt to bite the tongue." On the other hand, a soldier in the trenches who received a packet of the mixture from his brother wrote to the sender that he "would take the first chance to wring his neck for foisting such abominable stuff on him as if it were tobacco."

Herr Professors End Peace Talk

AMSTERDAM, Aug. 7.—Seventy-eight professors of Bonn University have signed a petition urging the German Government never to make another peace offer, since Germany's recent offer has been answered by the British challenge to retire behind the Rhine." The signers consider that another peace proposal would be mischievous.

Consecon Doctor Dead, Wife And Child May Die

Special to The Examiner:

PICTON, Ont., August 8. — Dr. Bean was burned to death, and his wife and baby so terribly burned they have but slight chances of recovery, when their residence was completely destroyed by fire about 5 o'clock this morning at Consecon. The cause of the fire is unknown. The house was all in flames when Dr. Bean and his wife were awakened. They rescued the baby and put the child out a window. Mrs. Bean managed to get out of the house, but Dr. Bean was overcome by the smoke and perished. The body had not been recovered this forenoon.

Sixty-Four Pledges Have Been Secured

Encouraging Report Received at Three O'clock This Afternoon

At 3 o'clock this afternoon, Mr. W. R. Breyfogle reported that a total of sixty-four pledges have been secured. This means that sixty-four men will be available for work on the neighbouring farms, during the harvest period. Reports have been received from the following sources:

DeLaval Company, Limited, 20 men.
Matthews-Blackwell Co. — 10 men
Utilities Commission—6 men.
Bonner-Worth—3 men.
Peterborough Cereal Co.—2 men.
J. J. Turner and Sons—1 man.

In addition to the above the police have reported twenty men who are willing to go, making a total of sixty four pledges.

Mr. Breyfogle anticipates no difficulty in securing one hundred men. None of the larger manufacturing establishments have reported yet.

Late this afternoon Mr. W. A. Richardson of the Peterborough Canoe Co., reported seven volunteers from that factory, making the present total from Peterborough 74.

Country Drifting Toward Racial War

Special to The Examiner:

MONTREAL, P.Q., August 8. — "We are nearing racial and religious war," said Archbishop Bruchesi, at St. James' Cathedral this morning speaking at the festivities commemorating his twentieth anniversary as a bishop. He said: "The church is above parties, but we cannot close our eyes to events. We have reached an exceedingly grave position. Divisions between the provinces and between nationalities have been accentuated.

After expressing regret that such differences should arise in Canada, Mgr. Bruchesi continued: "Incontestable rights have been violated, laws have been passed of which even those who passed them seem to be afraid. And what should our course be? Let us pray, let us work for a good understanding."

Body Removed To Toronto

The body of the late John F. Aiken who died in Nicholls Hospital, yesterday, as a result of injuries received at Burketon Station, on Monday night, was identified last night by Mr. James Booth, a brother-in-law of the deceased, and taken this morning to Toronto, where he resided at 11 Waterloo Avenue. Deceased was forty-two years of age, and has for the past ten years been employed as head blacksmith with the Dominion Glass Company. He leaves a wife and five small children.

WESTERN LIBERALS CONDEMN BORDEN FOR PARTISAN WAR ADMINISTRATION

No Longer Entitled to the Confidence of the People—Should Have Given Canada a National Government to Prosecute the War

CONVENTION IS PROCEEDING

Special to The Examiner:

WINNIPEG, Man., Aug. 8.—Premier Sifton, at 12.30 to-day, presented amid tremendous applause, the resolution on which the Resolutions committee of Western Liberals was unanimously agreed in connection with the Borden government's administration of the war. He declared the government is no longer entitled to the people's confidence because it has given a partisan administration, whereas such things should concern the entire nation and not any section of class. This resolution, which was carried without dissent, and which was made the occasion of a tremendous demonstration, will be formed later to-day by one dealing with the future conduct of the war.

WESTERNERS WANT AGRICULTURAL BANKS

WINNIPEG, Aug. 8.— A resolution asking for the establishment of local agricultural banks was the first considered by the Western Liberals this morning. It was presented by Hon. W. Motherwell. Mr. Motherwell said that most Canadians had been brought up with the idea that banks were rather places to deposit money than places to borrow. Conditions of farming however, had demanded farmers' credits, and insufficiency of the banking system had proven inadequate. Delegate Haslam, cautioned the delegates not to be impatient, because the war resolution was not yet presented. "The committee was endeavouring," he explained, "to construct a resolution which the whole Liberal party of Canada can unite on."

It was common knowledge that the Resolutions committee had been in session until three a.m. on the war issue.

WINNIPEG, Man., Aug. 7. — The political future of the West is still in the lap of the gods, but there is one hopeful sign, and it is expressed by the words, "a solid West," printed on the badges of hundreds of delegates, who appeared at the opening of the Western Liberal convention here today. A feeling has developed to-day among the representatives of these Western Provinces, which seems to express itself in favour of preserving peace and harmony at any price.

Last night pro-Laurier sentiment was at its height. The demonstration of the Cross-Oliver detachment from Alberta fairly stampeded those delegates who had not found their bearings. To-night, however, the Laurier spell is wearing off and opinion is now shifting to a more favourable consideration of the organization of a distinctly Western wing of the Liberal party.

Saskatchewan holds the balance of power. The delegates from that Province, guided by the shrewd hand of Hon. J. A. Calder, are keeping their silence, and attempting to unite the conflicting elements of Alberta and Manitoba and British Columbia on a common policy. And the real aspiration of Saskatchewan, the seed-bed of progressive Liberalism for over ten years, is the formation of a strong Western political group.

Tuesday Afternoon.

The sessions this afternoon and to-night were entirely devoted to resolutions of economical and social interest. A long programme of reforms still remains to be submitted before the convention will be allowed to declare itself on the war resolution, which, it is hoped, may be presented for approval to-morrow afternoon.

Approve Nation-Wide Prohibition.

The concluding feature of to-day's sessions was an enthusiastic endorsation of nation-wide prohibition during the period of the war. The resolution, which was adopted unanimously, was moved by Mrs. Charles Robinson of Winnipeg, and seconded by Mrs. Tedford of Yorkton, and read as follows:

"Resolved, that, as a war measure, and with the object of utilizing to the fullest extent the food values within the Dominion, the Federal Government should take possession of all stocks of alcohol, and the Federal Government should absolutely prohibit the manufacture, importation exportation, storage or sale of intoxicating liquors within the Dominion of Canada."

A strong resolution on agricultural credits, which, being under Provin-Mitchell of Edmonton and J. H. Haslam of Regina, and passed, as follows:—

"Resolved that, in view of the fact that several of the Provinces of Canada have inaugurated Governmental policies of long-term agricultural credites, which, being under Provincial control, permit each Province to deal adequately with the conditions which are peculiar to itself, and as it is desirable that in the development of these systems the money is obtained at the lowest cost; we believe that the Federal Government should make provision to assist the Provinces in securing the cheapest possible long-term credits for agriculturists by lending money to the Provinces at

Free Enough Ships To Carry All Cotton

LONDON, Aug. 7.—In a speech winding up the debate on the corn production bill in the House of Commons to-day, R. E Prothero, President of the Board of Agriculture, pointed out that if the bill succeeded to the extent anticipated in adding to the home-grown wheat acreage there would be released sufficient tonnage to bring from America the entire cotton supply required by Great Britain last year.

Conscription Bill Will Become Law Within A Week

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, August 8.—It is expected that the Military Service Act will become law this week. As soon as it has received the royal assent the panalty clauses for "incitation" against the Act will come into force at once. Those who feel like talking publicly, against the measure have therefore only a few days of grace left to them. It is not the intention of the Government to wait for an election to put the measure into effect.

Tribunals are to be appointed and the regulations drawn up at once.

Need For Public Bathing Places

Necessity is Emphasized in Set of Photographs Shown in the Windows of the Roy Studio

The need for bathing houses in Peterborough is strikingly illustrated in a set of photographs which appeared to-day for the first time in the windows of the Roy Studio. "How Peterborough spends a hot afternoon" is the inscription on a card around which the pictures are ranged. Inverlea Park is included in the list. Boys are seen jumping off the Smith street bridge into the cool waters below, while another picture shows a much younger element hugging the shore that skirts the Park.

In the southern section of the city you see a number of youths disporting themselves in the polluted waters that run close to the street railway wharf. The boys dive off the manhole at at a point where the sewage pours into the river. The pictures present a strong case for supervised public bathing places.

The Fish Did Not Arrive

Mr. Pringle Had a Busy Morning—Shipment Friday

The announcement in the Examiner last night that the fish sent from the Atlantic by the Controller would be placed upon the local market gave Mr. G. A. Pringle, who is to handle the fish in the city, one of the busiest mornings he has had in many a month answering 'phone calls and customers eager to help out the food situation, and use this commodity. James' wholesale fish store, however, was unable to fill the demand in Toronto, and having only inferior qualities on hand, refused to send this to Peterborough. Mr Pringle assures the public that a large shipment has been promised to him for Friday morning, when it will sell at the same price as in Toronto, 10c per pound.

BRITAIN WILL DEMAND SERBIA'S INDEPENDENCE

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Aug. 8.— Independence of Serbia will be one of England's demands that must be met before peace is possible. Premier Lloyd George made this clear to-day in an address delivered at a luncheon in honour of Premier Pashitch of Serbia.

RUSSIANS MAKE NEW BESSARBIAN ADVANCE

Special to The Examiner:

PETROGRAD, Aug. 8. — Russia's troops have resumed the offensive on the Bessarabian-Austrian frontier. Two villages have been captured and three hundred prisoners taken. The offensive was located at the confluence of the Zbrucz and Dneister rivers.

NUMBER OF MEN IN PROSPECT FOR FARM EMPLOYMENT

Meeting Held Last Evening in the City Hall--Manufacturers Will Take a Hand in the Situation---Effort Will Be Made to Utilize Some of the Surplus Policemen---Local Conditions Are Fairly Satisfactory.

CANVAS TO BE MADE

A meeting of local manufacturers, aldermen and representative citizens was held last evening in the Committee Room of the City Hall for the purpose of meeting in a practical way the Dominion Food Controller's request for one hundred men from this city to help harvest the crops. As a result of last night's meeting, the majority of manufacturers present agreed to institute a canvas of their employees and ascertain the number of men willing to assist. Mr. W. R. Breyfogle who presided, distributed cards among the employers of labour present. These will be filled in to-day, and the net result communicated to Toronto.

DISTRICT REPRESENTATIVE.

Mr. G. A. Gillespie, M.P.P., anticipates a local demand for help during the next two or three weeks. He said Mr. McRae, district representative with headquarters in Norwood, had reported that the Norwood district was fairly well supplied with help.

Mr. V. Eastwood was of the opinion that Mr. McRae should be located in Peterborough for the next few weeks where the demand for help is greater than in the eastern townships. Mr. Gillespie concurred in Mr. Eastwood's suggestion. He said that there should be a branch in both places. As it is now Mr. McRae only makes occasional visits to Peterborough. Mr. Eastwood moved that representations be made to the department with a view of having Mr. McRae transferred to Peterborough for the harvest period. This was seconded by Alderman Stratton and carried. Mr. Eastwood volunteered to supply an office if necessary. Mr. Gillespie informed the meeting that Mr. McRae had received a telegram from the department yesterday inquiring as to the number of extra men required to handle the crop in Peterborough County. Mr. Gillespie did not think that any outside help would be needed.

FAIRLY WELL SUPPLIED.

Alderman Weir said he had been through a number of the townships and as a general thing the farmers were in fairly good shape. Mr. Gillespie said that it would take about three weeks to clean up the harvest.

Mr. Breyfogle suggested that the employers get together and figure out the number of available men on a pro rate basis. Mr. Breyfogle estimated that of the number employed by the De Laval Company, about eight or ten could be spared.

Acting Mayor Duncan thought it would be possible to comb a few men out of the Board of Works Department. Long hours, hard work and less pay were referred to as possible handicaps in getting the required number of men on the farms. Acting Mayor Duncan thought that the farmer who needed men badly would be satisfied to pay three dollars a day.

FARMERS MAKING MUNITIONS.

Alderman Smith wanted to know how many farmers driving their own cars and horses were working in the city.

"That information won't help the harvest," observed Mr. Eastwood.

Acting Mayor Duncan told of two men who had asked why they should go out and work on the farm for less money, alleging that the farmer would come back later on and charge them five dollars a bag for potatoes and other produce.

Mr. Breyfogle failed to understand why patriotism did not go a little deper than a matter of dollars and cents. "In the case of a fire you would run and help put it out without stopping to ask how much am I going to get" said Mr. Breyfogle. He thought that prospective recruits for the farms should show more practical patriotism in connection with the present situation.

THE POLICE FORCE.

Alderman Stratton—"I think we could safely dispense with fifty per cent. of the police force during the harvest period. I would move that the Police Commissioners be asked to release fifty per cent. of the policemen for farm work." Aldrman Stratton included in his motion, three men from the Fire, Water and Light Committee, and one-third of the men employed in the operation of the public utilities, such as the street car service. The resolution was seconded by Alderman Worth and carried. Acting Mayor Duncan and Alderman Worth agreed to wait upon the Chief of Police with a view of having the policemen round up the young men who parade the streets and haunt the poolrooms.

Mr. Breyfogle—"They ought to do one thing or the other. They haven't enlisted." Mr. Breyfogle suggested that the names of the men who volunteer for farm service be inserted in the press.

Mr. Gillespie said that once a man was ready to go he should be transported to his destination as soon as possible, as there was always a chance he would backfire.

A couple of the representatives present volunteered to take the men out in their cars. "If you are all busy we can use the red waggon in the Fire Hall," said Alderman Stratton.

Alderman Weir and Alderman Worth introduced a resolution recommending that the two farm tractors which are at present idle, be utilized. Mr. R. L. Dobbin, Superintendent of the Waterworks Department, volunteered to operate one of the tractor ploughs. The resolution carried.

Tremendous Task Confronts America Says Elihu Root

Special to The Examiner:

WASHINGTON, August 8. — All America, Canada, as well as the United States, must set herself for a tremendous struggle if Germany is to be overwhelmed. Hundreds of thousands of troops must be sent to France. Railroads, railroad engineers, and supplies must be hurried to Russia. Fuel must be supplied to Italy. Otherwise, the hope of crushing the great Teuton military machine will dwindle month by month and the war will be indefinitely prolonged.

This was the message brought the Government here to-day by members of Elihu Root's American Commission to Russia, returning from their long and historic trip. Russia, they report, is safe. She will survive her present difficulties, and to-day is doing more in a military way to win the war than America.

Departments Responding.

The return of the Commission found all Government departments here, however, ready to respond to the tremendous demands they face.

While shipping prices are being whipped into shape, steps are being taken further to block the efforts of big business to gouge the Allies. A policy has been decided upon to refuse licenses to those firms charging more for supplies to the Allies than this Government deems fair. Meantime the State Department received a few insights on internal conditions in Austria, Russia and Italy. It is reported that malignant diseases are taking a terrible toll in Austria, and with food stuffs scarce, a winter of great suffering is predicted. In Germany, money scarcity is beginning to cause real uneasiness.

Marjorie Rambeau In "The Debt"

At the Empire Theatre To-night—Matinees Re-open To-morrow Afternoon

One of the greatest moving picture stars before the public at the present time is Marjorie Rambeau. She will be seen at the Empire to-night in "The Debt," a wonderfully attractive picture. To-morrow afternoon will be the first matinee, and the same programme will be given then and to-morrow night. Don't miss this picture.

HELP REAP THE HARVEST.

The farmers of Ontario badly need help to gather the harvest of 1917. The crop is a large and important one, and owing to weather conditions ripening and need of cutting have come on with a rush. Farmers, owing to the war taking so many farmers' sons for the fighting line and war industries making large demands upon labour, are short of help to gather the harvest.

It seems unnecessary to insist upon the importance of this help. It is needed to prevent waste, which is sure to ensue if the crops are not gathered in good time. Then the whole world is clamouring for food, especially our allies, who need it to maintain the working efficiency of home workers, and especially need it to keep up the strength and efficiency of the allied soldiers in the field.

There is no possible doubt of the need of food for these purposes, and there is no possible doubt of the need of the farmers of Ontario for help to gather their crops.

But there is a question of an adequate supply of labour to meet the demand, unless those in a position to help come to the rescue and face the situation seriously and determinedly.

No one who can help should be deluded with the idea that his individual and personal services can be dispensed with; no one is justified in thinking that some one will turn up to take his place and that there is no need for him to bestir himself, or put himself out a little to do his share in helping win the war.

The soldiers of Canada now at the front didn't take that line of—reasoning, but felt that upon each one rested a duty to make the sacrifice in the interests of the future peace and happiness of Canada.

Reaping the harvest seems to be a prosaic way of helping win the war, but the man who helps harvest and save a bushel of wheat is as much helping win the war as the soldier in the trenches, who could not march a yard, or throw a bomb, or fire a shot, if he were not fed and fit, with the food reaped upon Ontario and other fields. He needs, and will for a long time, need food; and, with other needs to be met, he stands a chance of going unfed unless every bushel of grain Ontario can produce is made to count by being promptly harvested and housed in good condition.

The appeal to furnish help is made with a desire and means provided of avoiding sacrifice on the part of those called upon to help in the harvest. The Ontario government, to its credit, and with popular approval, will pay the railway fare both ways of men who volunteer for farm service and employers are to be asked to make up the difference between what factory firms are giving and what the farmers can pay. It is estimated that the wages for the men who volunteer for farm work from Peterborough will be $3.00 per day with board, the equivalent of $4.00, for a month or six weeks.

The people are asked to get this fact in their minds, that there is serious need for food in Britain, and in the fighting zone in France, and that Ontario must supply all she can; and the measure of her power to supply is conditional upon the help that can be furnished from urban centres to harvest the splendid crop.

We want our people to realize this and also to realize their personal interests in the matter. Food must be sent overseas and if the demand is met there may be shortage in Ontario; for we must share the last loaf with our British fellow citizens and with the allied fighting forces; and it is possible that our own rations may be short and difficult to obtain.

Anyway, we must win this war; and we must use every means required. One of these means is supplying food, and the urgent, present, crying need is help to reap the harvest. Let us fix that fact in our minds and make up our minds to do our best with both our heads and our hands to meet the demand; with our heads, we who cannot work, by advice, information, and interest; with our hands, those who can work, by volunteering for harvest service.

Sir Robert Borden is mistaken if he thinks passing conscription will wipe out the record or the memory of his administration with all its rottenness, crookedness and graft.

WHAT FIVE MILLIONS MEAN.

A correspondent, with a statistical turn of mind, has sent the following:

Editor, Examiner,—I wish to give your readers an idea of what a million dollars really means. As an example I will take our own County of Peterborough, with an equalized assessment of $9,091,005, which includes 12 townships and 3 villages. Of these municipalities the wealthiest is Otonabee, assessed value $2,225,919, population 2,630; second wealthiest Smith, assessed value $1,692,544, population, 2,428; third is Douro, assessed value $938,874, population 1,501. Those three large townships represent more than one-half the assessed value of the entire county, or an assessed value of $4,857,337, population 6,559.

The firm of which Sir Joseph Flavelle is president, according to the statement of a government official, cleaned up in one year's operations, selling bacon, etc., to the government, to feed our soldier boys, $5,000,000. This huge sum would buy outright the whole townships of Otonabee, Smith and Douro at their assessed value, with a population of 6,559 producers and still leave a surplus in the hands of the firm of $142,663, a pretty nice nest egg.

This $5,000,000 invested in a war loan, at the same rate of interest as the last would produce a revenue of $265,000 per annum, or enough to maintain a whole battalion of wounded soldiers or their dependents for all time to come.

Well may Canada pray for a Lloyd-George, a Sir James Whitney or some man who will lead the people and check plundering profiteers and grafters.

We are now asked to forget all about profiteering and grafting and remember one thing, that is the race cry—inflame race against race, creed against creed, and at the same time, with a loud voice shout loyalty. Is this patriotism? Is this the policy to win the war? Or is it not rather an attempt to pave the way to win an election?

In spite of the fact that Sir Joseph Flavelle has contradicted the government commission, who reported that the Davies Company had made a profit of five millions in one year, and declared that the profits were much less, yet it seems difficult to convince the popular mind that, with bacon at 35c. to 40c. per pound and a tremendous turn-over, huge profits have not been made by the Davies Packing Company. We speak as glibly of millions as if a million—especially of the people's wealth—was a mere bit of pin money. Our correspondent's illustration gives the reader a little help towards grasping the meaning of a million of money, and helps him to understand, how much many sufferers from the high cost of living must pay in order to put a million into a war profiteer's bulging pocket.

There seems to be "something rotten in the state of Denmark," when the people as a whole are taxed at every turn and have to sacrifice in a thousand ways, have to produce and help harvest, save and scamp, while a few profiteers, favourites of the government, which relieves them from a fair share of taxation on their immense profits, wax fat and kick; and the politician indirectly draws his share of advantage from the sacrifices of the people and the agonies of the war, that bring grist to the mill of the profiteer, and through him to the politician.

Our aldermen are not anxious taht our people should be "in the swim" these broiling days.

NO DISORDER IN RUSSIA.

Elihu Root, on Return from Russia, Says Only Slight Disturbance.

CHICAGO, Aug. 7.— Elihu Root, who with other members of the American mission to Russia, has completed its work, was in Chicago today, and said that as a matter of fact there is scarcely more disorder in Russia than there is in the United States.

"Certain disturbances are inevitable in a change of Government so radical as that of Russia," said Mr. Root, "and cable despatches deal largely with these disturbances, hence the public has gained an impression that there is little going on in Russia except demonstrations. As a matter of fact, if reports on American affairs disseminated in Russia concentrated on our own little disturbances—race riots, the I. W. W., and the like— Russians would have about the same picture of us that we now have of them. I have faith in the new Russian Ministry and in the Russian future as an important element in the aims of the allies. Russian women are doing a wonderful work in shaming the men into fighting, and where necessary I hope American women will follow their example."

THREE YEARS' WAR AND END DISTANT

Three years is the time popularly supposed to have been set by Lord Kitchener for the duration of the war. That time is almost up, but the war shows no sign of coming to an end. There is a very general impression that it will not be definitely wound up for another year. If Russia had held firm it might have been ended in 1917, and if the United States had not taken the place of Russia, virtually out of the struggle, it might have continued for years, especially if Russia had made a separate peace, which would have solved Germany's problem of getting food. We ought no longer to count on Russia. Eventually she is likely to come out all right, but only the greatest optimist will expect that powerful and disciplined armies will be evolved in the next few months. With the greatest admiration for the patriotism of Kerensky, and profound respect for the fighting qualities of Russian troops and the brilliancy of Russian leaders, one must count on miracles happening if he continues to count on Russia.

A YEAR OF DISAPPOINTMENTS

Writing in the New York Tribune and reviewing the history of the past year, Frank Simonds says that it has been one of profound disappointment for the Allies. A year ago the Italians were making their famous drive that resulted in the taking of Gorizia. A Russian army under Brussiloff was menacing Lemberg, and in a month's campaign had captured about 400,000 of the enemy. The battle of the Somme had opened with great British and French successes. Roumania entered the war, and her armies swarmed down on the Hungarian plains. Some saw in each of these events a sure sign that the power of the Central Empires was about to be destroyed. Most of us, viewing them together, imagined that the end of the war was in sight. But it is not. Italy has not been able to advance to Trieste: Russia is almost paralyzed. Roumania is overrun: British and French advances for weeks past have been foot by foot, and at some points Germany has been on the offensive. On the Western front we have beaten the best troops Germany could send forward, but it promises to be a long and tedious job to force them out of France and Flanders, although another great British advance is expected almost daily.

THE SUBMARINE PERIL.

One of the most cheering circumstances in the war to-day, from the point of view of the Allies, is the virtual admission by Germany that she cannot win this war with her armies. She says that the submarine is her trump card, and with this card she has undoubtedly taken some important tricks. The German people are told that if they will only hold out the submarines will yet win the war for them. Some experts who fear the submarine point out that at its present rate of activity it can perhaps starve the people of the British Isles in 18 onths. That is to say, the Allied armies have 18 months in which to defeat the German armies, even if the Allies are unable to do anything to check the activity of the divers or are unable to build boats as fast as Germany can sink them. Some American experts say that there is a short cut to end the war, and that it may be reached by a tremendous fleet of aeroplanes. A huge appropriation to build aeroplanes has been passed by Congress, and the short cut will be tried.

AS GERMANY SEES IT.

For Germany there are only two gleams of hope in the sky—the submarine and the Russian revolution. The latter has permitted Germany to bring several army corps to the Western front, and to more stubbornly resist the offensive on this side. It has also permitted the building of new lines of defence behind the present positions and undoubtedly has enabled Germany to prolong the war for months. It has given Austria a much-needed breathing space, and reports of Austria desiring a separate peace and being about to negotiate one in defiance of Germany are no longer heard. The great cloud on her sky, the entry of the United States to the war, is considered a mere trifling shadow by Germany. She believes the war will be over before the United States has had time to train an effective army, and on this account has really welcomed the advent of the American nation among her enemies. Some of her statisticians have calculated that the United States, will, at the end of this feast of death, be handed the cheques for the banquet, and they say that she will be assessed $20,000,000,000.

HALF THE WORLD AT WAR.

As matters now stand half hte world is at war. The Central Powers are now fighting nineteen actual adversaries. Of this number fifteen have declared war, while Panama, Brasil, Haiti and Liberia are practically at war and China, Bolivia, Honduras, Guatemala, Costa Rica and Uruguay have severed diplomatic relations. This means that of the fifty-six nations of the world, twenty-five are opposed to Germany and her three allies. It is calculated that the combined population of Germany, and her dependencies, and Austria, Bulgaria and Turkey is 156,744,000, while the combined populations of the six most dangerous opponents of Germany mount to 856,000,000. These figures, while encouraging from our point of view, ought not to mislead us, since Russia is for the moment at any rate paralysed, and Japan is fighting a limited liability warfare. It is generally conceded that the final showdown will be between Germany on the one hand and Great Britain and the United States on the other. Even then the odds are in every way tremendously against Germany.

Press Comment On The Dry Amendment

"Controversy Will Result."

Philadelphia Public Ledger: — "If the sixty-five Senators who voted for the prohibition amendment to the federal constitution did so, as has been intimated was the motive of some of them, to take the question out of the immediate field of Congressional debate, they are likely to find that new and more serious sources of troublesome controversy will result from their action. This, of course, is on the assumption that the House will follow the action of the Senate and concur in submitting the amendment to the States."

"Offered Country a 'Scrap of Paper.'"

Providence Journal:—"If the House does vote to submit a constitutional amendment, years must elapse before it can possibly be ratified by the necessary three-fourths vote of the States.

"It is too apparent that the Senate has offered the country a 'scrap of paper.'"

"Stamp of Insincerity."

Baltimore News:—"The call for so early a decision seems to put the stamp of insincerity on the Senate's action. At best, the time set is too short either for full analysis by the States of what the effect of prohibition upon their revenues would be or for the proper liquidation of the liquor industry."

"Will Arrest Attention of Country."

Springfield Republican: — "The agreement that brought about the vote in the Senate on a national prohibition constitutional amendment was due to a desire to isolate the prohibition question from the Food Control and the War Revenue bills, yet the majority of considerably more than two-thirds in favour of the amendment itself will arrest the attention of the country."

"People Will Resent It."

Buffalo Commercial:—"This is an ill advised and ill considered effort to force large numbers of unwilling people to abandon a habit which they believe to be harmless and innocent. They will resent it, and the result will be, if this amendment goes into the constitution, a law incapable of universal enforcement."

"Have Scorned a Doubtful Victory."

Rochester Post Express: — "The men of one idea have secured a victory, but it is very doubtful indeed if they will within six years, or sixty, be able to force their will upon the country and give it a law resented bitterly by half the people, which our entire army now to be raised by conscription would not be able to enforce."

"Transfers the Agitation to States."

Troy Record:—"The proposed constitutional amendment provides the proper machinery, and even those who are opposed to the abolition of the liquor traffic can welcome heartily a plan which transfers the agitation in Washington to the capitals of the Commonwealths."

"Have Not Displayed Good Judgment."

Bridgeport Post:—"In forcing the measure through at the present time the prohibition leaders have not displayed good judgment. They were making great gains everywhere, but of late they have lost largely, and we shall be very much surprised if they do not find this out when the State campaigns begin."

MANY GO BACK TO FRONT

Large Percentage of Men with Bruised and Crushed Bones Return to Action.

An Atlantic Port, Aug. 7.—Out of one detail of 1,350 wounded men, sent for special treatment to a London hospital suffering from crushed and broken bones, 1,000 were able to return to active duty at the front, according to G. E. Goldthwaite, an orthopedic surgeon of the United States Army Special Reserve Corps, who arrived here to-day from Europe. Major Goldthwaite is one of twenty American medical officers who have been in France and England observing and studying new methods of treating wounded. He said he returned to the United States to recruit surgeons, and added that were it not for the successful methods of treating wounded now being practiced, it would be better to let the men die rather than to allow them to recover and continue through life the cripples they would be under usual conditions.

BURIAL TO BE IN LONDON.

Funeral of Sir Richard McBride Being Held To-morrow.

LONDON, Aug. 7.— The funeral of Sir Richard McBride, who died yesterday, will be held from his residence in Thurloe Square to Golders Green Crematorium to-morrow. Sir Richard was gravely ill for several months. His passage to Canada was booked weeks ago. At the time for sailing he was in a comatose state, practically hopeless. Sir Richard McBride was a highly acceptable figure in many circles here. His illness, since he assumed the position of chief official representative of British Columbia, rendered it impossible for him to take his place amongst the overseas representatives, which would certainly otherwise have been his. He was well known in London, however, on account of visits paid previously. A natural dignity and unaffected manner commended itself to all with whom he was brought in contact.

Some men attract attention simply because they make no effort to attract.

Police Pleas Fail To Save Elopers

Mother of Girl About To Wed Soldier Insists on Prosecution

Romance backed more prosaic matters on to a siding at New York Police headquarters yesterday, where every one in the big granite building, from Commissioner Woods down to the last attendant, declared, not once but many times that "the deal handed to" Private Tony Romano and his pretty sweetheart, Rosie Pabst, was a shame.

Instead of being on their honeymoon, as they had planned, Tony and Rosie passed the previous night sitting side by side in the Bureau of Missing Persons waiting for Rosie's mother to come from her home in Brooklyn, and withdraw the charges which resulted in their being arrested at the Marriage License Bureau in Brooklyn. After notifying the police to detain Tony and Rosie, the police say Rosie's mother went to Coney Island, and that when they finally got in touch with her on her return at midnight she announced that she as too tired to bother with the case until next morning.

So it was that Tony, a fine looking soldier boy—one of the smartest in the whole Brooklyn regiment, according to his superiors—and Rosie sat holding hands through the long hours, Rosie crying bitterly at times and her khaki-clad knight telling her everything would come out all right. Acting Capt. Grant Williams, head of the bureau, talked to Rosie along the same comforting lines. Gruff Inspectors and "cops" heard of the plight of the pair and dropped into the room with kindly observations about silver linings and the course of true love and all those good old smile starters. Rosie, exhausted, dropped to sleep in the early hours of the morning but Tony never closed an eye. He made his intended bride as comfortable as possible, and then settled down to smoke and discuss what the boys of the Twenty-third were going to do to the Germans a few months hence.

Tony is twenty-one years old. Rosie says she is nineteen. Her mother says she is two years younger. According to the story told by the youngsters they have been keeping company for more than a year, the fact that Rosie's mother frowned on the match from the start making it impossible for Tony to visit the girl's home.

As Tony is about to leave with his regiment they decided to get married. Rosie slipped away from an aunt's house, where she had been visiting, and met Tony near the Armory. When they reached the License Bureau two detectives took them in charge, Tony charged with abduction, Rosie with being incorrigible.

It was close to noon when Mrs. Pabst appeared at police headquarters. Many policemen gathered about her and urged her to let Rosie and Tony go through with their original plan. Their pleas were in vain. Rosie's mother insisted on pressing the charges and there was nothing for the officials to do but send the youthful pair back to Brooklyn. They will be arraigned in Gates Avenue Court.

Help Build the Bulwark Against Famine!

Go—help—now. Ontario's Record Harvest must be garnered.

It would be criminal to lose a sheaf of it for want of labour.

As a high, patriotic and unselfish service, many employers have pledged themselves to release a percentage of their men for this work, and to make it financially possible for them to go. The Ontario Government will pay railway fare both ways of all men who go.

If you, Mr. Employee, are asked to go,—go! Don't hesitate. Lack of experience is no bar. THE SPIRIT is the THING.

Rouse you, Men of Ontario, show Canada — your brothers overseas — the Motherland — her Allies — AND OUR ENEMIES, TOO, that for you, no task is too great — no obstacle insurmountable.

How To Raise 42 Bushels Potatoes On 8-Foot Plot

Burlington, Vt., — Forty-four bushels of potatoes in the season of 1916 from a plot of ground only 8 feet sq., or an equivalent to over 28,000 bushels to the acre of ground space used, was the feat of R. E. Hendricks, a resident of Kansas City, Mo., says H. M. George, in the Free Press.

Mr. Hendricks had often watched the potato pile in the cellar bin which every spring sent out its shoots through every possible crack and crevice. Sometimes these sprouts would crawl out along the floor a distance of seven feet in order to reach the light. From this beginning he conceived that if this pile was removed out into the open and given soil and fertilizer the potatoes would grow and multiply.

Three years ago he built what he called a "potato pen,' which was nothing more nor less than a huge potato hill, the sides of which were supported by a loosely constructed inclosure built after the fashion of an old rail fence. Within this inclosure, only 8x8 feet in size he planted his potatoes in thin layers of dirt and dressing, piling one layer on another until the pen was eight feet high. The "potato pen" became a mound of green. He had found that his potatoes not only grew better than they did in the cellar but that at harvest time he was able to harvest 40 bushels of as fine potatoes as are grown anywhere. The following year he got 32 bushels in the same sized pen and last year a total of 42 bushels.

Anyone Can Supply Family.

The details of the construction and management of the "potato pens," as described by Mr. Hendricks, outline a plan by which anyone having access to a plot of ground no larger than a flower bed can raise all the potatoes needed for an average family for a whole year. The potato pens may be built eight feet wide by any length just so that they are built strong enough to keep the sides from spreading. Almost any kind of good stout material can be used. If light boards or lumber is used the pen may be braced through the centre with wire. Rich earth must be on hand in sufficient quantities to fill the pen to the top.

The potato pen is built 6x8 feet inside measurement, and is 6 feet high. The pen is built as each layer is placed and planted. You can use 1x6 in. boards for the ends and the sides, leaving a 2 1-2 inch space between the boards for the potato sprouts to come through. Start the pen with a 6 inch layer of dirt. Then mark off the plat a foot apart each way, allowing 6 inches of space for dirt all around between the outer row of potatoes and the inside of the pen. Plant a potato seed at every cross line or intersection of the plat, eight hills to the layer of dirt. Then put an inch or two of dressing over the potatoes and sprinkle good with water. Then lay six inches more of dirt; mark off as before, plant, use dressing and water as before. Repeat this operation with enough layers to fill the pen to the top. To keep the dirt from falling out of the pen as the layers are placed draw up old straw or hay against the cracks and crevices.

As the pen rises place on the fourth layer of dirt in the centre of one side about two feet above the ground, a "moist tester." This is made of any piece of timber about the size of the arm, a piece of 4x4 inch by 3 feet long placed so it will protrude from the pen about a foot. After the potatoes have been planted three weeks loosen the tester, pull out and run your hand in to determine the moisture. By so doing you will know how much water to use on the pen. After the tester has been once removed this can be repeated once or twice a week. Watch the tester, and keep the dirt in proper condition.

The pen should be near a water supply so that it can be well watered during the dry weather. It should be watered from the top about twice a week unless the rainfall is sufficient. The "moist tester" will always enable the grower to determine the proper moisture conditions. The top layer of dirt should be sloped gently towards the centre so the ground will absorb and not shed the rain, but care should be taken that mud be prevented from forming on top and baking to a crust. When the earth is dry the mound should be sprinkled on the top and sides.

The potato vines will grow to the top and sides of the pen (the nearest way to the light) emerging through the crevices and concealing the timbers with a coat of green.

When the potatoes are matured the pen may be taken down, the potatoes rolled out of the thin covering with a rake, and the material, dirt and dressing, saved, and used again and again.

DRAW THE BELT TIGHTER

(By FRANK GADSBY)

OTTAWA.—One does not look a gift horse in the mouth. That is to say one doesn't question the methods of a Food Controller like Mr. Hanna, who works without salary, or of a Royal Commission such as has been appointed to probe Sir Joseph Flavelle, which will also act without compensation. One does not look a gift horse in the mouth, I repeat, unless one is obliged to do so in the ground of expense or some other equally valid reason.

The basic idea of food control is to stabilize expenditures and effect economies. Food Controller Hanna has in fact issued three statements and the last word in all of them was thrift. Draw the belt tighter, eat less, go over the garbage can carefully before letting the man cart away the contents. Save, save, save!

And yet the Food Controller when he asks others to save cannot be said to save himself, having just appointed three highly paid men, Willison at $4,500 Todd at $4,500 and French at $4,200, to assist him in his arduous labours. Mr. Willison is a son of Sir John Willison of Toronto and at this writing nobody knows who Todd and French are, although doubtless questions will be asked about them in the House. The world does not know them as food experts, or anything else. The question naturally arises: On what ground were they appointed?

Food Controller Hanna is credited with selecting the Flavelle commission. I forget just what number this particular commission is but it must be well up in the hundreds. At all events it is one more commission and to a certain extent sui generis because it gets nothing for its services. When a Government commission shows such lavish disregard of money one is led to ask what is the other reward in addition to the generous glow one feels at doing a patriotic act.

The chairman of the commission is G. F. Henderson, K. C., Ottawa, a well known Conservative lawyer of the reliable party type. He was counsel for J. Wesley Allison in the famous Hughes investigation. Later on he represented the food interests in an inquiry into the high cost of living, conducted by the city of Ottawa. Mr. Henderson is a corporation lawyer and naturally no enemy to capital. According to Premier Borden he qualifies for his present position as a "drainage referee." What drainage refereeing has to do with food profits heaven only knows, unless, perhaps, the drainage meant is the money that has been drained off by Sir Joseph Flavelle and his fellow provisioners. Meanwhile Mr. Henderson is acting without salary. Doubtless he finds his reward in his own conscience.

Associated with Mr. Henderson is Mr. A. B. Brodie of the firm of Price, Waterhouse & Co., and Mr. Geoffery Clarkson, also a leading accountant. No doubt these gentlemen are competent to deal with the complicated figures Sir Joseph will present to show why his margin on export bacon was 5.05 while that of his nearest competitor was only 3.3; also why according to his own statement he did business at two-thirds of a cent profit while the Swifts, who are not philanthropists but plain business men, could do it at a quarter of a cent; also why Flavelle bacon that costs thirty-six cents a pound in England costs fifty cents a pound in its own home town of Toronto. Doubtless Messrs. Brodie and Clarkson have the right kind of minds to tackle Sir Joseph's figures, but why are two auditors necessary when one auditor would do? Why not substitute for one of these auditors a labouring man, a representative of the class of people who feel the price of bacon most?

The fourth member of the commission, added by special request, is a Mr. Conners of Chicago. Mr. Connors is "late of Armour's." Presumably he has made his bit and retired. He is a bacon expert, of course, and can bring a great deal of technical knowledge to the subject. It is true that the Armour interests in Canada are closely touched by the O'Connor report, but Mr. Conners will not allow that to influence him. He will have only a mellow, detachable interest in his old business associates.

A point in Flavelle's commission can labour at with advantage is Sir Joseph's arithmetic in making the substractions from the 5.05 "margin" disclosed by the O'Connor report. Does Sir Joseph like certain other great captains of industry cause profits to interlock when the interlocking is good and to disappear altogether when the disappearing is better? In other words does the raw product show an enormous product while the finished product shows a small one—the fat lying somewhere in between? Again how much has Sir Joseph written off his packing plants for depreciation since the war started? The shell factories, which will be scrap after the war, write off enormous sums for this purpose. Has Sir Joseph been handling his packing plant the same way but with this difference—that he will have perfectly good packing plants after the war which will go on curing bacon after the shell business is all shot to pieces?

The Flavelle commission will not be doing its duty if it fails to prick the delusion that Sir Joseph had pure philanthrophy in mind when he ordered to operate the William Davies Packing plant for the Borden Government on a "cost plus" basis! Plus! There's the rub! What was that plus—five, ten, fifteen per cent. or a hundred and fifty per cent., which was what the William Davies considered reasonable in the Boer war. Plus! Humph! Perfect security against loss and a fat profit! Who wouldn't offer his factory to the British Government on those terms?

The investigators will not be authorized to go outside the O'Connor report but if they were it would be interesting to learn what effect profiteering had had on recruiting in this country. My own opinion that it did more to kill it even than the official chill given it by the Borden Government. Where is the man who willingly gives up a job with three dollars a day to march off to the dangers of war at a dollar ten a day, leaving behind a wife and kiddies to be looted by the food pirates of all she can save out of his wages of death and peril?

H. F. GADSBY.

To Tear Out the Page From School Speller

HOW CHICAGO WILL RID BOOK OF EULOGY OF KAISER.

CHICAGO, Aug. 7.—The page in the Chicago Public School speller which eulogizes Emperor William of Germany probably will be in the book when school opens in September, it having been found impossible to prepare a new one in time, as had been ordered.

A movement has been started to designate an hour at the opening day of school for the children to tear out the leaf containing the eulogy, and Anthony Czarnecki, of the Board of Education, announced that when the Board meets to-morrow he will introduce a resolution providing for the elimination of the page.

Citrus Fruit Supply Affected By Trade And The Weather

Oranges and lemons are likely to advance in price, due to market and productive conditions that are seriously affecting the trade. A severe heat wave in Southern California has damaged the small fruits of the November crop and according to the report of one observer "oranges are lying on the ground as thickly as they are on the trees." It is too early yet to estimate the amount of the damage, but all information indicates that it is severe. The export to Canada will be reduced, with resulting increase in prices.

The Florida October crop has been hit by Frost, but no report has been received that the damage is serious.

There has been great excitement in the lemon market, as stocks were reduced to a minimum during the severe heat. New York auction prices jumped as high as $11 to $13.50 a crate on Friday.

Montreal reports that potatoes were first seen on the market last week, but as they are still rather small they are only commanding $2.80 a bag wholesale, as compared with $5.50 for Red Stars from the Fifth Those are tearful prices for potatoes in August, but dealers predict lower levels as soon as the local varieties arrive in heavier quantities. One of the causes of the present high prices is that the recent hot weather prevented the digging of potatoes in the South.

Russian Commander Sentenced To Death

LONDON, Aug. 7—Gen Masovisky, commander of the Guards Corps, which headed the Russian retreat on the south-west front, has been ordered shot, according to a despatch to the Post from Petrograd.

This sentence came after a court-martial, which was ordered by Gen. Korniloff, Commander-in-Chief, for non-compliance of his order to shoot deserters.

cost for this purpose on the security of Provincial bonds whenever an economy in the cost of money to the farmer can be effected by so doing."

Election Laws.

The following resolution pertaining to the matter of election laws was also passed without discussion:

"Resolved, that the election laws of Canada should be so amended as to prohibit contributions for election purposes by corporations or officers thereof; so as to limit the total amount of money spent in behalf of any candidate in any election contest; to provide for full publicity of the source of all campaign contributions and the mode or expenditure of money for election purposes; and for a more speedy and simple procedure for the trial of election petitions."

Press War to the Limit.

At the beginning of the afternoon's session, before the Resolutions Committee had begun to supply the Chairman of the convention with finished resolutions to submit for discussion, Premiers Norris and Martin were called on to fill in time. Each spoke about fifteen minutes, and each seized the opportunity to press home the national necessity of prosecuting the war, so far as Canada was concerned, to the very limit. Premier Norris described a recent trip through the United States and gave it as his impression that the neighbouring Republic, after three months' declaration of war, was better organized and better prepared to wage a vigorous campaign than was Canada to-day after three years of war. This statement evoked tremendous applause.

Must Not Take Backward Step.

Premier Martin's speech was twofold in its plea. He urged Canada to keep a firm face towards the war, and at the same time endeavour to preserve national unity at home. In an eloquent sentence he said: "We cannot take one backward step in this war, and our greatest problem in this convention is to see that the Canadian divisions at the front are maintained."

VETERANS' OUTING TO RICE LAKE IS WELL ARRANGED

Tickets for the Veterans' picnic to Rice Lake on Friday will be issued to members of the G.W.V.A. at their headquarters, in the Barrie building, to-night, from 7 to 9 o'clock, and all day Thursday.

The steamers Stoney Lake and Geneva have been chartered, and will leave the George Street wharf at 8 a.m., sharp. The excursionists are advised to take their own lunches. Refreshments will be served on board the steamers, but there will be no dining service at Idyl Wyld.

These and other arrangements were announced at the meeting of the Great War Veterans' Association, last night, and from the present outlook Friday's picnic promises to be a big day. Comrades Staunton, Mesley, Coppeck and Muir were appointed a committee to secure prizes for the races. Local business and professional men will be solicited to help the Association in that respect. Comrade Staunton was elected to the executive committee last night. It was reported that the men working in the C.G.E. plant would have to sacrifice their bonuses if they remained out for Friday's excursion.

Sends Mother The Story of Brother's Death In Action

Mrs. S. McKinley, 493 Aylmer street, has received from one of her soldier sons, Private Frank McKinley, the story of the death in action of another of her boys, Private Sam McKinley, who was well known in Peterborough. It is a moving letter, but not without its consolatory features, as follows:

Somewhere in France,
July 12, 1917

Dear Mother,—In answer to your welcome letter dated 10th June, which I received yesterday, I must thank you for same glad to see by it that you are keeping well under the circumstances, and hope you will soon recover your old strength to walk outdoors, for it is terrible to be indoors in good weather, but of course God knows what is best, so we will just keep trusting in Him.

Well, dear mother, you ask me about noble brother Sam. I will tell you the story in brief, for it would take too long to tell you every little detail, so this is what Pte. W. Bailie told me:

On the night of 22nd April they got the word to advance. Sam and he were side by side. Sam told me, "We are in for it to-night, Bill, but don't be scared for the Lord is with us, and what will be, must be done." and he started to hum "Lead Me, Oh My Saviour, Lead Me." They had not gone far when Sam shouted: "I've got it, Bill." Bill looked round and saw an Officer and Private bandaging his arm. He had occasion to go back for his water bottle and came up again. By this time the officer had left and was advancing with his men and Sam rose then and went with Bailie, although Bailie tried to coax him to go back, but Sam would not. So they went a little farther and Sam got a little weak, and lay down in a shell-hole, and started to tell Bailie about home. He was telling him about father and you and his girl. He thought a great lot about her. So after a while he started to speak very faintly, and then stopped, and in a few minutes after he smiled and said "Oh Mother." Then Bailie waited for a time and called "Sam," but he never spoke; so he left him, thinking he was sleeping, and when Sam did not answer the roll call he knew he had passed to the Great Beyond, where all is love and peace, and he said: "I only wish I could face death as your brother did." It is a comfort to know a young man like him says such a thing about brother Sam, and shows what an example he has set for that young man to follow.

Now, that is as brief as I can make it, and it is the same story as Fred Clarke told, and Sam was not shot through the heart, but as Fred Clarke said. So does Private Bailie. He was shot between the wrist and elbow of the left hand and lost a lot of blood. This story was told in my presence and Bailie did not know I was Sam's brother till two days afterwards. So you have got my little story, though a little unpleasant, but plain. So God bless him and may his soul rest in peace.

Now, dear mother, I have seen brother Willie three times since landing here, and we have some fine old talks, but sorry to hear about Bert, and may God spare us all to be all reunited in Home, Sweet Home, and loved ones so dear.

The picture is a dandy and thank you very much for same, I am keeping in the pink; I have never seen any of the Band yet, and I may tell you that you were the only one who has wished me many happy returns, and it only goes to show how dear old mother is thinking of her loved ones, although many miles apart. Tell all at home I was asking for them all.

PROVINCE MAY BAR BOOZE ADS. FROM THE MAILS

OTTAWA, Aug. 7.—When the House resumed this afternoon Hon. C. J. Doherty introduced a bill to amend an Act in aid of Provincial legislation prohibiting or restricting the sale or use of intoxicating liquors. The bill provides that action against persons may either be taken at the place where liquor has been sent or in the Province to which the liquor is sent.

A further amendment provides for the seizure of liquor in connection with which a conviction is secured. A third amendment provides for the prohibiting of the circulating of advertising matter for the sale of liquor in such Provinces as undertake to prohibit such advertising. It shall be an offence to circulate such advertising through the mails to such a Province.

"Will this prevent Ontario houses from sending ads to Quebec houses?" asked Charles Marcil. "If the Province of Quebec prohibits such advertising," said Mr. Doherty.

A further amendment provides against clashes between the proprietory medicines act and provincial prohibition legislation. Any penalty imposed under the first Act shall be in addition to penalties provided for under provincial prohibition legislation with regard to alcoholic beverages.

BECOME CITIZENS OR LOSE JOBS

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Aug. 8.—Aliens were dealt a blow by two local draft District Boards yesterday. At a special joint meeting of Draft Districts 15 and 18 an open letter was addressed to Cleveland employers, calling on them to put this ultimatum up to alien employees:

"Become citizens or lose your jobs —if you want to work with us you must fight with us."

It was also announced to-day that a city-wide hunt for slackers would begin to-day or to-morrow.

Unsatisfactory End Of War Will Delay Reforms A Century

Germany Would Boast She Defied the World Without Punishment.

LONDON, August 8.—Hon. W. A. Holman, premier of New South Wales, speaking at Sheffield, said that as one who had been all his life a pacifist, he had been compelled to adopt the view that the peace of Europe and the safety of democracy could only be secured by the arbitrament of the sword.

This war, he said, was a war of pacifists against militarism. It was a war of the peace-loving peoples of the world against the war-loving peoples. He wanted the war carried to a final and victorious conclusion, in order that democracy could devote its emergencies to the activities of peace. If we accepted the peace for which so-called pacifists clamoured, we would have to devote all our energies to further preparation for war.

Germany defied the world without punishment. Instead of having conscription as a temporary measure, we should have it as a permanent institution. Educational, social and industrial reforms would be delayed a hundred years, and the rattle of the German sword would be heard at the slightest opposition to German policy.

MINISTER OF LABOUR LOSING HIS OFFICE; FLAVELLE PRESSURE

OTTAWA, Aug. 8.— Have the Flavelle interests proved too strong for Hon. T. W. Crothers, minister of labour? Following the report of W. F. O'Connor, K.C., the cost of living commissioner, stating that millions of dollars had been made out of food by the firm of Sir Joseph Flavelle, chairman of the imperial munitions board, Mr. Crothers has received an intimation from the premier that his services are to be dispensed with.

He got the intimation indirectly. Sir Robert Borden told the Toronto win-the-war delegation that a labour man was to be appointed minister of labour, and this was the first news that Mr. Crothers had that he was wanted no longer.

It is well known that several months ago when it leaked out that Mr. O'Connor was investigating the cold storage men, and that the publication of awkward figures would result, an effort was made to get the inquiry stopped, but the effort was fruitless. The cost of living commissioner went straight ahead.

Tried For Treason German Girls Commit Suicide

How two young girls were driven to death by the beneficent rule of German Kultur is told by The Bergische Arbeiterstimme, of Solingen:

Two young girls of eighteen had travelled to Aschaffenburg to purchase some shoes. While trying on a pair of shoes in a shop, one of the girls, objecting to the high price demanded, remarked audibly to the other, "For the dearness of everything we have to thank our selfish rulers, who pushed us into this horrible and hopeless war for their own enrichment and glory."

No sooner had she uttered these words than the owner of the shop blew his police whistle. Two policemen speedily presented themselves, and, arresting the two girls, marched them off to the lock-up, where they were detained the whole night, to be charged with treasonable utterances before the Assessor's Court the next morning. They were sentenced to a month's imprisonment.

Immediately on the expiration of their sentence, the girls, who during their incarceration had wept continuously and taken scarcely any food, left for Klein-Steinheim. Proceeding to the banks of the Main, they undressed, and, fastening their hands together with handkerchiefs, they sprang into the river. Their dead bodies were recovered in the morning.

The president, thinking it not at all unusual that she should possess this information, but willing to gratify her, asked:

STONEY LAKE REGATTA

A Drawing Attraction For Peterborough's Civic Holiday—Red Cross Association To Benefit

The annual Regatta, off Juniper Island, Stony Lake, is announced to come off on Monday next, August 13, Peterborough's Civic Holiday. According to information the Regatta promises to be one of the best of the series. The preparations for the event have been entrusted to a Committee with experience in boat racing, the chairman of which is Mr. L. N. Grahame, the official judge is Mr. J. R. Dodworth, and the Secretary-Treasurer, Mr. J. B. Watson.

The details of the races and other events are being prepared in programme form, but have not yet been made public. The regatta is billed to start at 1 o'clock p.m. and the prizes are to be presented to the winners in the pavilion at Juniper Island at 8 o'clock same evening. After this dancing will form the chief pastime for the rest of the night, for which first-class music will be furnished. The Red Cross Association is preparing for the event and energetic workers are busy on some special feature designed for the occasion, by which they hope to raise substantial collections for the benefit of their fund.

For the convenience of Peterborough citizens the Stoney Lake Navigation Co. are providing a special service for the day. The steamer Stoney Lake will leave the George Street Wharf at 8 o'clock in the morning for Juniper Island and the lake, which will enable excursionists to get an early start on Civic holiday for the Regatta, returning after the races are over. Placards are out, giving further details of the railway and steamer service for the day. Beach's Orchestra is to accompany th steamer "Stoney Lake" to enable excursionists to "trip the light fantastic toe" on both the up and down cool sail. Steamers of the Stoney Lake Navigation Co. will also meet the G.T.R. trains arriving at Lakefield, morning, noon, and evening, and will leave Juniper Island at 4.30 p.m. to connect with train arriving at Peterborough at 7.00 p.m. Further particulars are being prepared.

TRIP TO HEALEY FALLS

The Steamer Geneva will run a trip to Healey Falls, Thursday, August 9th. Boat leaves George Street Wharf at 7.15 Street Railway Wharf at 7.40 Tickets limited to 150. Round Trip 75c.

William Ross Killed At Lindsay

Deceased Who Was a Car Checker Fell Off Rear Platform of Train

LINDSAY, August 8. — William Ross, a young man about 23 years of age, met death Saturday afternoon last by falling off the Port McNicol (C.P.R.) train as it was pulling out of Lindsay. It appears that the young man, who was employed as car checker for the Canadian Pacific at Port McNicol, was on his way to spend the holiday at Montreal, and was travelling on a pass.

Contrary to rules, Ross was standing on the rear platform of the outgoing train and it is assumed was pitched off while the train was rounding the charp curve in the vicinity of Beall's tannery. He was missed by a passenger who had been talking to the unfortunate victim, and on reaching the Junction the conductor and crew members passed through the car but failed to locate him. The train was backed up and Mr. Ross picked up in an unconscious condition.

On being conveyed to the depot Dr. Blanchard, C.P.R. physician, was communicated with and examined the young man previous to his removal to the hospital. He was in an unconscious condition and suffering from a fracture of the base of the skull, from which he failed to recover.

William Ross, the victim of Saturday afternoon's fatality, is unknown to the C.P.R. Company at Montreal, whither he was travelling on a pass. Efforts have been made to locate his relatives, if any, but without success. Workmen at Fort McNicol, where he was employed, appear to know nothing concerning his home or his friends.

Mr. Norman Price, of Montreal, claims agent for the Railway Company, is in town looking into the accident.

FAIR A FOOD SAVING PLANT

Government Co-operating to Make Exhibition Great Object Lesson.

"Production, conservation and thrift" will be the Confederation Year slogan at the Canadian National Exhibition, every department of which will radiate the "Win the War" spirit. The Government, Dominion and Provincial, are co-operating with more than usual vigour in the work of preparing exhibits and demonstrations in connection with the propaganda to speed up production and cut down waste, and there will be a splendid enlightening mobilization of national resources. It will be a great food training camp. The home will be the subject of educational demonstrations of a practical nature, that the housewife may be impressed with the importance of backing up the work on the farm. A "don't waste it—can it" demonstration by experts will be given daily, while domestic science lessons in a model kitchen in the Women's Building will be another of the many special features of interest to women.

Government Is Busy With Plans For Conscription

OTTAWA, Aug. 7.—The Government is already busy with plans for the enforcement of the Military Service Act. This was demonstrated at the opening of the House to-day when the Hon. C. J. Doherty, Minister of Justice, announced to Parliament that there was an official in attendance in the office of the Solicitor-General who would be glad to receive from members of the Parliament any information concerning their constituencies that would facilitate the carrying out of the Act.

Sir Wilfred Laurier asked what was the nature of the information required.

Mr. Doherty—"All information of any kind that can be used in determining the number of tribunals that will be required to meet the convenience of the population and the places that will best suit their convenience."

General Hughes thought it undignified for members to have to seek the clerk to give him information. "If the clerk wants any information from me," he said, "he can come to me for it."

Summer-Spoiled Skin Removed By Absorption

As undue summer exposure usually leaves an undesirable surface of tan, redness or roughness, often freckles, too, the sensible thing to do is to remove such surface. There's nothing better for this than ordinary mercolized wax, which actually absorbs an unwholesome complexion. The thin layer of surface skin is itself absorbed, gradually, so there's no inconvenience, no detention indoors. Spread the wax lightly over the entire face at bedtime and take it off in the morning with warm water. If you will get one ounce of mercolized wax at the druggists, use it for a week or so, you may expect marked improvement daily. When the underlying skin is wholly in view your complexion will be a marvel of spotless purity and beautiful whiteness.

Don't let those summer wrinkles worry you; worry breeds more wrinkles. Banish them by bathing the face in a solution of powdered saxolite, 1 oz., dissolved in ½ pt. witch hazel. Used daily for a while this will be found wonderfully effective.

To Resign His Post As Papal Secretary

ROME, Aug. 7.—Cardinal Gasparri is expected to resign his post as Papal Secretary of State, according to the Messaggero, which attributes his intention in part to reasons of health and in part because of the desire of Pope Benedict to exercise more direct control over the Vatican's policies.

Armed Robbers "Swipe" Statuary of Romanoffs Worth 1,500,000 Rubles

PETROGRAD, Aug. 8. — Silver statues and antiques to the value of 1,500,000 rubles were stolen from the Senate building by six armed robbers, who declared that the statues of the Romanoff family offended their revolutionary sentiments. The robbery was one of the most sensational ever carried out here. The robbers, three of whom were disguised as soldiers, came up to the Senate building, in which a vast collection of historic valuables is kept, in an automobile. The porter at the door was knocked down and tied up with ropes and a sack placed over his head. Another employee who attempted to summon aid by telephone was forced to desist when a revolver was held at his head.

Entering the famous Catherine Hall, the robbers took from its pedestal a silver statue of the Empress Catherine II., valued at 500,000 rubles. It was carried to the automobile and then a second statue, representing Russia at prayer, was taken the same way. The famous statue of Minerva, presented to the Senate by Empress Catherine, and many big candlesticks and equestrian statuettes completed the booty of the thieves.

The automobile carrying the robbers and their booty got away from the building half an hour before the guards arrived and discovered the robbery.

PITCHER JIM SCOTT TO FIGHT

Chicago Player Takes Physical Examination As Officer.

PHILADELPHIA, August 7. — Pitcher Jim Scott of the Chicago White Sox took the physical examination for the Officers Reserve Corps at an army recruiting station here today, and if he passes he will report at the Presidio, Calf., August 27. He made application some time ago and was told to take the examination at his convenience in the east. Scott said he would like to stay with the White Sox and help win the American League pennant, but felt that the Government needed him more.

HOME DEFENCE

The safeguarding of your home and all it means to you is not a matter of armies and ships alone. The comfort and happiness of your family are exposed to the attacks of enemies much nearer to them than the marauding Huns of Central Europe.

What will become of your home and your wife and your children, if you be suddenly stricken down as thousands of others have been?

Will there be any bulwark of defence to keep the home and the family from destruction?

You can most easily provide such a line of defence by means of a life assurance policy. Home Defence is its purpose and it fulfills that purpose as nothing else can.

LETTERS FROM OVERSEAS

Came From United States To Enlist And Has No Regrets Now

Private Robert Henry Sandys, who enlisted with the 83rd Battalion, after coming from the United States to answer the call of country, has written his sister, Mrs. James Heard, the following interesting letter:

France, July 12th, 1917.

My Dearest Sister and Brother,— I now take pleasure in writing to you to let you know I am in the very best of health, hoping this letter will find you both the same. Well, sister, I received your parcel to-day with the seed and ginger cake, also cigars and chewing tobacco and chocolate, and also 50c. in money. Becky, I don't know how I can thank you for kindness and goodness to me while I have been in France. We have had some of the cake for supper. My how we did eat and enjoy it, and then we had a cigar and blew our lonesomeness away in smoke and smiled. Ha, ha, ha. I also received the badge, which is very pretty, also the roll of papers, which I will read when not on duty. I would dearly love to be with you on George street having a nice dish of ice cream. I am always happy and got a smile all the time for everyone. I laughed out loud when I looked at your picture reading my letters, which is as good as a meal to me. I only was for a course at school five days, and the football part I play with Fritz. It is bad about the raid in London, but what can you expect; he is doing all the dirt and meanness he can think of to get the best of us. Fritz knows his goose is cooked.

Has No Regrets.

Becky, it is one year to-day since I left Barriefield camp for overseas and I have never regretted it, because I came from U.S.A. as a man and brother to protect my sisters who are residents of Canada, also to protect the flag I was born under, and since I have been in France at the firing line I have seen some hair raising sights and have had some very narrow escapes, which all goes in this game of war. I know there are lots of young men in Peterborough who could do the same as I have done if they only study a little bit and get away from their mother's apron strings. We have some hard trails here, and then we have some good times, and taking all in all, it is not so bad as it is painted. The government treats us fine and we have lots of warm clothes and shoes, and the very best to eat and lots of it, and plenty of tea to drink, so what more could a man expect at this time of the crisis. Becky, you will always find kickers and knockers wherever you go, never satisfied and hard to please. And most of the officers have risen from the ranks, and they know what it is, and some of the finest men that Canada ever had, sociable, and good hearted. The first contingent of U. S. army is here in France training and it won't be long before they will be in shape for doing their bit. They call them (Sammy) and the British Tommy. I am glad you received the badge, also the ring. It is not as good as I would like to have sent you, but never mind, I will buy you something pretty when I get where the big stores are, something you will be proud of. I will tell you where I got that ring when I come home. I am writing this letter in a Frits dug-out, away down deep. But he is not here. It is now 11.45 p.m. I get your letters every week, sometimes five and six at a time, and I am anxious when the mail comes to us to get to hear from you to cheer me up. I will be glad to get that suit of clothes on again and get down to business at home sweet home. I received the mouth organ some time ago and we still have a song accompaniment to the music. Becky, I put my whole trust in God and he surely protects me and gives me strength. Becky I will now close my letter to have a little sleep. Give my best love to dear brother James and accept my very best, and God bless you and protect you. From your true and affectionate brother, BOB.

Good-bye. There is a long trail a-winding, ha, ha, ha. Remember me to the Examiner and send me some copies.

Soldiers' Christian Association Doing Good Work At Front

Parents who may be anxious about the spiritual welfare of their sons in France will find a consoling message in the following letter received by Mrs. G. W. Mulligan, from her son, Private Vincent Mulligan, who is with the Army Medical Corps. Pte. Mulligan is one of the Moody students, and the two men referred to in his letter are graduates of the Moody Institute, Chicago:

France, July 10, 1917.

Dearest Mother: It seems a long time since I received any letter, but I suppose one of these days I will get a large number all in a bunch. That is generally the way that I receive my mail. It is more like reading a book than a letter.

There is so little to write about so far as news is concerned, that I hardly know what to say. The daily routine of camp life remains the same. I am still at the base and wondering if I will ever get up the line. About half of our draft are up already. We are being taken alphabetically so they have not arrived a my name yet. We are given very little work to do and are having an easy time of it. In regard to my health, I am exceptionally well. The food is pretty good and the weather splendid so this all helps to make one feel good. I received a bundle of papers from home yesterday. They were dated June 4th. Keep sending them. I enjoy them, and I then pass them on to other Ontario fellows. The boxes I have not received but I suppose that they will turn up eventually.

I received a letter from Mr. Bryant the other day. He is attached to No. 1 Field Ambulance. He has been up the line for about a month now and likes his work. Johnston received a letter from Davis to-day. He also is up the line and with No. 7 Field Ambulance. He is attached to some cavalry and they are in rest at present.

About a week ago Johnston and I ran across a splendid Christian organiartion here called the Soldiers' Christian Association. They have two huts in this camp, and are carrying on a splendid work for the Lord. Many fellows are saved and Christians are strengthened just before going up the line. My, earnest workers like these, are needed in a place like this, and God is really using them. Since discovering these people we have spent a large portion of our time at their Bible readings and Gospel meetings. It is like an oasis in a desert. Johnston has spoken at two different meetings and I have sung. The Lord has greatly blessed us. On Sunday evening a Scotchman from Glasgow spoke — every word was from the Lord. Nearly 40 men remained behind and accepted the Lord Jesus. It was the best sight that I have ever seen. Pray for this work, also pray earnestly for every Christian fellow in France that they may be kept faithful to God. We need it.

People are very optimistic here over the war, and I hope that their speculations prove correct. There is no mistake, Fritzy is on the move. Don't worry. Remember me to all my friends. Love to all.

Vincent.

Letter From Nursing Sister Margaret Whitfield, C.A.M.C.

Daughter of Mrs. Jane Whitfield Fraserville

Appended is a synopsis of a trip from Kingston to Liverpool, leaving June 26th, arriving July 8th, 1917. It was written by Nursing Sister Margaret Whitfield, of the Canadian Army Medical Corps, daughter of Mrs. James Whitfield, of Fraserville.

Dear ones at Home: The morning was spent in getting our last things ready. Our baggage left at 9.30, and by 1 p.m. found us all at the G.T.R. station; said good-bye to Col. Gardiner, and boarded the suburban train to Junction, and taking the fast train for Montreal, making a few calls, namely, Gananoque, Brockville and Prescott; arriving in Montreal at 6 p.m. We travelled parlour car and had afternoon tea in the dining car.

After getting our instructions we all went to the Queen's Hotel for dinner, which was very grand and good. Wrote several letters while at the Queen's. At 7.45 we were driven by taxi to dock No. 8 and by 9.30 p.m. we were on board, given our state rooms, baggage, etc., also tea and biscuits were served; then we started to settle down. But, alas! sleep was the farthest thing from us. Miss MacMillan was my room mate. We talked until 2.30 a.m.; the engine was getting up steam, and by 4.20 came landing just at our windows and awakened us up again. Then we realized we were really leaving "old Canada" on the "Canada." Ere 5.30 came Miss MacMillan and myself were on deck. The breeze was lovely and fresh; the river is so calm it makes me think of the Otonabee; but not so winding, narrow and picturesque, but very interesting. At 8 a.m. the breakfast gong sounded. Very welcome to us —being on the deck gave us an appetite. After breakfast we got our rooms, etc., changed, and Miss Prindle and I are together again. Sister Davison is very, very nice. Then we went on deck, procured our deck chairs and spent the greater part of days on deck. We had quite a heavy rain at 11.30. Had lunch at 1 p.m. and went directly on deck in order to see the Quebec bridge, which is a very wonderful structure, and very soon we were at Quebec harbor. Sorry to say we were not allowed off. Owing to the wakeful night we decided that we would sleep, and thus the afternoon passed. Awakened in time to dress for dinner at 6.30, after which we spent the evening on deck. Had a concert with the boys (we have about 50 soldiers.) Dear lads, I feel sorry for them They are surely brave.

Well, we have just finished supper. You see we love the eats. Expect to land at Father Point about 4 a.m., our last landing place until we reach Liverpool, if nothing happens. Was in dreamland when the boat landed, and we left the pilot. Here we are at the mercy of the waves, with God's hand to guide us. "God bless the sailors."

Thursday a.m. Every one still feeling fine; enjoying the sail, and the weather just a grand sea. Had drill this a.m. Putting our life belts on, etc., in case of an emergency. We are allowed 15 seconds from the time the alarm is given until we have our belts, etc., on, and at our post on the deck. We pray that it won't be necessary but at this time and age one can never tell what is going to happen. We eat five times a day when we feel inclined. The p.m. was spent in reading, games, walking; retired very late; the moonlight is grand; we watched the land quickly disappearing.

Friday a.m. We were awakened by the heaving and the rolling of the boat. Several of the girls were seasick. We had a view of Newfoundland; also the mountains covered here and there with snow. Ere night my pal was feeding the fishes full, I had lots of fun. Have been fortunate. Have not missed the eats so far. Had drill at 4 p.m. Sat on the deck enjoying the moonlight until 9 p.m. Retired leaving ourselves in God's care trusting for another calm day. Have just finished reading Miss Fowler's letter which was a real treat I assure you. I surely appreciate her kindness.

Saturday: Slept well all night; did not get up until 8 a.m. Had breakfast and went on deck. Troubled with fog. But ere long it cleared up and we sighted several small schooners fishing for oysters; in the afternoon we were quite close to boats fishing for cod fish; spent greater part of the day on deck; enjoyed each meal, but in spite of all glad to get away from the dining room. I either think of you at home or build castles for the future, trying not to notice the rolling and the heaving of the boat; the water is very calm for the ocean, but real cold and winter clothing is quite needful.

Sunday, July 1, 1917: Our first Sunday on board ship on the ocean. Every man to his post as usual, but let me say, sailors show very deep respect for the Sabbath. We had breakfast as usual and divine service in the dining room at 10.30, Anglican form, taken by the purser. Have all the readings marked in my Bible and will show them to you when I return. Then and only then, did they allow the soldier boys to be with us. "What does rank matter anyhow?" "We are all alike with God." No games at all. In the evening four of us girls played and sang for two hours. It surely made me feel better. Have enjoyed every meal to-day. We are having a lovely calm voyage. We have drill every day to prepare us for what we may have to go through—we hope not.

Monday, July 2: A dark windy day —the ocean was quite rough this p. m., but I really love to watch the water dashing and splashing to and fro. I think I shall be quite sorry to leave our dear old "Canada," although not nearly as large as my idea of an ocean liner, but on account of the very great danger they take fewer passengers and smaller boats; 250 of a crew. Spent greater part of day on deck, played a game of hockey this a.m. and received a wounded ankle but not very serious; enjoyed every meal. The breeze from the ocean is grand.

Thursday, July 3: Well, we have come to the end of another day, and glad to say that the weather has been fine although a little misty. Had our game of hockey this a.m.; slept this p.m.; had drill at 4 p.m., and afternoon tea. Went on top deck, and watched the sailors practising submarine drill. Had a nice concert with the boys in the evening. Had a talk with the head steward on submarines. We expect to be in the war zone to-morrow. Nothing in sight but the ocean. We are going to bed early and rise early, as the subs' favorite time is day-break. We don't think of our ourselves. This boat is a food supplying boat for the allies. I wish we could tell you all we have in store for them. We have 5,000 bags of mail. But let me say it is a very anxious time for all on board. We carry our lifebelts with us everywhere we go, and retire ready for an emergency attack any minute. I was quite worried last night, but quite reconciled. The old saying, "Whatever is to be will be." God alone can guide and protect us. A week ago to-day we spent our first night on board; the time has gone very quickly indeed.

Wednesday, July 3: Arose earlier than usual. Was on deck 15 minutes before breakfast; the air is grand; spent the early part of the a.m. on deck; played one game of hockey and had drill, but oh, the game was too strenuous for me; I was completely exhausted. I was so sick. Was unable to partake of lunch but had a good sleep and by 6.30 was quite ready for my dinner. This p.m. about 3.30 the sailors fired the big gun; it almost deafened us; I do not know how the boys stand it for several months. Spent evening on deck; and saw several small porpoises playing in the water. They resemble a black bass but are very much larger. Their skin is quite valuable. A whale was sighted a few days ago but I was not fortunate enough to see it. We are now in the war zone and everything is in readiness.

Thursday: All safely through another night and day. The soldiers are all on guard. We were up quite early this a.m.; enjoyed every meal to-day; played one game of hockey, but was very tired. Our side won by 6-2, so one does not mind a few sore ankles, etc. We went for a promenade on deck in the moonlight which was grand. Had a rain shower at lunch time but it did not last long. Spent all day on deck. My pal is sick again. The zig-zag course is too much for her. Read Lillie, Helen and Bertha's letters a few days ago, and enjoyed them very much. Thank you so much. We expect our convoy at daybreak. We are getting in more dangerous waters all the time. Quite a number of the Sisters are sleeping on deck dressed. I think that I will follow their example to-morrow night.

Friday, July 6: Well, I did not follow their example. Went to bed very late and slept fairly well, but with one ear open. This day has gone very quickly. The boat is going very fast. We arose early as usual; spent the greater part of the day on deck; played our game as usual. We had a very bad storm, rained and blew. The waves were dashing in over the bow of the boat and after the rain it was very misty, but the captain was quite pleased. The subs could not see so far. We played and sang and retired very late. Expect to see the coast of Ireland to-morrow, also our destroyer. The captain said that the way must be pretty clear or else we would have had our convoy sooner. I think if we reach England safe and get settled I will sleep for a whole day. We are told that we get a few days leave —if so I hope to see some of my friends, especially Jim, if he is still in Engalnd. Some more tell us that we are all for France. We cannot tell, but will write as soon as I know where we will be. We expect to reach England, at least Liverpool, Sunday a.m. "The Lord willing," the weather permitting and the Germans don't interfere. The distance ordinarily is 3200 miles. They don't follow main lines any more.

Saturday, July 7: Well, this is our last day on the water; we expect to land to-morrow morning about nine a.m. if nothing happens. We surely are a very thankful people. The captain has not been to bed for three days and nights so you see how capable and self-sacrificing he is. He never came down for meals. Everything was taken to him. We surely think well of him. We had our games as usual this a.m. and p.m., but everyone was more or less excited and could not settle down. A report went around that we were just late enough to miss a sub, but you can't tell what happens. They never tell you what danger you are in.

The southern part of Ireland was seen in the distance all this p.m. and 18 cruisers were seen at once. I have a picture of our convoy if it turns out all right. I really feel sorry to think that our voyage is nearly over. In peace time I would like two more weeks of it. The Sisters are singing all the old songs. Two weeks ago to-day I was home with you. I can't really believe that I am so near England. What comes next? We cannot say, but will just have patience and wait; will finish this to-morrow morning. I think of you all very, very often, and hope you are well, happy and not worrying for me.

Sunday, July 8: Here we are, almost at Liverpool; everybody fine. Had a good sleep; the boat stopped in the Mersey River and waited for the tide. Now we are going again. Will write again as soon as we get to the hospital, but will post this at Liverpool.

Remember me to everyone. I am fine. Lots of love. Margaret.

Private Joseph Hobbins Wounded At Lens Was At Vimy Ridge

The following letter was received by Mr. Dennis Hobbins 381 Queen street, from his son, Private Joseph Hobbins who was wounded near Lens and is now in a London Hospital.

London Red Cross Hospital
Flinsbury Square, London, E.C.
July 17th.

Dear Father.—Just a few lines to let you know that I am getting on as well as can be expected. I was lucky that I got out alive, it sure was a hot corner. I got mine just outside of Lens. It is a poor looking city to-day. We got the 1st street and one old church. He made it quite hot for us. My wounds would not have been as bad as they are only I had to lay out in a shell hole for 4 hours after I was hit. It was impossible to get in or to get help. I saw quite a few of my pals fall. There were about 20 on each side of me killed and I was left alone but I went on and I got mine, but it was not as bad as my poor pals got. It is fierce what they throw at human beings. I guess you read enough about Vimy Ridge. Well I was in luck there. I was in at the beginning and went through it without a scratch. The two friends I came over from Canada with are laying up there. But Daddy he sure does fear the Canadians. Some prisoners we captured said that they did not care about English soldiers or Australians or New Zealanders, but they hate Canadians, because they will fight till the last man is dead, whereas the others will surrender quick. England can thank Canada for her fighting men. When we take any trenches we hold them. He sure does pound us with his big guns. Well I guess I won't say any more about it. I do hope all are in the very best of health, as I am in the best myself, except for a little pain, but it won't last much longer. Well dear Father I guess I will be sent to Canada just as soon as I am fit to leave here. I will close with love to all. Will write to the girls just as soon as I feel a little better. Write soon. I remain.

Your loving son,
PTE. JOSEPH HOBBINS.

HAS STILL FAR TO GO.

Cleveland Leader:—"Is the pressure of events beating down the spirit of Wilhelm II.? Is the course of the war swinging him around toward peace? It looks like nothing less, but he has still far to go to reach a possible common ground with the nations which are determined that he shall never have power again to plunge the world into the greatest and most terrible of wars and commit the crowning of all history."

SERGT. THORPE OF PETERBOROUGH WINS ANOTHER EVENT

The appended item gives the results of the Aldershot Command Championships. Sergt Thorpe of Peterborough won the three mile championship. He is also Captain of the 13th Brigade, C.F.A., team .This team won the all-round champion.

Previous performances of Canadian track athletes having paved the way for great expectations, the magnificent form of the Canadian teams at the Aldershot Command A. A. Meeting last Saturday came as no great surprise. Out of nine events Canadians took first place in seven. As a result, the Command Unit Championship went to the Canadian Field Artillery, with 39 points; and second honours to the Canadian Infantry, with 17 points. No competitor was allowed to run in more than one event. The individual championships resulted as follows: —

100 Yards.—1, Gnr. Blades, C.F.A.; 2, Cpl. Reggie Walker, South Africa, (ex-world's champion); 4, Co. Sgt.-Maj. McLaws, Can. Infy. Won by inches. Time, one yard inside 10 2-5 seconds.

One Mile.—1, Dvr. Holmes, C.F.A.; 3, Gnr. MacPhayden, C.F.A. Won by inches. Time, 4 min. 47 secs.

Three Miles.—1, Sgt. Thorpe, C.F.A. Won easily in 16 min. 10 2-5 secs.

High Jump.—1, Lieut. Jardine, Can. Infy. Height, 5ft. 6in.

Putting the 12lb. Shot.—1. Sgt.-Major Lees, C.F.A. Distance, 38ft 5in.

Obstacle Race.—1, Cpl. Johnstone, C.F.A.

Tug-of-war.—16th Reserve Canadian Infantry. Team: Co. Sgt.-Maj. Brierley (coach), Ptes. Mahlum, Tinningley, Lewis, Nordmarkin, Jordahl, Thompson, Foster, Brown, Bridgewater and Willis.

In the 440 yards' race, Gnr. Varney, C.F.A., was fourth.

PITCHER SMALLWOOD IS PHYSICAL MARVEL

BALTIMORE, Md., August 7. — Walter Smallwood, pitcher of the Newark International League club, a resident of Dayton, Ohio, appeared before the examining board at Ellicott yesterday for a physical examination for the draft army.

The examining physicians stated he was the best specimen of manhood examined by them for the draft army, and he passed with a mark of 100 per cent. He didn't claim exemption.

Call Cleveland To Make Trouble

White Sox and Red Sox Must Keep an Eye on the Indians.

NEW YORK, August 7.—The brilliant victory of the Cleveland Indians over the Red Sox, following an equally brilliant performance last week, is causing agitation to-day in the Johnson circuit.

Lee Fohl's sterling pitching staff, combined with a winning bunch, are going horn into the argument over first place in the American League un-

The Indians and Tigers are locked out punch at the Indians' average.

The Indians and Tigers arel ocked in the throes of a struggle for third place, seven games behind the Red Sox, but following a crack at the Highlanders in New York they return to Cleveland to take on the White Sox. Considerable fur should fly in this series. Fohl's young pitchers, particularly Bagby and Coveleski, have been carrying the burden. Klepfer's victory over the world's champions places him in a class with other stars and speaks none too well for the chances of the White Sox in the impending clash. The added whacking punch of Tris Speaker, Ray Chapman, Wambsganss, Roth and others makes the Cleveland line-up an awe-inspiring array.

Many of the most reliable baseball prognosticators are to-day figuring that the Indians have better than an outside chance to nose out both the Red and White Sox for the American League pennant.

THREE WHITE SOX PASS U.S. ARMY EXAMINATION

Gandil, Felsch and Weaver Claim Exemption—"Death Valley Jim" Ready.

PHILADELPHIA, August 7. — Three players of the Chicago Americans, subject to draft in the new national army, successfully passed the physical examination here, but claimed exemption on the ground of being married and having dependents. They are Gandil, first baseman; Felsch, centre fielder, adn Weaver, third baseman.

Pitcher "Death Valley Jim" Scott also underwent examination for the Officers' Reserve Corps, and if declared eligible will report at Presidio, Cal., August 27.

NEW DISCHARGE ORDERS

Wounded Canadians May Now be Discharged in England Under Certain Conditions.

LONDON, Aug. 7.—Orders have been issued for the Canadian overseas forces that only N.C.O.'s and men who came within one or two categories, may be given their discharge from the forces in the United Kingdom. The categories are: (a) Those who are unmarried and whose physical condition is such that they require care for a considerable period or, whose parents or friends are in the United Kingdom and are prepared to look after them. (b) Those not coming under category "a," and whose circumstances are such that the Minister of overseas military forces considers it would be inequitable to send to Canada for discharge or further medical treatment. The duty of deciding into which class action, men fall is left to the Pensions and Claims Board.

In the course of the past month 16 officers and 85 nursing sisters of the C.A.M.C. have been dispatched overseas from English areas, and 146 nursing sisters have arrived from Canada.

Draft's Success In U.S. Can Well Be Repeated Here

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.—The success of the draft in the United States proved its popularity as a democratic measure, according to Provost Marshal General E. H. Crowder, the man chiefly responsible for the operation of the conscription law here.

Handled in the same way, it should be as successful and popular in Canada whose "home rule" Government is so much like that of the United States he declared.

The secret of America's comparative freedom from draft riots was that the registration and examination of conscripts was in the hands of their own neighbors and friends in civil life.

"No soldier appeared at a man's home and escorted him to the registration booth," said Gen. Crowder. "No soldier examines him and no military court passes on his claim for exemption. The people themselves called upon the men from 21 to 30 years of age to present themselves for voluntary selective service."

"Less than one-tenth of one per cent. failed to register. When you consider that ten million men were registered in twelve hours, within seventeen days of the law's passage and by 125,000 volunteer clerks in 4,557 booths throughout the United States you can appreciate the success and popularity of the draft.

"Some conscientious objectors and anarchists were heard in denunciation of the draft; there may be some attempts to escape service by trickery. But in a country as large as this you are certain to run across a number of such cases. They are in significant."

EXEMPTIONS PROVE LAW'S POPULARITY.

Crowder turned the large percentage of exemption claims into an argument showing the popularity of the draft.

"That is what the law intended," he said. "We do not want men with dependents. We do not want men physically unfit for war. We have such a great reservoir of men in this country that we needed a law to select those who should bear the brunt of the fighting. We took a big chance by registering all the men without military force but the results proved the wisdom of the plan.

"As you know registration day was an almost universal holiday of patriotism. There were parades in hundreds of cities. There were no untoward incidents.

"Local self-government in draft matters followed the same policy in civil and political life, was the cornerstone of America's conscription law.

"The same common law which is the basis of our life in the United States is the basis of Canada's Government," said Gen. Crowder. "The draft worked smoothly here; it ought to be popular there."

WHAT GERMANS READ

The cry for peace grows ever more tumultuous and more menacing. It is so insistent that the Cologne Volks-zeitung grows almost frantic in denouncing those who call for it:

"We should lost not only the left bank of the Rhine and East and West Prussia, sacrifice our colonies forever, and hand over our fleet to the English; we should not only pay our own tremendous war expenditure, but also that of our enemies, which already amounts to £20,000,000,000.

"We should lose not only the left ship which our U-boats had sunk up to date, and finally we should be compelled to pay any bill that the enemy chose to present us as the cost of the "restoration" of Belgium, Northern France, Serbia, Montenegro, Rumania and Russia.

"It is, therefore, essential at a moment like the present that such lunatics as those who are clamoring for "immediate peace" should be bundled off to the madhouses to which they belong, rather than that they should be allowed by their hateful promiscuity to infect the German masses with their disintegrating ailment."

There are other "disintegrating ailments," however, which are working mischief in the Fatherland, but again it is the unofficial press which refers to them. The "Badische Landeszeitung" observes:

"We have learned that in this glorious German Empire nothing is to be obtained without fighting for it. Should, therefore, the non-realisation of the Imperial promises cause us a fresh disappointment, the German people, represented by their real progressives who will then consolidate with all the dissentient elements, will form one sole and potent phalanx.

At the next election, this phalanx will give such a proof of its power and its strength that the reactionaries, whoever they be, high or low, will coweringly hurry to their lairs, and leave the field uncontested to the German people."

The non-official press, it will be noted, which is not obliged to be slavishly optimistic to order, makes no secret of its apprehensions. Thus the "Schwabische Tagwacht" says:

"We are now engaged in a gigantic struggle.. Never since the beginning of the world have such prodigious battles been delivered; never have such formidable masses, to be counted by millions on either side, flung themselves against one another.

It is not to be denied that our enemies have made their attacks with the greatest accumulation of forces ever placed in line, and that those attacks were prepared with a marvelous skill and forethought. The whole situation, indeed, is menacing in the extreme.

"We can but hope that, thanks to the bravery of our troops and the unboubted superiority of our generals, this battle, which will certainly continue for many weeks, may give us a complete and definite victory."

"Our dead at Arras and the Aisne." In the semi-official Cologne Gazette (Kolnische Zeitung) there is a doleful leading article with the above heading. It says:

"The imagination of no romancer can possibly depict what would become of us if instead of a day of victory a day of defeat should overtake the Fatherland. Our dead at Arras and on the Aisne teach us our moral duty. At their bier, and at the bier of thosen only knows how many more who will be killed before the great work of Germany's salvation is accomplished, we must stand reverently and ask ourselves if we are doing well the solemn duty we owe them. Up with our hearts! That is the call which should to-day inspire the whole German nation, facing, perhaps, the gravest months of the war. The Fatherland above all! Germany must live, even if we die, as one of our field-grey poets has well said."

In the German press importance is bestowed upon a new American discovery for exploiting soya beans, which up to a short time ago were being shipped in immense quantities to Holland through the British blockade. The Cologne Gazette says:

"During the war soya beans have became of great importance to us as a direct source of food owing to their having been worked up into the so-called 'Aguma' flour. In other countries they have been used for nothing but fertilising and mixture for fodder. We now hear from South Carolina that cotton-planters have found a way of pressing out of soya beans oil which can be converted into colors, soap, glycerine and varnish, and which can also be successfully utilized for production of certain foodstuffs.

HARRY LAUDER'S VISIT TO IS SON'S GRAVE

Harry Lauder's story of his visit to his son's grave, from the People's Journal of Dundee:

After describing a concert in the open air at which he sang his well known songs, Mr. Lauder continues:

"I went to bed worn and tired, though not weary in spirit. But I didn't sleep well and had to be up with the larks and off to Albert. My boy's grave is there.

On the way we met a company of colonials, lithe, lean, tanned, and fighters to the backbone. You could see it in the poise of them, the stuck out chin, the square jaw and the devil me care glint in their eyes. Sons the Motherland is proud of.

I was gazing at the most wonderful figure in France, as the Colonials marched up. It is a figure of the Virgin Mary holding the child Jesus in her arms. The statue is not standing as it did at the outbreak of the war. A German gun altered the position. The figure stands at an angle of fully 90 degrees, holding out the infant. It seems impossible that it could keep from smashing to the ground. It is a wonderful sight.

The French people believe that it will fall on the day of victory. They have that feeling strong and firm. When we have battered the Huns to Berlin, then, and not till then, will the statue—of its own accord— fall to the ground.

At My Boy's Grave.

Now I am coming to Albert—and my thoughts were busy. What might have been; the bright dreams of a brighter future. "We get off here," said the officer quietly, and I kent why. A wee bit off the Bapaume road I saw rows and rows of white crosses. I followed the officer.

By and by I stood at the spot where my boy lies sleeping. Everything was quiet there—only the trees whispered. There were hundreds o' white crosses there, hundreds o' mounds among the long green grass in that peaceful French cemetery. I knelt down and wished for the impossible. If I could only hear one word—get one last look from the eyes I could feel, but not see.

And then I thought o' a' the sons lyin' quiet and still beside me. I wished that a' the faithers o' the sleepin' heroes were there to mourn wi' me—to weep wi me, aye, an' toe comfort me.

1,600 Are Enlisted In Naval Service

Interesting Facts Are Brought Out in Connection With the Naval Report.

OTTAWA, Aug. 7.—The annual statement of Canada's naval affairs brought to light many interesting facts. Among others it was shown that H.M.C.S. Niobe was now a depot ship in Halifax harbor, and that the naval college had had the best year in its history, 30 or 40 students being enrolled.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier then asked what was the nature of the tuition.

RECEIVED CERTAIN TRAINING.

Mr. Hazen said that, of course, the training led towards the development of sailors. They got a certain amount of training on ships of a smaller type. They received mathematics, a certain amount of literature, and also practice in the machine shops.

In answer to a question by Mr. Lemieux, the Minister of Marine said that they had succeeded in enlisting 1,600 men for the Royal Canadian navy. This had been done chiefly through the help given by Mr. Aemilius Jarvis of Toronto and Mr. J. K. L. Ross of Montreal.

Hon. Geo. P. Graham asked what progress had been made in regard to the shipbuilding for the British Government.

Hon. J. D. Hazen: "Satisfactory, but not so rapidly as might have been desired. A number of ships have been launched. Delays have been necessary."

To Mr. Graham the Minister said that over 300 Canadian young men had become sub-lieutenants in the Motorboat patrol and nearly 100 others motor mechanics in the same service. In the R.C.V.R. (overseas) over 1,600 men had been enlisted. In the Royal Canadian Navy there were 355 officers and 2,975 men.

REPORTS, BUT NO EVIDENCE.

Hon. Charles Marcil: "Has anything been seen of the enemy in Canadian waters since the war began?"

In reply the Minister said that it was difficult to answer. Numerous reports had been received from different parts of the coast of the presence of submarines, but these had generally never been substantiated. All the same every precaution was taken by patrol vessels to prevent either the operations of submarines or the establishment of a submarine base on this side of the Atlantic.

Hon. R. Lemieux: "There has never been any friction between the British and Canadian navies?"

Hon. J. D. Hazen: "No, everything has passed off very satisfactorily."

Hon. R. Lemieux, smilingly: "Well you have now a naval college in fine working order, ships in good shape, and were able to enlist men in Canada for naval duties. May I ask my honourable friend, possibly the least objectionable of all the Ministers opposite, whether there is any chance of a repeal of the Naval Act?"

The only reply Mr. Lemieux received was a very pleasant smile from the Minister.

CAPT. J. H. BURNHAM IS "WILLING TO GO IT BLIND"

During a discussion in Parliament yesterday it was stated that there was no work for Col. Hugh Clark, recently appointed Parliamentary Secretary to Sir Robert Borden, "unless it was to give campaign literature." Capt. J. H. Burnham, who followed Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux, who made the suggestion, is reported as speaking very frankly in expression of his willingness to "go the whole hog" in suporting party interests. He is reported as follows:

Capt. J. H. Burnham of Peterborough declared that a charge that the Parliamentary Secretary to the Prime Minister had been appointed to write campaign literature was a decidedly serious one, up or withdrawn. Capt. Burnham thought the salary granted for the office was excessive, but added amid laughter, that, as an election was impending, he was willing to go it blind and vote for it, although he was not quite willing to go it blind with a charge like that made by Mr. Lemieux unrefuted.

Woodstock Men Fix Farm Wage At $3 Standard

Employers Respond to Call and will Canvass the Whole City.

WOODSTOCK, Aug. 8.—Nearly a hundred representatives of local factories, stores, and other institutions employing men responded, at only a few hours' notice to a call by Mayor West, at a meeting for the purpose of organizing the city to supply farm help during the coming harvest season. Although all of those who were present declared that they were already short handed and could not spare a man, they also declared without exception, that if any men in their respective employ could be induced to go out to the farms for a time no obstacle would be put in their way.

Some discussion occurred as to the wages which men who volunteered for harvest work should expect, and the consensus of opinion was that the farmers who would reap the benefit of bumper crops should be willing at least to pay $3 a day with board. It was decided, therefore, in calling for volunteers to make this the standard, and insist that farmers who need help, shall pay at that rate.

The meeting was called at the request of the executive of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association executive, which specified 100 men as Woodstock's share of the 10,000 needed to help garner the crops of Ontario.

A committee of the men representing each of the local factories and two other committees of two men each, representing the stores and other institutions; were appointed to canvass every place where men are employed, and these committees will meet to-morrow night to report on the result of their endeavour. It is hoped that by Wednesday it will be possible to telegraph the prime minister that the necessary 100 men will be available.

NO TIME TO TALK PEACE.

President Wilson Does Not Believe Germany Is Sincere.

WASHINGTON, August 7.—President Wilson had a long conference yesterday afternoon with Senator Lewis, the Democratic whip, urging haste in the final enactment of the food control bill and revenue bills, and is understood to have indicated that he does not consider the present the time for discussion of peace negotiations with Germany. It is believed the President indicated that he did not consider Germany's recent peace feelers to be genuine.

WEDDING BELLS

WAINWRIGHT—CLEMENTI.

Quietly this morning, in St. John's Church, the Rev. Mr. Gay officiating, the wedding was solemnized of Amy Toker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Clementi, 434 Park street, and John Darrell Wainwright, 69th Battery, Petawawa, son of Mr. Mussum Wainwright, M.P., Hamilton, Bermuda.

The bride, who was attended by her cousin, Miss Georgie Stevenson and Miss Ruth Robertson, wore her travelling suit of navy blue gabardine, small navy hat, and wore a corsage bouquet of orchids and pink roses.

Immediately after the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Wainwright left for the Kawartha Lakes, where they will spend a short honeymoon.

OBITUARY

JOHN BATTEER

John Batteer died last night at the residence of his brother-in-law, Francis Campbell.

Mr. Batteer was born in South Monaghan, 46 years ago and resided in Cavan near Ida for a number of years. A man of quiet and retiring disposition he won the respect and esteem of all who knew him.

He is survived by one brother, David, of North Monaghan and one sister, Mrs. Campbell of this city.

The funeral will take place on Friday at 2.30 o'clock from the residence of Mr. Campbell, 76 Aylmer street south to the Little Lake Cemetery. A service will be held at the house at 2 o'clock, conducted by Rev. Mr. Shaw.

(From the Warsaw Correspondent.)

MRS. GEO. LITTLE.

On Saturday last the death occurred at the residence of her son, Robert Hamilton, of Mrs. George Little. The deceased was born at Inneskillen Island, 64 years ago, and came to this country in 1878. She leaves to mourn her loss, her husband, four sons and one daughter, Robert Hamilton of McCracken's Landing; Wm. Hamilton, of Herbert, Sask.; Florence and Joseph Hamilton at home, also Arthur Little, who also resides at home. One son, Henry Hamilton, predeceased her over a year ago. The funeral took place from the family residence, Monday, August 6th, Rev. J. J. Robbins, officiating. Interment was held at St. Mark's cemetery, Warsaw.

Mrs. Little was widely known throughout the locality, and her kindly disposition and cheerful willingness to help those with whom she came in contact endeared her to all. The sympathy of all is extended to the bereaved family whose great loss is irreparable.

JAMES JEFFERSON REID.

With the death of James J. Reid of Burleigh township, who passed away on July 31st at his home, the township lost one of its oldest and most respected citizens. He was born May 13th, 1844, at Flint Creek, New York State, and came to Burleigh over forty years ago. Thus he encountered and overcame many obstacles which pioneer residents are forced to come in contact with. He was a quiet man, always to be found at his home, busy with his farm duties. In politics he was a lifelong Liberal, but took no active part, and in religion he was an adherent of the Methodist church. During his lengthy illness, although suffering greatly from cancer, he was always patient and thoughtful of the comfort of others.

He is survived by his sorrowing wife, three daughters and six sons, namely: Mrs. Wm. McCauley of Burleigh, Mrs. R. McCauley of Dummer, Miss Emma at home, Messrs. Albert, Hilliard and Gordon of Burleigh, Alexander of Peterborough, James of Apsley, and Thomas, somewhere in France. He leaves also one brother Mr. Washington Reid of Warsaw, and one sister, Mrs. Bulah Esplen, of Port Elgin, Ontario.

The funeral, which was largely attended, took place on Thursday to Warsaw cemetery. Service was held at the house and at the grave by Rev. S. Carr, of Apsley.

The bereaved family have the deep sympathy of all their friends in their bereavement.

"A precious one from us has gone,
A voice we loved is stilled,
A place is vacant in our home
Which never can be filled."

In 1914 an attempt was made to take a census of birds in the United States. Most of the work was done on farms in the north-western quarter of the United States — north of North Carolina and east of Kansas. For every 100 robins reported there was 40 catbirds, 37 brown thrashers, 18 house wrens, 27 kingbirds and 20 bluebirds.

STIFF FINE FOR ASSAULTING A BOY

For assaulting Walter Hargreaves, aged 12, an attack that Magistrate Dumble said was wholly unwarranted, Mrs. John Watson, Chambers street, was fined $2 and costs, or $10.60. It was shown that the boy had given no offence whatever, and was innocent of a trivial act some other boy had done and which was the alleged cause of the trouble.

POLICE TOO BUSY.

Chief Thompson Says They Are More Needed In City Than On Farms.

With twenty residences to visit and protect during their owners' absence, ten theft cases on the local list, and other complaints coming in from various parts of the city, Chief Thompson states that his staff is too busy to consider farm relief. They are overworked he asserts, especially the plain clothes men. Most of the men have expressed their readiness to help bring in the harvest, in fact would welcome the change, but the beat calls them, and Chief Thompson declares they are needed on city work.

("Bud") Swanston of East City, who spent ten years in Milwaukee, will join draft number 316.

PREVENT "SALE" OF TITLES

Motion to be Pressed in House of Lords.

LONDON, Aug. 7.—An interesting debate is expected in the Lords tonight on Lord Selborne's postponed motion regarding the alleged sale of honours. Lord Selborne will ask the Government to agree when any honour or dignity is conferred on a British subject, except the Royal family and members of the naval, military and civil service forces, that a definite public statemnet be issued, giving reasons for such honour; also that a declaration be made by the Premier in recommending anybody for such honour to the effect that he has satisfied himself that no payment is directly or indirectly associated with the grant or promise of such honour.

CAMP FUND OVERPLEDGED.

But Knights of Columbus Can Use Millions More For Soldiers.

CHICAGO, Aug. 7.— The $1,000,000 fund being raised by the Knights of Columbus for the relief and recreation of Roman Catholic soldiers and sailors has been greatly oversubscribed, according to James A. Flaherty, Supreme Knight, and the Supreme Council will consider increasing the amount to $5,000,000.

"Our plans for the erection of recreation camps at the various military cantonoments have been greatly increased, so we need three or even five times the original amount." Mr Flaherty said to-day.

"Indiana, Pennsylvania, New York, and in fact every State in the union has subscribed more than the amount asked of it, and will contribute more if needed. New York's contribution to date is $125,000. More than $1,000,000 in contracts already has been let."

BAN REMAINS ON APPLES.

No Steamer Space for Carrying Them to England.

LONDON, August 6.—The Admiralty Secretary in the House of Commons to-night held out no hope of a removal of the probation on importation of Canadian apples. It was urged that ships left Canada with empty space, but MacCullum Scott, who raised the matter, was informed that space under present circumstances could always be used for cargo of considerably greater importance than apples.

Shirley Benn was informed that adequate means had been taken ensuring ships now building in Canada would not only be suitable for trade of the moment, but for trade after the war.

CANADA'S WAR BILL NOW $850,000 DAILY

Owes Great Britain $272,000,000 for Upkeep of Troops.

OTTAWA, August 7. — Canada's war expenditure now totals $850,000 a day, the expenditure up to July 20th being $628,000,000, including the upkeep of the Canadian troops in France for which the amount estimated to be owed Great Britain for this is $272,000,000. The advances to the muntions board amounted to $288,000,000 and $22,000,000 was spent for cheese, hay, flour, etc. Canada is finding about ten million dollars a month for the purchase of cheese and contributing $35,000,000 a month to the Imperial Treasury for the purchase of muntions in Canada.

The raven is the first bird named in the Bible (Gen. 8:7). Although it feeds upon fruits and seeds, it also eats the flesh of dead animals, and so was considered unclean. The reference to the raven in Isaiah 34: 11 shows that the ancient peoples considered it a bird of evil omen.

A Single Application Banishes Every Hair

(The Modern Beauty)

Here is how any woman can easily and quickly remove objectionable, hairy growths without possible injury to the skin: Make a paste with some powdered delatone and water, apply to hairy surface and after 2 or 3 minutes rub off, wash the skin and the hairs are gone. This is a painless, inexpensive method and, excepting where the growth is unusually thick, a single application is enough. You should, however, be careful to get genuine delatone.

Win The War And Cast Out Profiteers Sounded At Liberal Convention

Westerners Desire a United Canada For Concentration of the Country's Efforts—Stamp Out Combinations in Restraint of Trade

WINNIPEG, Aug. 8.—The resolutions committee of the Liberal convention has acted cannily. It has secured a condemnation of the past conduct of the war by the Borden Government before asking the delegates to listen to any proposition as to the future. And on the question of Sir Robert Borden's blunders those delegates certainly were unanimous.

OUT TO WIN THE WAR

To-day's proceedings, of course, cannot be interpreted as an endorsation of Sir Wilfrid Laurier. That, if it comes at all, must come later. The convention, under whatever leader it controls appears to be out to win the war. Every reference to keeping Canada in the forefront of the great conflict is applauded. Delegates who have sons at the front are given tremendous receptions. Denunciation of the profiteers and the combiners and of those who are throttling agriculture are all pointed to as menaces to the Empire's success. The Premiers of the four Provinces, Martin, Sifton, Brewster and especially Norris, give every sign of being impressed with the tremendous nature of the great struggle. It is as to method that the difference will arise.

REFER TO NECESSITY.

It is noticeable that the Premiers, in their addresses almost invariably refer to the necessity of union in Canada. That, also, is the outstanding feature of the resolution by which the convention has condemned the Government. It calls for all classes being united in one passionless effort for success. In other words there must be no sectionalism. All this may or may not be interpreted as indicating that the Westerners are not willing to abandon voluntary recruiting without another trial, if there is going to be disunion in the country as a result. In fact, it may be said with some certainty that if Sir Wilfrid Laurier would send the convention a despatch saying that he is an ultimate conscriptionist, and will enforce compulsion if voluntarism fails on further trial, the big gathering would be behind him to a man. The point of divergence lies in the fact that many delegates, especially those from Manitoba, are not willing to dispense with conscription as a last resort. Indeed many of these argue that Sir Wilfrid himself would employ it if necessary.

RESOLUTION AGAINST COMBINES.

When Hon. G. W. Brown presented a resolution calling for control of combines of which he said the banking system is the greatest, he said:

"More than that, very other combine is linked up with it. Do you suppose that Sir Thomas White would occupy the position he does to-day if he did not stand well with the five or six men, who author the banking interests of Canada, who curtail the money of Canada which is really your money? He is the appointee in the Borden Government of the Banks of Canada."

It had been possible in the past for Canada to be "profiteered" by the interests without feeling it very much but with the burden of war financing on the country this was no longer the case. We have been told that to win this war we need to send another 100,000 soldiers across the water. I would go further than that, and say that before this war is over we will have to put on the altars of this country the entire wealth of the country as well as its entire manhood. Any country which submits to combines are a slave-driven people. They represent the most cowardly way of stealing that you can impose upon the people."

BROWN GIVEN OVATION.

Mr. Brown was given an ovation when he declared that, "Were it not for the legal stealing and mismanagement of the people's money the boys would be coming forward to-day for enlistment in numbers far exceeding the number required." Instead of that he said the Government is rewarding "the men who are fattening on the men in the trenches of Flanders."

Hon. Duncan Marshall, Minister of Agriculture for Alberta, declared that this way of akilling countries and municipalities would be to destroy the mother of them which is "protecting." (Loud applause.) But in Canada it seemed to be necessary to destroy protection by slow strangulation so her children must be attached in the meantime. Free trade in banking, for instance, would do much to remedy banking troubles.

TEXT OF RESOLUTION.

The combine resolution is as follows:

"Resolved, That it is the duty of the Government of Canada in the interests of the people to stamp out all combinations in restraint of trade or which have the effect of unduly affecting prices; our laws pertaining to the creation and operation of any and all combines and trusts should be revised, extended and strengthened, and there should be established a Federal Court with a public prosecutor attached thereto, entrusted with the responsibility of rigidly enforcing such laws in the general public interest."

AGAINST BANKS AND BANKERS

The convention's bete noir seems to be banks and bankers. The only resolution not accepted solus bolus to date and sent back to committee for revision was that having to do with the banking system. The delegates resent the arrogance of the banks, which charge for money more than twice what they pay for it. They resent the huge and ornate bank buildings, the red tape involved in seeing high officials, and the liveried attendants. They also gave an enthusiastic reception to a delegate who attacked Sir Thomas White as the banking representative in the Borden Government.

FOR PUBLIC OWNERSHIP.

The convention is out and out for public ownership, but the details of the C.N.R. purchase do not suit it. It may be to-night before the convention gets the resolutions dealing with leadership, Union Government and further prosecution of the war. It is highly unlikely that a Union Government proposition will have any show.

Much Speculation as to Where Field Marshal Haig Will Strike the Next Blow

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, August 9.—Extensive movements behind the German lines reported by aerial observers to-day, were believed to indicate growing nervousness on the part of the enemy as the days pass without a general resumption of the Flanders offensive. Quick thrusts are being made at the German line along the entire front by both British and French forces. Field Marshal Haig, having established a reputation for "mixing his blows," there is the greatest speculation regarding where the next big punch will come.

Wheat Market Was Slightly Stronger

Choice Heavy Steers in Good Demand—Medium Quality Slow

Cash wheat market was steady and practically unchanged. Trading was quiet on the speculative markets, pending the issue to-day of the Government crop report from Washington. The report on the whole was slightly bullish on wheat but bearish on corn and oats.

Manitoba wheat—No. 1 northern, $2.40; No. 2 northern, $2.38; nominal store, Fort William; No. 3, $2.34. No. 4, $2.25.

Manitoba oats—No. 2, 81c, track, bay ports.

American corn—Nominal, not quoted.

Ontario oats—No. 2 white, not quoted.

Ontario wheat—No. 2, winter per car lots, $2.55 to $2.60; No. 3 winter, $2.53 to $2.58, according to freight outside; new crop, $2.35 nominal.

Peas—No. 2, nominal.

Buckwheat—Nominal.

Rye—No. 2, nominal.

Manitoba flour—First patents, in jute bags, $12.80; second patents, $12.40; strong bakers, $12.

Ontario flour—Winter according to sample, $11.20; track, Toronto, prompt shipment.

Millfeed—Car lots, delivered Montreal, shorts $45; bran, $36; feed flour, per bag, $3.25; middlings, $47 to $48.

Hay—Baled track, Toronto, car lots, No. 2, $11.50 to $12; mixed, $9 to $11; straw, $9.

CATTLE MARKETS

Union Stock Yards—Receipts, 96 cars, with 1328 cattle, 288 calves, 1772 hogs and 722 sheep and lambs.

Trade was active and prices steady at the opening of the market. Choice yearling steers were in good demand for export, a couple of loads selling at 12.35. Good to choice butchers' steers and heifers held steady, but medium to common quality stuff proved to be quite a drag on the market, and at the close were hard to dispose of, except at concessions in some cases of 20c and 25c.

Stocker trade was very quiet.

Cows and bulls inclined easier.

Sheep and lambs steady to firm.

Efforts To Bribe Boards Are To Be Investigated; To Appeal Exemption Cases

Government Prepared to Sift All Doubts Before the District Bodies—Gathering of Forces Not To Be Delayed

ONLY GOVERNMENT CAN APPEAL

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Federal officials have begun investigating charges of attempted bribery and fraud in connection with the army drafting in New York and at the same time made known that the War Department is preparing to appeal every doubtful claim for exemption filed with a local board. Mere claims for exemption will not be sufficient. The government will undertake to prove to district board, sitting as courts of appeal that thousands of such claims should not be allowed.

While the drafting was proceeding in nearly all of the 199 local districts in New York and hundreds of soldiers were being turned out every hour, the officials in charge were deliberating on the next step toward getting the army.

It is expected that within a few days the call to mobilize will be issued. It may come within a week. Those who stand ready to take up arms numbering many thousands may be mobilized immediately. The scheme is to take the men as fast as they are ready, not to wait for the close of the draft work here.

STATE MAY GATHER MEN INTO CAMPS.

Whether the federal or State Government will mobilize the new army forces has not been determined finally. Officials stated that probably the State may gather the new fighting material into camps and then turn over the organizations to the United States Government. If that programme is wollowed it will mean hard work for the State officials.

Officials stated that probably the actual call to arms will be issued so that the recruits now being mustered through the draft may go into camp by September 1.

That the federal government proposes to rigidly enforce the exemption rules came as a shock, not only to the thousands who have been setting up exemption claims but to the local boards, many of which are believed to have been too lenient.

Under assignment by the War Department the Bar Association is arranging to delegate a lawyer to each local board. The ablest lawyers in the city will be designated. They will represent officially the United States government. Their duty will be to attend all hearings by local boards when exemption claims are considered.

In every case in which the lawyer believes the local Board has granted exemption unnecessarily appeal will be made. The government's representative then will take the case to the district Board and there present the government's side, undertaking to prove that the exemption should not have been granted. The local boards will begin within a few days considering exemption claims. The district Board will organise tomorrow and appoint borough committees.

ONLY GOVERNMENT CAN APPEAL.

Those whose exemption claims are rejected by a local Board cannot appeal. Only the government can appeal.

Roscoe S. Conkling, representing the adjutant general, obtained evidence that bribes had been offered to members of local boards and examining physicians to obtain exemption. Twelve such cases are being investigated. Those seeking to buy freedom from military service have made offers ranging from a few dollars each to $300. The local board members have reported all such bribe offers and the evidence is being prepared by agents of the Department of Justice and the United States Marshal for presentation to the United States Attorney. The would-be bribers will be prosecuted.

The Mayor's Committee on National Defence is assisting Mr. Conkling and the Adjutant General in gathering evidence that unscrupulous lawyers are holding registrants for large fees on promises of obtaining exemption. In one district a local board posted notice that blank forms could be obtained from a lawyer who was named. It was found the lawyer was selling the blanks, which could not be obtained at headquarters, with his services for filling them out for $15. The board was instructed to take down the notice. Officials state they probably cannot take action against such lawyers, but the names and records of conduct will be turned over to the Bar Association. Philip J. McCook, director of the Mayor's Committee, said he had proof that lawyers had been charging fees of $5 to assist registrants. The Mayor's Committee condemned the practice.

Mr. Conklin personally investigated the case of a man who was passed by a local board as fit physically, then recalled and examined a second time and rejected as unfit because a rapid pulse. The man was summoned to headquarters in the State Arsenal and examined and passed, and the local board was instructed to certify him as able to do military duty. The conduct of the board and its physicians is being investigated.

BIGGER CROPS IN U. S.

Country's Production will be Greater Than in 1916.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—In its August crop report, issued to-day, the Department of Agriculture forecast the prospective production of the country's crops, based on their condition August 1, as follows:

Winter wheat, 417,000,000 bushels, compared with 462,000,000 last year.

Spring wheat 236,000,000 bushels, compared with 158,000,000 in 1916.

All wheat, 653,000,000 bushels, compared with 640,000,000 last year.

Corn, 3,191,000,000 bushels, compared with 2,583,000,000 last year.

The largest crop of corn ever grown in the United States is thus in prospect for the coming harvest.

The production of oats is 1,456,000,000 bushels, compared with 1,252,000,000 bushels last year.

Way of the Waves.

A strange thing about waves that are rolling in from the sea is that they bring no water with them. While these mad waves are rolling in a piece of driftwood may ride them steadily and make progress away from the land. This is for the reason that waves are made in the very way a wrinkle may be pushed across the tablecloth with a pencil laid flat. The tablecloth does not advance, but the ridge, because of a force bearing on it, goes forward.—New York Tribune.

"MOUNTAIN MADNESS"

By Anna Alice Chapin

"MOUNTAIN MADNESS"

Never a trail but strange it seems
When it crosses another trail;
One a pathway of joys and dreams,
One that leads through treacherous streams,
One as frail as the moon's own beams;
One where you conquer, one where you fail.

Every trail runs a different way;
To a million points is the Great Map laid;
By the garden walk to the hills we stray,
The mountain path leads home some day;
But God be kind, is all we can say,
When the trails are crossed for a man and a maid!
—Crossed Trails.

The sense to value Riches, with the Art
T' enjoy them, and the Virtue to impart,
Not sunk by sloth, nor rais'd by servitude;
To balance Fortune by a just expense,
Join with Economy, Magnificence.
—Alexander Pope.

CHAPTER I.

Five O'clock in the Valley.

"Now, I wonder," said Judge Denby, smiling in his wonderful quiet, sunshiny way, "just what those dear children are doing?"

Mrs. Forsythe smiled, too, and shook her head.

"They do so love prowling over these mountains!" she said. "Tell me, Judge Denby" (her years of acquaintanceship gave her the right to a more intimate form of speech, but she had never availed herself of it) "are all the things one hears of about this part of the world really true? It seems so odd, here in these terribly civilized, sophisticated surroundings, to imagine that a really wild, lawless, adventurous life may be going on all about us! Do these exciting things that are reported really happen, or are they just—fairy tales?"

It would be hard to describe the life of the Warm Sulphur Springs colony to one who had not seen it. Imagine all of Broadway, Fifth Avenue and Wall Street reduced to a finely accentuated and condensed quantity, and you may have a faint idea of what this tiny oasis of ultra-fashion stands for—or did in the days which this story records—in the centre of towering ranges representing vast and undirected conditions and impulses.

ECZEMA

ECZEMA is not a disease of the blood, and therefore cannot be cured by internal treatment. The curative agent must be applied directly to the inflamed, itching skin. To know this is to save much time and suffering, for it is on this account that Dr. Chase's Ointment has been able to establish such an enviable record as a cure for eczema and kindred diseases of the skin.

Chafing and irritation of the skin is the usual cause of eczema. The irritation may be caused by the clothing or as the result of an injury of some kind. In some cases where the skin is extremely sensitive the frequent application of cold water or the use of impure soap is sufficient to set up an irritation of the skin which results in eczema.

But whatever may be the cause, of one thing you can be certain, that Dr. Chase's Ointment will affect a cure if used persistently. You are not experimenting when you use it, for it is known the world over as the most effective treatment for eczema.

Your Liver is the Best Beauty Doctor

A dull, yellow, lifeless skin, or pimples and eruptions, are twin brothers to constipation.

Bile, nature's own laxative, is getting into your blood instead of passing out of your system as it should.

This is the treatment, in successful use for 30 years:—one pill daily (more only when necessary).

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS

Genuine bears signature

Colorless faces often show the absence of iron in the blood. Carter's Iron Pills will help this condition.

In the great hotel and its little entourage of cottages, casinos, bathhouses, etc., were all the salient and living facts of wealth and luxury, raised, by isolation to a point of insolent exaggeration hard to equal even in this day of extravagant extravagance.

Here were booths and rooms where jewelry, laces, model gowns, books, flowers, and so on, could be had for but very little more than twice their normal market value. Here the stock-brokers had their feverish, pulsing tickers; the women their tea-rooms and bridge. For the more uncontrollably restless souls there was always roulette in private rooms.—"Private," because the management did not officially countenance gambling. There was also dancing, and the best orchestra that Ned Sperry, the hotel manager, could get together.

"Are they all fairy tales?" repeated Mrs. Forsythe, clinging to her first idea,—which was the undoubted incongruity of the law-abiding and well-ordered place and the lawless matter under discussion.

Judge Denby hesitated a moment before he answered her.

"Not altogether," he said, quietly.

The Judge and Mrs. Forsythe sat in the mammoth hotel office, which might have belonged to a perfectly good palace, among clusters of palms and fragrant flowering plants, with well-groomed men and beautifully gowned women moving about. It was one of Sperry's fads to make his foyer (as he called it) a rainbow place, of many coloured lights, and the chain of electric jewels ran soft and lustrous for what seemed an incredible distance.

The Judge was still considering Mrs. Forsythe's question.

"And what have you heard— concerning these fairy tales?" he asked, at length.

"Why, I heard," proceeded Mrs. Forsythe, "that there had been mobs, lynchings even, near here!"

Judge Denby's handsome old face hardened for a moment.

"A man was lynched five miles away a year or so ago," he said, "but they paid—they paid!"

"Tell me," urged Mrs. Forsythe, with that morbid curiosity almost invariably present among the virtuous and normal ornaments of society, "what had he done—this poor man?"

"He was—a murderer, and worse," said the Judge.

Mrs. Forsythe shivered, as though something terrible and unknown had paused in passing to touch her on the shoulder.

"But the gangs or bands of outlaws" she went on, "one hears so much about them. Are they bogies, or what?"

"There are such bands," said Judge Denby, slowly. "The man who was lynched was one of them."

"Then the others — the ones who 'paid'—were law-keeping citizens?"

"They were not keeping the law when they lynched a man," her companion said grimly. "As I tell you, they paid—quite a number of them. But there are other things less gruesome, dear lady, and almost as exciting. Let me tell you, for instance about a case——"

And all the time she tried to understand the problem of the lynching of that unknown man. Why was the Judge so bitterly, even revengefully proud of having made them "pay" for that? She looked at the clean-cut profile of her old friend, in a helpless puzzled way. Though she was not a subtle woman, she had her intuitions, and she sensed something not only incomprehensible, but sinister.

Mrs. Forsythe was a plump, well-dressed, typical woman, still blond of hair, fair of face and carefully groomed at all times,—the sort you see by the thousand in every fashionable resort in America, only varying in degrees of clothes and manners. Mrs. Forsythe was superlative in both. She was a frankly conventional being, and on studying her one felt instinctively that never by any condition of chance could she have done anything but the proper thing. Jack Radnor, engaged to her daughter Enid, sometimes felt a spasm of panic as he looked from one to the other. They were absurdly alike in looks, in spite of Enid's present youth and slenderness and alert ways. Jack used to wonder in terror whether Enid would be exactly like her mother when she reached her age! He liked Mrs. Forsythe, but he hated to look forward to a day, however remote, when he should have to pass down the pathway of life with her replica.

If he had ever seen a certain wistfulness in her eyes— a wistfulness which betrayed itself seldom, and of which she herself was hardly conscious—he might have altered his uncompromising twenty-seven-year-old judgment of his future mother-in-law.

There was, however, none of the wistfulness in her expression at present. She looked very well indeed in the pretty light,—already the little electric lamps were glowing through their soft-toned shades, and the negro waiters were passing tea in the big palm-lined hotel office.

Judge Denby, looking at her critically, yet smiling, thought he had never seen a woman who held her colouring and her carriage so well. He had known her as a youngs man, when she was something of a belle, and he and the late James Forsythe were only drops in the metaphorical bucket of her admirers.

The orchestra, composed of strings only in the afternoon (Sperry had a discriminating instinct worthy of a stage manner when it came to effects) was playing, "Then you'll remember me."

It is one of the simplest, yet most plaintive of airs, and because it is simple and plaintiff and old-fashioned it stands among the immortal little melodies of the world.

"When other lips and other hearts," sang the violins; you could almost hear the words. The strain carried both Denby and Mrs. Forsythe back a quarter of a century. They looked at each other and smiled, rather sadly.

"How you used to flirt!" said the Judge with seeming irrelevance.

"Surely not!" Her smile was less sad.

"Surely yes! Look at me!—and poor Dick!"

The smile left her lips.

"I have not thought of him for nearly thirty years," she said quietly. "'I don't believe I ever—flirted— with him."

Judge Denby lifted his eyebrows, but did not contest the point.

"He—dropped out, you know," he went on.

"Yes," she said, looking straight before her. "I know he dropped out.—There! They are playing the new thing of Sousa's. I think I am glad Those old songs make one sentimental, don't they?"

Judge Denby looked at her curiously. He wondered just what connection there was between "those old songs," sentimentality and Dick,—who had dropped out so many years before. However, he was a man who conserved his mental forces. He wasted no time, intellectually speaking. Such minutes as he spent in speculation were usually with a definite purpose.

A bell boy came up with a tray and envelope, and Ms. Forsythe, with a murmured apology to the Judge, examined it.

"It's a telegram— and for Enid!" she exclaimed. "I really think I'm justified in opening this—though I have theories about interfering with my daughter's correspondence."

She tore open the envelope. "Why—Enid will be delighted!" she cried, and read aloud:

"Was going North but changed my mind at Covington. Coming up to the Springs to spend Sunday with you. Alice."

Mrs. Forsythe laughed.

"How like Alice Baker! Making up her mind in a second's time like that—and—the telegram! About twice as many words as necessary! But I'm so glad she's coming. So, I think," she added, with a significant pleasant glance at Judge Denby, "will be some other people!"

"Ralph?" His fine eyebrows lifted quizzically, his smile was not displeased.

"Miss Baker is attractive," he said. "I am glad to see that my boy is carrying out the traditional good taste of the family, though, of course, if it might have been your daughter—"

She laughed at him.

"But Enid is such a thoroughly settled proposition," pursued the Judge, "that it seems heresy to even think of her connection with any one but young Radnor."

"Do you think so?" Enid's mother looked thoughtful. Just a shadow of the wistful look came into her eyes—just a ghostly expression of something she was trying to understand in her child. "Sometimes I wish I could be quite sure! But I know she cares for Jack. It's just that I don't think they have quite found each other yet,—at least sometimes I think so. More often I don't. You know I am not a bit of a consistent person!"

She laughed and helped herself to tea. The Judge declined. He seemed vaguely restless and, in fact, after watching Mrs. Forsythe sip from her cup for half a minute, rose as impetuously as could be expected of fifty-odd years and two hundred and twenty pounds.

"I have important busines to attend to," dear lady," he explained bowing in his own inimitable way over her hand. It was a courtly way and yet very gently mocking, as though he played a charming game which he knew by heart.

"Arthur Denby is just what he was twenty-five years ago," said Mrs. Forsythe to herself, looking after his tall, commanding figure as it swung its way among palms, and glittering tea-tables, and pretty women, to the great doors. "How do men with such heavy responsibilities keep their youth? I suppose it is because the life he leads is so vital, so active, so out of the rut of things."

She finished her tea, and went to join some women friends in a quiet game of bridge before dinner.

DYSENTERY
DANGEROUS

Dysentry is one of the worst forms of bowel complaint. It comes on so suddenly, the pains in the bowels become intense, the discharges occur with great rapidity, and are very often accompanied by blood, and the action on the system so weakening that its termination often proves fatal.

When the bowels get loosened up in this way, and you wish to check the unnatural discharge without bringing on constipation, there is only one remedy to use, and that is Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry.

This remedy is not an experiment as it has been used in thousands of Canadian homes during the past 72 years.

Mrs. Albert Fearon, Bryant's Corner, N. B., writes: "I have used Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry for the past ten years, and I would not be without it in the house.

Last fall my little boy, three years old, took very bad with dysentery. After taking 3 or 4 doses of "Dr. Fowler's" he began to improve, and before he had used all the bottle he was entirely cured. I sincerely recommend it to all."

There are many cheap imitations of this sterling remedy on the market. Ask for Dr. Fowler's and see that you get the genuine when you ask for it. Price 35c. Put up only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

A PRAYER

This, by Louise Driscoll, in the New York Times, should be of local interest.

Lord God in Paradise
Look upon our sowing;
Bless the little gardens,
And the good grain growing.
Give us sun,
Give us rain;
Bless the orchards
And the grain.
Lord God in Paradise,
Please bless the beans and peas.
Give us corn full on the ear—
We will praise Thee, Lord for these.
Bless the blossom,
And the root;
Bless the seed
And the fruit.
Lord God in Paradise,
Over by brown field is seen;
Trembling and adventuring,
A miracle of green.
Send such grace
As you know;
To keep it safe
And make it grow.
Lord God in Paradise
For the wonder of the seed..
Wondering, we praise you while
We tell you of our need.
Look down from Paradise,
Look upon our sowing;
Bless the little gardens,
And the good green growing.
Give us sun,
Give us rain;
Bless the orchards
And the grain.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

He Won The Bet

But He Took a Big Risk.

By ETHEL HOLMES

Half a dozen youngsters made up a bunch of boys whose principal object was to do something odd. No sooner did one of them suggest anything out of the ordinary than one or more of the others offered to bet him that he wouldn't do it, and it must be confessed that the bet was usually taken.

Jim Wardlaw was the most venturesome of these young men, and it was not safe to propose any breakneck adventure and offer him good odds that he dared not perform it, for the more risky it was the surer he was to go into it.

"It's singular," said Jim Wardlow to several friends sitting around a table at their club, "what a love of danger there is in man. A war breaks out, and it seems as if every young fellow is wild to get himself killed. Who would suppose that men could be found to go up in the air in flying machines to fight other men in other flying machines?"

"I suppose," remarked one of the party, "that this same love of danger is what tempts men in a different sphere of life to break into other men's houses."

"I don't see any great danger in that," said Wardlaw. "The burglar is armed, and the other fellow is not."

Then followed an animated discussion as to the risks attending housebreaking, at the end of which Billy Nevins, a wealthy young bachelor, bet Wardlaw $100 that he would enter a dwelling house and carry away some article to prove that he had actually committed a burglary. Wardlaw was to name the house, but Nevins was to accept or reject the nomination as he saw fit. The burglar was to carry with him such tools as would enable him to effect an entrance.

The mere fact that a love for danger is inherent in man was proved by this absurd bet. They put the matter in writing, and every man would be ready in case Nevins was caught in the act to testify that it was not a bona fide robbery, but a gentlemen's agreement.

On the night appointed for the burglary the party met at Nevins' room and found him appropriately dressed for the proposed work. That is to say, he had tried to dress himself appropriately. He had on a suit of his cast off clothes on which he had rubbed ashes and soot from his fireplace and an old felt hat in which he had punched some holes. But it cannot be said with truth that he made a typical burglar. By inheritance he was a gentleman, and this fact stood out despite his disguise.

His burglarious appearance having been approved by the party, he and Wardlaw took the latter's motorcar and went to the scene of the proposed depredation, or, rather, to a corner near the house. Nevins got out, and Wardlaw rejoined the party who had remained in Nevins' rooms.

The house to be burglarized stood apart from other houses, giving the burglar access to several points of entrance. Nevins chose to remove a pane of glass, since he believed he could do so making only a minimum noise. He succeeded in making the removal and, putting in his arm, unlocked the window, raised it stealthily and passed through it into the kitchen.

So far so good. It was to be supposed that the dining room was near the kitchen, and if he could reach the former doubtless he could find a fork or spoon which he could take away with him to prove that he had won the bet. For it had been agreed that he must secure some article of silver or virtu not to be found in the kitchen.

Billy flashed an electric lamp he had with him and thereby made his way into the dining room. By the same light he found a sideboard. Opening a drawer, he came upon a few silver forks and spoons that had not been put away for the night. He selected a fork, and the moment he put his hand on it a thrill of pleasure shot through him at what he considered a sure prospect of getting safely away with it and winning his bet.

But suddenly another thrill of a different kind shot through him. The room in which he stood was instantaneously illuminated. He stood, not knowing what was to happen next, but fearing to be dropped by a bullet. Not a sound broke the stillness. There was something terrible in the uncertainty, and the uncertainty was of long duration. Billy neither saw nor heard any one for more than a minute by the watch. But he did not need a watch, for the thumping of his heart sufficed.

What was taking place near the button in the hall where the electric lights had been turned on? The door of the dining room by which Billy had entered stood ajar, and through the opening between the hinges a girl stood peering at the burglar. Careful as he had been he had made sufficient sound for her to hear since she was lying awake. She got out of bed, thrust her feet into a pair of slippers, put on a wrapper and stole downstairs. Hearing something stirring in the dining room, she went to the door and, perceiving that she could look into the room through the crack, took the precaution to determine whether or no any one was in the room. Had she suspected a burglar instead of the cat she would not have dared even to do this nor to switch on the lights.

The burglar stood facing her, and she had a good look at his face illuminated by four electric lights that hung over the dinner table.

The girl was as much surprised on seeing Billy as he was at being illuminated. Her first setback was at seeing a man instead of a cat, but it was immediately followed by seeing a face that she had seen once before and belonging to a man who had made an impression on her.

One evening a gentleman had been introduced to her at a ball. He had danced with her, and the memory of that dance had haunted her ever since. Her partner seemed to float on air instead of moving himself on a pair of legs. Besides, there was something about his personality that especially appealed to her. His features were cameo, his lips were exquisitely carved, his eyes were large and especially fitted for looking love.

And yet the features of this burglar, standing out clear in the voluminous light, were the same as those of the man who had floated her in voluptuous circles to entrancing music. Was he the same? She could not believe that he was, and yet there could not be two men in the world so near alike. Of one thing she was sure. The burglar was a gentleman. And as a gentleman how could he be a burglar?

While these things were passing through the girl's brain Billy was in an agony of suspense. She was not as long about it as has been required to tell it, but she was some time. All fear deserted her. She pushed open the door and stepped into the room. She said nothing for awhile, waiting to see if she would be recognized. If so, that would be proof that she had not been mistaken in the burglar's identity.

If Billy recognized her he showed no sign of recognition. As soon as he could recover his equanimity, he said:

"I am at your mercy. Speak the word, and I go to prison for a long term of years. I prefer that you would put a bullet into my heart."

If there had been any doubt in the girl's mind that the burglar was the man who had given her that entrancing dance, Billy's organ toned voice would have convinced her.

"You are not a burglar," she said. "Anyway, you are a gentleman."

"A gentleman!"

"Yes; you may be a gentleman who has gone to the bad, one of those men we sometimes read about in the papers as living a double life, but you were born and reared a gentleman all the same, and you can't hide your breeding in the disguise of a burglar."

Billy considered what course it would be best to take. Since he was not to pass for a housebreaker, perhaps it would be better for him to tell the true story. He did so, and the girl stood listening to it till he had finished. Then she said:

"All this is very plausible, but not convincing. It is just such a story as a man brought up as you have been and fallen into sin would invent to fool one catching him in the act. At any rate, I prefer that you shall tell it in court. I shall awaken my father, and he will call the police."

This was one of the dangers to be anticipated in this lark. Billy had considered being brought up for trial and the situation it would create among his friends and acquaintances, but he had supposed a confession that he was acting on a wager would forestall such an event. He had made his confession, and it was scouted. The situation was not pleasant to contemplate.

"I cannot believe," he said, "that a lady of delicacy, of that unreasoning sympathy born in woman, can bring upon me an exposure so unnecessary."

"A woman is capable of doing a duty as well as a man."

"I can prove my case if you will give me an opportunity. I will send to you tomorrow the man with whom I made the bet."

"A bird in the hand is worth two in the bush."

Evidently the girl did not propose to trust him. He was despairing of moving her when she surprised him by saying:

"You do not seem to remember me."

Billy scrutinized her.

There was a sound upstairs. "Go," she said, "and take the fork you have in your hand to prove that you have won the bet."

Footsteps were heard in the hall above. The girl switched off the lights. Billy made his way out by the same route he had come in. He soon found himself in the street making his way to his room, a wild gratitude and relief in his heart. Though it was near dawn, he found his pals, showed his trophy and was paid the wager.

The next afternoon an envelope and a small box were left at the door of the house that had been robbed, both addressed to Miss Blank. The envelope contained a hundred dollar bill, to which was pinned a bit of paper with the words, "For any charity you may elect." The box contained a silver fork.

Later when Billy Nevins met Miss Edith Kimball at a ball he remembered her perfectly and she confessed that she had known him when she saw him in her father's house in the small hours of the morning. Billy gave her another entrancing dance and another and another. Had she been older she would have considered him a fool for taking so frightful a risk as robbing a house on a bet. As it was it appealed to her youthful appreciation of recklessness. Whether it was Billy's talent as a dancer or a burglar, at any rate he won her and settled down. He now wonders how he could have put his head in a noose for a lark.

Keene Resident In A Runaway

Mr. Duncan McFarlane Had a Narrow Escape—Keene News

KEENE, Aug. 8.—Mr. Duncan Macfarlane had a miraculous escape on Tuesday while excavating for the new Toronto Bank. He hitched his team to a waggon, one of them being a colt, and very spirited, in some manner the team became unmanageable and ran away, coming in contact with a large wheel scraper on the side of the street, turning the scraper over and throwing Mr. Macfarlane from the waggon, made the turn into the yard at Mollison's blacksmith shop, breaking the leg of the colt completely off. Mr. Macfarlane luckily escaped without injury.

The enthusiasm shown in the recent gardening movement was not, by any means, confined to rural districts. Last spring, in the city of Chicago alone, 8,000 acres were plowed, and 200,000 home and vacant lot gardens were under cultivation. Garden meetings were attended by 69,500 persons and 265,000 pieces of garden literature were distributed free. If each plot grew $20.00 worth of foodstuffs, the total value would be $2,-000,000.

MUSIC IN THE HOME

THE CHURCH MUSIC OF SERVIA

Servian Churches do not use Organs. Unsuccessful Attempt by Greeks, Encouraged by Turks, to Overthrow Servian Musical Traditions. Musician Who Introduced Modern Musical Notation in Servia Killed in This War. Little Nation Clings to its Native Culture, which is of high Order.

It has been said that the Australian steam-roller has crushed everything in Servia excepting Servia's spirit, the spirit which made her a nation of rebels during more than four centuries of Turkish rule. This splendid spirit has left its impress on the Servian music, about which on this continent we hear very little.

The Servian church knows nothing of instrumental music, for in common with the rest of Eastern Christendom it regards the use of any machine in church as savouring of irreverence; so there are no organs. Their vocal music has for its basis the eight Byzantine Tones and sixteen Variations laid down by St. John Damascene. They never have sung, never will sing, German chorales, Genevan psalm tunes, French ecclesiastical melodies or Western Plainchant. But neither do they sing Russian or Greek church music. This is not because they have a unique system of worship which is just their own. They are loyal children of Eastern-Orthodox Christendom as are the Russians and Greeks, and their liturgy, like the Russian, is recited in Old Slavonic. Thus there is no 'Servian Use,' and no vernacular Liturgy yet their services are permeated with the Servian spirit. For Servian nationality in religious matters does not consist in their being self-consciously unlike certain other nations. It consists in their being like themselves. The authority for the following facts regarding the nature and development of the Servian church music is Francis Burgess who has written considerably on this subject in Musica Opinion. Mr. Burgess says: From the time of the Turkish occupation to the Crusade of Liberation in 1804 the church music tradition was guarded and even developed in the Servian monasteries. These monastic establishments were centres of national culture. In them the clergy were trained and one of the essential qualifications for the priesthood was that a man should sing well. But right up to the end of the eighteenth century there was a persistent effort made by the Greeks to overthrow the Servian musical tradition and to substitute the Greek "nasal-music" in its place. The Greeks were encouraged in this by the Turks, who also tried to introduce into Servia the Greek liturgical language without success. The Serbs would have none of it and the attempt came to an end in 1794 when the Patriarch of Carlovci, Stratimirovio set up the Servian theological seminary of Carlovci, and appointed a Servian, the Archimandrite Krstich to be the official teacher of church music.

The work of Krstich really marks an epoch in the history of Servian music. He not only drove out all the Greek corruptions from his school but collated such slight variations as existed in the Servian tradition, and reduced the whole to an ordinary system.

About the middle of the nineteenth century Kornelius Stankovic made an attempt to transcribe Servian music into modern musical notation. He succeeded only partially. It was Stephen Mokranjac, who died only during the present war, who reduced the Krstich traditions to writing in a manner that makes them understandable to the western mind. Mokranjac was really a great creative musician and some of the music sung in the larger churches is of his own composing. But he wrote out and harmonised the traditional church-melodies of his nation, mostly in four parts, and almost always with the melody in the treble part. The more involved compositions by Mokranjac himself it is understood, are being set to English words, as independent anthems.

It will interest those who follow the development of ecclesiastical music to observe that the present Servian plan of singing traditional (and originally unisonous) melodies in parts without instrumental accompaniment is exactly analagous to what has happened in Russia. I am informed that Russian church law still technically forbids harmonized singing, yet in practice it exists extensively. And much of the Russian music in actual use there consists of traditional melodies which formerly were unisonous but since have been harmonized. At this analogy, however, the similarity between Russian and Servia ceases. Those who are competent to judge such matters are of the opinion that the art of Servia is more closely allied with that of Western Europe—that with that of Russia. This is certainly true to architecture and possibly it may be equally true to music. In any case it is of the utmost importance that we should realize that Servia is by no means a country of barbarians. It has ideals other than those expressed by warlike deeds and in the gentler arts of peace it excels in a measure which hitherto has been entirely unrealized by most of us. It affords a supreme example of a little nation tenaciously clinging to its native culture against enormous odds.

Probably the most characteristic set of Servian traditional church melodies are those called Stikiria—psalms interspersed with antiphons—sung daily at the evening services in the Servian monasteries.

SINGING FOR RELAXATION

Some Music is an Antidote for the Daily Grind. Children Should be Encouraged to Sing Nursery Rhymes

The other Friday the writer went out to spend the week-end with a friend who was enjoying life in a suburban home. The next morning there were wafted in to the sitting room sounds that seemed at first like a high soprano doing Eckert's "Swiss Echo Song" and then more like a bass wrestling with "Asleep in the Deep." It proved to be our friend upstairs shaving to the self-performed accompaniment of "When We Came Up From Somerset." This man's singing of the care-free character it was while it indicated music of the type which is a satisfactory outlet for one's exuberance of spirits, was in reality a musical tonic to offset the wearing down process of the daily grind. It was that form of singing that permits one to take certain liberties instead of having to follow the grind of a strict routine. It appeals to anyone because it provides music as a relaxation, a boon to the most of us who are living strained hurried lives. Even if we are not right in the rush of the present day mode of living we are so limited on all sides and hampered by conventionalities.

We are in something like the position of certain soldiers at the time of the Spanish War. Some ice had come up for the sick soldiers. It was unloaded and stood in the sun melting for a considerable time, because there were no quarter master's blanks on which to make out a requisition for it. When the supply of ice had thus diminished by about half, some person of unusual daring defied the law, broke loose from all routine and hauled what was left to the Hospital. Such difficulties confront us frequently in every day life and music of this relaxative type, referred to defies the laws of strain and strict routine, just because it enforces relaxation.

In order that children may grow up with a wholesome, natural love of song of the beneficial character here referred to, it would seem that Martin Shaw's contention is right, viz.: "Nursery rhymes have not yet received the attention they deserve." Mr. Shaw says when the world was dawning, song arose naturally out of the circumstances and instances of life, and was not associated with the platform or concert agent. The rhymes which had their origin in history either authentic or legendary, are still apropos to-day and could serve a much greater purpose in the musical education of the young. Mothers would do well to teach the little folks "Three Blind Mice," "Little Jack Horner," "Here We Come Gathering Nuts in May," "London Bridge is Falling Down," "Ring a Ring a Roses," "Here We go Round the Mulberry Bush" and other such tunes.

Many a person of thirty-five remembers as a child of getting "fussed up" in his or her best clothes and going to an afternoon party which would not have been thought a real party if these songs and the games with which they were associated were not on the programme. It is to be regretted that these rhymes with musical settings have fallen into less frequent use than they were some years ago. They encourage the little folks to make music an expression of life, not an act.

A WEIGHTY EXCUSE.

The study of musical history some times seems to be just the record of one person's talent after another. Joachim, the great classical violinist, began his studies at the age of five, and at seven made a successful public appearance. Wieniawski, by the time he was eleven had been in Paris for three years and had won the first prize at the Paris Conservatoire. All Spain was astonished at the work of Albeniz as a young pianist of ten. But all the talent is not possessed by personages in far away countries, with foreign sounding names; nor is it always the case that talent is of a positive nature. A case of negative talent has been unearthed in our own province.

A young gentleman of some thirteen years was recently being advised by his parents to keep up his piano practice during the summer months. They outlined to him a half-dozen good and sound reasons why it was worth while, to which his music teacher added a few more, and then the dutiful father and mother topped it all off with some coaxing and some bribes.

But this youthful prodigy was ready for an argument. He brought out the fact that it was too hard work in the hot weather. He submitted that for the summer months his physical being should be relieved of the enormous strain of piano-practicing and to support his statement he fished out of his trousers pocket a crumpled clipping of newspaper bearing these words which he said were of the highest authority: Science has demonstrated that the aggregate used even in the simplest piece is almost incredible. The softest notes seem to require no exertion yet a lesser force was what led to the invention of the steam engine. It was the lifting of the kettle lid which showed Watt the power of steam, and it takes more power than that to sound a delicate note. This is easily proved by taking a handful of coppers and placing them one after another on a single key until it is pressed down, and then weigh the pile. The weight will represent the force expended in sounding the note lightly. For loud playing much greater exertion is required, calculations having shown that a force equal to six pounds is necessary at times on a single key.

The force needed to strike a chord is harder to estimate. But some scientists claim to have made a test of Chopin's last study in C minor which gave the result that the lightest playing made a pressure of two and one-half tons in the aggregate, while three tons were used in the heaviest playing. A summary of certain tests showed that an average hour in Chopin's music would require from twelve to eighty-four tons of force.

What would a person do with a son like that? If boys go around calculating such views as that, particularly lads of ability, goodness knows what may happen! It might lead to a tight embargo on summer practicing, or even spread to an all-year-round boycott, especially in Chopin music.

He Couldn't Raise Hand To His Head

Arthur Ward Suffered With Rheumatism For Fifteen Years

"Rheumatism had me in its clutches for fifteen years and there was never a day or an hour during that time I was free from pain until I got relief by taking Tanlac," said Arthur Ward of 1078 Dundas street, Toronto. Mr. Ward is by trade a stationary fireman. He has lived in Toronto for a number of years and is now employed by the Government.

"My shoulders and arms hurt me so bad," continued Mr. Ward, "that I couldn't raise my hands to put on my cap and coat, and my wife had to help me to dress and undress. I would come home at nights from my work simply suffering agony. My neck was so stiff I could hardly turn my head, and my leg throbbed and pained like a toothache. In fact, every muscle in my body seemed to be affected, and I would just toss and roll at nights in so much misery I couldn't sleep. I would start off to my work in the morning so crippled and stiff I could hardly move. The pain in my leg seemed to go close to the bone and at times I couldn't bear my weight on it at all. I tried everything in the way of medicines, and during the past three years have had four operations on my leg, but got little or no relief. I just can't describe my awful suffering and had just given up all hope of ever getting any better.

"My wife had been keeping up with the Tanlac testimonials, so one day she said: 'Arthur, I believe if you will try Tanlac it will help you.' "So, more to please her than anything else, I bought a bottle, and I can tell you frankly it is the finest thing I have ever taken, and two bottles have done me more good than everything else put together. Of course I'm still taking it, but my rheumatism is already so much better that I hardly notice it any more, and my general health is greatly improved. I'm never bothered any more with those awful pains through my body, all the stiffness has gone out of my arms, shoulders and legs, and while my work is hard I can stick to it all day and feel good when night comes. I'm feeling fine now, better than I have in years, so you see I have the best of reasons for praising Tanlac."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by Warne Drug Co. Ltd.

The deceased, who was a native of Ireland, spent the greater part of her long life in Essex County, Ontario, having removed to this place some four years ago. The funeral service was held at the home of Mr. Jas. Selkirk, on Saturday afternoon, prior to removing the remains to Alburna Cemetery, Essex County, where interment took place, on Monday, August 6th. Mr. and Mrs. Selkirk accompanied the remains to their final resting place, and will spend a fortnight among friends in that locality.

TO BELGIUM, CROWNED WITH THORNS.

Thou that a brave brief space didst keep the gate
Against the German, saving all the West
By the subjection of thy shielding breast
To the brute blows and utmost shames of Fate;
Thou that in bonds of iron dost expiate
Thy nobleness as crime Even thus oppressed,
Is not thy spirit mystically blest,
O little Belgium, marvellously great?
Thou that hast prized the soul above the flesh,
Dost thou not, starving, eat of angels' bread?
With every sunrise crucified afresh,
Has not this guerdon for all time sufficed—
That thou shouldst wear upon thy gard head
The awful honor of the Crown of Christ?

MINOR ACTIONS ALONG THE ENTIRE WEST FRONT ARE MENTIONED IN DESPATCHES

Germans Are Anxious to Learn the Conditions Behind British Lines Since Bad Weather Set In—Many Air Encounters As a Result.

GAS ATTACK IN BELGIUM

(By William Philip Simms.)

Paris, August 9.— The Canadians raided the enemy trenches west of Lens last night, inclining forward a little nearer in tightening their grasp on the approaches to the coal city.

The British let loose gas waves against the Germans along the sand dunes of the Belgian coast.

There were artillery duels and air fights elsewhere, so that with a starry night followed by a sunshiny day warfare along the entire front was given new vim.

The activity in the air and among the big guns of the artillery is especially marked.

The Germans are desperately trying to ascertain what changes have been made in the British front since the unspeakable weather began. Their aeroplanes take to the air in search of this information. British planes immediately go after them, and fights are numerous.

The enemy heavily shelled the British lines northwest of Loos during last night. The Ypres and Comines Canal region was also under heavy fire as was the Lombardty-Syde sector near the coast.

Artillery Duels On The French Front

Special to The Examiner:

PARIS, Aug. 9. — Artillery duels again raged in the Aisne sector of the French front during last night. The War Office to-day reported active artillery exchanges in the region of Patheon Ridge and Chevregny.

In the region of Eparges and north of Vaux les Palmiex, detachments cleaned up an enemy trench, inflicted losses on the Germans and returned to their own lines unhurt.

Every Confidence In King's Action

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Aug. 9.—Complete confidence was expressed to-day that with the inquiries in the House of Commons as to the assurance the Kaiser claimed King George gave him that England would keep out of the war, it will be found that His Majesty acted with all propriety. Unofficial statements to-day were that Prince Henry undoubtedly deliberately mis-stated the facts relating to his conferences with the King.

French Made Gains On Belgian Front

Special to the Examiner.

LONDON, Aug. 9.— New gains by the French forces to the north-west of Bixschoote on the Belgian front, were reported in the official statement forwarded by Field Marshal Haig to-day.

New Spy Trick By The Teutons

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—A London despatch to the Sun says:

The Germans in France have invented a new device which is automatically projected into the allied lines and grapples telegraph or telephone wires, establishing an electrical connection and enabling the Germans to tap passing messages regarding operations. Prisoners recently taken confirm stories previously told of how the German command obtained exact information of the hour set for attacks.

This new device probably is the most successful means of espionage invented by the Germans. Our soldiers in France have always been mystified by the ease with which the Germans identified new British regiments coming into the front line. When the newcomers arrived they were invariably greeted by placards erected over the trenches or by a hail from the enemy line calling them by name. This ability of the Germans to pick up the latest information undoubtedly came from the use of this hook-like arrangement thrown over our telegraph and telephone wires.

If girl is unable to secure a man's wages in an office she might succeed in getting them by marrying him.

Kaiser Calls Big Conference To Fix Empire's Policies

Special to The Examiner.

Amsterdam, August 9. — One of the most important conferences in months has been called by the Kaiser at grand headquarters. Chancellor Michaelis has left Berlin for headquarters in response to a summons from the Kaiser, reports received here to-day stated.

Participating in the conference will be all the military, governmental and diplomatic leaders of the German Empire.

In view of the recent changes in the Cabinet, it is believed the entire military and foreign policies of the Empire are to be discussed and a definite programme outlined.

United States Will Call Men To Colours On 1st Of September

Special to the Examiner.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—Governors of the various States to-day received notice from Provost Marshal General Crowder, that the first one-third of the quota of 687,000 men drafted for service in the National Army, will be called to the colours September first and sent to training camps before September fifth. More than 200,000 will be called into service in the first increment, being the country's total military forces up to one million men.

Sir Hugh Graham's Home Dynamited

Special to The Examiner:

MONTREAL, Aug. 9.—The residence of Lord Athelstan (Hugh Graham), proprietor of the Montreal Star, was dynamited last night, windows being blown out and other parts of the house damaged, but nobody hurt so far as was ascertained. Perpetrators unknown.

It was Lord Athelstan's summer residence at Cartiersville, that was dynamited. He was in the place at the time, but neither he nor any member of his household was hurt.

Odessa The Objective Of The German Advance

LONDON, August 9.—An Odessa special of the fifth says precautionary measures have been taken here against attacks by German aeroplanes. The belief gains that Odessa will become the main objective of the German advance. The harvest is now being reaped on the fertile plains of Southern Russia, and the enemy will undoubtedly make an effort to secure it before it can be resumed. It is anticipated that Bessarabia will soon become the principal theatre of military operations as the enemy presses forward south-easterly in the direction towards Odessa.

Plan To Standardize Aircraft Metal Parts

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—An international committee, formed to standardize aircraft metal parts, with a view of finding production on a large scale, held its first meeting here today, with representatives of England, France, Italy, Canada and the United States present. As an example of the kind of work the committee will have to do, it was pointed out that the average aeroplane has thousands of metal parts, one item alone being 348 turnbuckles. Heretofore these have been made in innumerable sizes and an effort will be made to reduce these to as few standard shapes and sizes as practicable to fit all aeroplanes.

A WORD FROM PRIVATE JEFFREY

POLITICAL LEADERS IN CONFERENCE WITH GOVERNOR-GENERAL

Significant Meeting Held at Rideau Hall Ostensibly to Discuss Present National Drift—Kord Shaughnessy Present

LAURIER'S MESSAGE TO WEST

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, August 9.—Sir Robert Borden, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Lord Shaughnessy, Sir Lomer Gouin and Sir Clifford Sifton, were all summoned to a special conference with the Governor-General in Rideau Hall today, and, while nothing official is given out, it is understood that the ominous complexity of the present political situation brought about this conference.

It is thought certain here now that union government scheme is all off, following the Western Liberals' practical endorsation of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, with his leadership, if not his policy of referendum. That being the case cabinet reconstruction from within the Conservative party is inevitable, and election at once strongly probable.

The men who conferred with the Duke of Devonshire this morning were leaders of conscriptionist and anti-conscriptionist elements in both parties. Their meeting at His Excellency's invitation is regarded as highly significant.

Laurier this morning wired the Winnipeg Convention his hearty endorsation of their win-the-war resolution. Dr. Michael Clark, Western Liberal conscriptionist, who was given such a cool reception at the convention, has returned here, but refuses to talk about that historic gathering.

Strike Threatened By Telegraphers

TORONTO, Aug. 9.—An uneasy situation is developing among the operators and linemen in the employ of the Great North-western Telegraph Company owing to the failure of the men's committee to make any satisfor higher wages and a revised workfactory progress in the negotiations ing scale with the management of the company. The committee, under the chairmanship of C. F. Malette, has been in Toronto since June 27th, and in that time has only been granted two conferences by the management, at both of which the company refused to consider the demands of the men.

Science Called To Rescue Oldest Hall In The World

London, August 9.—Men wearing gas masks attacked the wood worm estobium tesselatum, which has been eating the woodwork of Westminster Hall for four centuries. They used a spray 50 per cent. tetrachlorethane, a perfect but dangerous insecticide. The larvae eat only oak. Science has been called to rescue one of the oldest halls in the world. The expert is Prof. Maxwell Lefroy, inventor of the fly spray announced a year ago.

Store Window Broken

Sunday evening last some miscreant threw a large stone and broke the valuable new plate-glass side window of Mr. C. B. Routley's new store, George street. The damage done makes an unsightly break in this expensive new plate and is aggravated by the fact that Mr. Routley had just became nicely settled after getting his new store and stock in good order. No clue as to the guilty party has yet been proved although the police are on the alert for some trace of the offender.

Feeding the Go-Aways

Messrs. G. J. Jopling & Son's large motor-driven service express, left the rear entrance of their meat store early this morning, packed with supplies bound for the lakes. It carried meat orders for different points on Stoney Lake, Burleigh, Buckhorn, etc., consisting of legs and loins of lamb, pork, roasts, and other choice cuts for the tables of cottagers and the summer resorts.

NORWOOD OFFICER REPORTED MISSING

Montreal, Aug. 9. — Word has been received here that Captain H. O. Wilkins, of Norwood, Ont., a member of the Royal Flying Corps, is missing since July 28. He graduated from the Royal Military College at Kingston just before the outbreak of the war. He was wounded at St. Julien, then he served in Egypt and a few months ago he joined the air corps.

Peterboro' Men Ready To Help Harvest Crops

Mr. G. A. Gillespie Has Growing List of Citizens Who Have Volunteered For Thirty Days' Work on Farms

LOCAL NEED IS MET

If the crops in this county are not harvested the responsibility will not rest with the citizens of Peterboro. Their response to the call of Food Controller Hanna has been generous and spontaneous. Mr. George A. Gillespie, M.P.P., who has assumed the duty of tabulating the list of volunteer "Soldiers of the Soil," has a contingent that is ready to move at once. It greatly exceeds the number of applications for help received from farmers, and apparently the serious phase of the local requirements has been overcome.

It remains now for the farmers to avail themselves of the supply of labor that is offered for the next thirty days. They should lose no time in communicating with Mr. Gillespie, who has men willing to undertake farm work for wages ranging from $2 to $4 a day. Many of the volunteers are undoubtedly inexperienced agriculturists but they are actuated by a spirit that should offset their deficiencies. Another factor in their favor is their adaptability, which may be well employed in the harvest fields.

It is likely that Peterboro men will be called to other parts of the province. They have pledged their readiness to go, and should they be needed they will receive free transportation to and from the places allotted to them.

Signed Agreement.

The list in Mr. Gillespie's hands is given below. Each man signed the following agreement:

I agree to serve in the harvesting of crops for a period of thirty days as an aid in winning the war. I will expect to receive ..... a day with board and transportation.

ELEVEN PERSONS DROWNED IN LAKE ONTARIO

Were Crossing From Oswego to Kingston When the Boat Foundered—Nearly All of the Victims of the Accident Belonged to Belleville

ONLY TWO SURVIVORS

KINGSTON, Aug. 9. — Yesterday morning eleven persons were drowned in Lake Ontario by the foundering of the coal schooner George A. Marsh, of Belleville, and a child died from exposure The boat was coming from Oswego to Kingston when a heavy gale set in, and about 5 o'clock the craft went down. The lighthouse-keeper at Simcoe Island reported the disaster, but no details could be learned until this afternoon. The lost are: Captain Smith, his wife and five children; William Watkins, mate; Geo. Cousins, deckhand; Mr. and Mrs. McClennan and one child. The child of Mr. McClennan died of exposure in a small boat. The survivors are Mr. McClennan, jr., and William Smith, aged 10, son of the captain.

Hugh McCartney and Benj. Wemp, Amherst Island, fishermen, went out this forenoon to lift nets when they met the survivors coming to land in a small boat. McClennan was holding in his arms the dead form of a little child. They landed at Bath, and later left for Belleville, where nearly all those lost had lived. They reported a very heavy sea and squally winds during the voyage. It blew 75 miles an hour, a remarkable record for an August night. The schooner had coal for Rockwood Hospital. She foundered between Nine-mile point and Pigeon Island. Four of the schooner's occupants took to a boat, but one was lost overboard. Few details are available here, the chief facts being obtained at Bath over the telephone.

Peterboro' Students Were Successful

The Peterboro results of the examination for honor junior matriculation are given below. The standing obtained in each subject is indicated after a candidate's name: I., indicates first class honors; II., second class honors, and III. third class honors, respectively.

The statement of standing of all candidates will be mailed in the course of a few days to the principals or the inspectors. In the case of those who wrote at the University of Toronto their statements will be sent to the registrar of that institution.

Candidates should apply to these parties and not to the Department of Education for further information. The marks obtained by scholarship candidates have been reported direct to the universities concerned. Scholarship candidates will be informed of their standing by the Registrars of these universities.

C.P.R. NOT RESPONSIBLE FOR MAN'S DEATH

LINDSAY, Aug. 9.—A verdict of accidental death was recorded by the coroner's jury, which inquired into the cause of the death of Wm. Ross, C.P.R. car checker, Port McNicholl, who was fatally injured by falling from a C.P.R. train near Beal's tannery, on Saturday, Aug. 4th.

The verdict follows:

"The deceased William Ross came to his death on Saturday, August 4th, by falling off a C.P.R. train, while under the influence of liquor. The C.P.R. trainmen are not responsible for injury to the deceased."

Conductor Bott, of the Port McNicoll train, testified that he had ordered deceased off the coach platform into the coach, as he appeared to be incapable of looking after his own safety.

Mr. R. M. Miller, Peterborough, testified that he noticed Conductor Bott that Ross was missing from the train, which was backed up about half a mile, where deceased was found.

Mr. Fred Morrow of Peterborough, testified as to having seen a large bottle of liquor near the deceased when his body was found.

Mr. Bert Bate, of Lindsay, testified that he saw a large bottle on the deceased, who was in a staggering condition on the train.

FIGHTING TO SAVE HIMSELF

Philadelphia Inquirer:—"The Kaiser is fighting to save himself and his precious spawn of savagery, the Crown Prince, from political destruction, and as long as he persists in throttling Germany the war must go on, for until he and his advisers are rendered powerless there can be no safety either for democracy or for the United States."

WESTERN LIBERALS STAND FOR CONTRIBUTIONS OF MEN AND ALL RESOURCES FOR WAR

Resolution Passed by Overwhelming Majority Calls For a Thorough Organization of the Nation —Evidently Not in Favour of Compulsory Measure.

J. G. TURRIFF'S AMENDMENT

WINNIPEG, Aug. 9.—The win-the-war resolution was presented to the Liberal Convention last night by Dr. D. B. Neely, M.P., for Humbolt, in a masterly address.

His speech was the feature of the entire day's proceedings. He pictured the present serious national crisis in Canada and laid the blame for it at the door of the Borden government. Reviewing the period that had passed since the last extension of Parliament, he praised Sir Wilfrid Laurier for his patriotism in facilitating that first extension. It was impossible, however, for Liberals to approve of an extension now. That would be sanctioning the evil administration of the past three years, and especially of the past fifteen months. Premier Borden's sudden precipitation of conscription on May 18 was described as "nothing short of an insult to the Liberal members of Parliament." Union government had been rendered impossible. The position of those Western members who differed with Sir Wilfrid Laurier on the conscription issue was defended. "They did the only thing they could do," he said, and acted entirely on the strength of conscience."

"Whitewashing" of Rogers

Scathing reference was made to the "whitewashing" of Hon. Robert Rogers. "Was that an earnest endeavor of the Prime Minister to extend a cordial offer of union Government to Western Canada?" asked the speaker. The fact that no concrete proposals of such a Government were before the country to-day made it necessary for the Liberals to prepare to lay the evils of the Borden Administration before the people. Could not the fortunes of a union government be better left to Liberal leaders? We are not of the breed that takes up arms in defence of liberty only to lay them down before the victory is won."

Need Not Fear Liberals.

"You need have no fear of the sincerity of the prosecution of this war by the leaders of the Liberal party. The strength of that Liberal movement will depend largely upon a strong representation of Liberals from the West who will go to Ottawa to enforce the adoption of their progressive ideas. I have been in khaki since the middle of August, 1915, and was a visitor at the front trying to do my bit in helping the brave boys from Canada. As a disciple of the spirit of Canada first, I have no fear that Liberalism will fail in its duty in maintaining the strength of the men at the front. The resolution which I shall present to you may not cover everything you may desire but it does make positive the necessity of insuring the presence of Canada on the battle line when victory will have crowned the efforts of the allies."

Returned Soldier Seconds Motion.

Lieut. C. B. Reilly of Calgary, a returned soldier, seconded Dr. Neely's speech in a few words. He said that he had had the pleasure of crossing No Man's Land into the German trenches nd seeing the Hun throw up his hands and cry "kamerad." "It is Canada's duty to stay in this war until the whole German system is brought to its knees and is crying kamerad," he concluded.

Compulsion, if Necessary.

J. G. Turriff, M.P., of Assiniboia, followed with the suggestion that Dr. Neely's motion should receive the addition of the words "by compulsion if necessary." The speaker said that he wished the resolution to include the principle in order that all Liberals might be represented by it. Mr. Turriff made a strong defence of his position in the House against Sir Wilfrid Laurier and in favour of conscription. Reviewing his own record Mr. Turriff said that he had always followed his party in everything, had even placed party interests first. Now he stood absolutely true to his conscience and with a full appreciation of what it

THE RESOLUTION PASSED BY WESTERN LIB. CONVENTION

The Neely resolution passed by the Winnipeg Convention was in the following terms:

In this war for defence of democracy against military despotism, the conditions call for the putting forth by each allied belligerent of its full power as the only assurance of victory. In times of peril the entire resources of the country, moral and material, man-power and wealth, are justly disposable by the State for the preservation of its national liberties. The imperative duty of the people of Canada to-day in regard to the war is its continued and vigorous prosecution:

(1) By conferring with the British Government for the purpose of definitely ascertaining the scope and character of the services that can best be rendered by Canada in the conduct of the war.

(2) By conferring with the Brimpaired strength at the front, of our fighting forces, and the taking of all steps necessary to secure required reinforcements for this purpose.

(3) By organizing the productions of our other contributions to the war, such as food, munitions and other war necessities, upon lines of the greatest efficiency.

(4) By the complete extinction of profiteering in all business having to do with munitions and the necessaries of life, if necessary, by the nationalization of these industries, or by the adaptation of the British system of control of controlled establishments.

(5) By the recovery for the public treasury of undue profits obtained since the beginning of the war by the exploitation of the interests of the people for the present requirements of the State.

(6) By the application of a combined system of sharply graduated taxation upon incomes and excess profits which shall insure that every citizen shall bear his or her full share of the war burden, according to his or her means.

(7) By thoroughly organizing the nation and carrying out this programme by whatever means may be necessary for its accomplishment.

Looking Toward Autumn

The Turnbull Store Preparing For a Sweeping Unloading Sale of Summer Goods

Symptoms of an early Autumn are developing. Everyone who has visited the Turnbull store the past few days has been struck with the apparent preparation for a genuine unloading of all summer merchandise. The page announcement in to-day's Examiner conveys some idea of the magnitude of this sale, which starts to-morrow morning. Every paragraph in their advertisement is of unusual interest to shoppers. This store intends to become a fascinating place to buyers for the next few weeks. Many new and attractive features will be presented, such as will have an influence in effecting stirring activity, every hour of the sale. The store is cool and well ventilated, and under excellent management.

EIGHT THOUSAND ILL.

Syria and Palestine Ravaged by Disease.

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—Conditions in Syria and Palestine are declared to be the "worst possible" by a refugee who fled from there and by circuitous routes has just reached New York and reported to the American committee of Armenian and Syrian Relief. The committee's informant, whose name is withheld, said there were 8,000 cases of typhus in Beruit when he left, owing mainly to a lack of medicine and scarcity of doctors. The poorer classes have been wiped out by starvation, he said. In Lebanon he saw many villages and towns without a single inhabitant.

SERIAL STORY BEGINS TO-DAY

THURSDAY, AUG. 9, 1917

SLANG IN HIGH PLACES.

We are fighting, bleeding, dying, suffering and sacrificing to save our country and our liberties, so that we shall have a better country after the war. While we are doing this we mustn't deteriorate in anything or neglect any interest. We are fighting for liberty for a free country, and that implies a civilized, cultivated and improved population, a people better in every way, better educated, more refined, with higher ideals and a higher standard of culture and literature. We spend big sums on education, to produce a population that will be thus superior to the ignorant and illiterate, a population that in its literature and speech will betray a condition of refinement and education.

We haven't that now in spite of our good schools, our colleges, our universities. In many cases manner of speech, correct employment of language does not differentiate the man or woman, boy or girl who has had first rate educational advantages from the ignorant and unlettered with a minimum of learning.

The mass of our people—there are some golden exceptions—use sloppy English, chopped phrases and odious slang. For instance opening the Ottawa Journal-Press, the leading newspaper of the capital, one sees this sentence. "We do know if the government hadn't barred the book there would be a 'holler' because it hadn't."

Now, in all the lexicon of slang there is not a more disgusting corruption of English words, a more impudent indifference to correctness than the word "holler," a corruption of the hail word, "hallo" and the surprise that a self-respecting newspaper which poses as an authority at the seat of government, and is read by members of parliament, should mix such crude, verbal poison in its draughts from "the well of English undefiled" and exercise a corrupting influence upon the people who read it.

It may be that this may be accounted for by a reflex, corrupting influence from the political corruption of which the capital is the capital. We are apt to consider the senate, a respectable, even if deadly dull, centre of dignity and correct concession to the conventions. Yet we read in the official report of the Senate debates the following reply to an interrupter who was unduly insistent upon having some information:

Hon. Mr. Clofan "We"—

Hon. Mr. Pope: "Wait a minute; you always want things so damn quick."

These examples may not be considered as anything serious; and the very fact that they may be so considered and are so readily tolerated, is proof that popular language ideals are sadly debased. Slang and corrupt use of language are the argot of those of loose literary morals, closely allied to looseness of general morals; for loose speaking, employment of corrupt language forms, is intimately associated with loose thinking; loose thinking generates loose ideals and these in turn tend to generate loose living.

The resist beginnings of evil things is wise. If the Kaiser hadn't begun this war, Europe would not be to-day a shamble, and the whole world turned topsy turvey.

RECRUITING AND CONSCRIPTION.

Conscription is now the law of the land, but, like other laws, it does not gain universal respect, at least it rouses a spirit of anger and intolerance not in keeping with the spirit of the interests in which the law was passed. Conscription was passed to secure service of soldiers to fight our battles in France. This fighting is for the preservation of democracy. Democracy demands freedom of speech and opinion. However, the friends of conscription have no tolerance for the opinions of those who do not favour conscription, and this lack of tolerance finds expression in scenes of violence by pro-conscriptionists against those who have a contrary opinion on the subject.

Of course a great deal of allowance is to be made for the war spirit that is now highly aroused; but those who are not enthusiastic over conscription have some justification in the feeling that conscription was a premature and drastic way of obtaining a very desirable object, that with proper administration and action, might have been otherwise attained.

A return presented to parliament on Monday showed that there was some discrepancy between the arguments that helped get conscription through the House, and the facts. It was argued that voluntary recruiting was virtually dead, and the wastage of war at the front, the need of reinforcements, made conscription immediately necessary. Was voluntary recruiting virtually dead? During June and July, while conscription was under discussion, the official return of the government that was pushing conscription as a last resort, shows that there were 10,698 voluntary enlistments in Canada, and that the casualties of all kinds among Canadians at the front, were 7,894. That is, the voluntary enlistments exceeded in the two months the wastage by nearly 3,000—2,804. That is to say, with voluntary recruiting in that ratio continuing, there would have been an ample supply of reinforcements without resorting to conscription.

These facts seem to justify the opponents of conscription in claiming that conscription was an unnecessary measure in face of the results of voluntary recruiting, especially as the government had never given the voluntary system a fair chance. It is possible and probable that the threat of conscription gave voluntary recruiting a momentary fillip; but it is also possible, and more than probable, that if Sir Robert Borden and the government had taken the slightest official interest in voluntary recruiting, even one tenth of the official interest and energy in applying force to the manhood of Canada, we should long ago have compiled or quota—the 500,000 which Sir Robert Borden pledged Canada to supply.

From the beginning of the war to the now, virtually all the recruiting done was due to the voluntary spirit itself, stimulated and steered by private and patriotic organization, but unassisted as far as government organization, or effort, or even sympathy, were concerned. We have the authority of Sir Sam Hughes, ex-Minister of Militia, that Sir Robert Borden, in deference to the interests of the munition profiteers, requested him (Sir Sam.) "to go slow in recruiting."

It is true the government tried and applied the absurd post-card mobilization expedient, which was a dismal failure, as was the abortive Canadian Defence scheme, now officially abandoned, after thousands, if not hundreds of thousands, of dollars of unremunerative expense.

At length, when, perhaps, a rallying cry—another loyalty cry—was needed for a contemplated general election, conscription was suddenly and spectacularly announced in parliament by Sir Robert Borden on his return from his visit to England, under the wing of Hon. Robert Rogers, whose paternity of conscription, as a good political move, is shrewdly suspected.

Now we have conscription, with all its heart-burnings, political disturbance and possible hardships of party application. Conscription is fully justified and demanded if it is absolutely necessary to provide the reinforceemnts needed by our forces in France. If voluntary recruiting, under fair trial, under honest government guidance and efficient administration can furnish, as it has done, according to the government's own figures nine than enough volunteers—every one worth three forced fighters—then conscription is unnecessary.

But it has been enacted and it will have to be enforced. And it seems pertinent to inquire if its enforcement is to be entrusted to a government which has made so sorry a mess of general war administration, and especially of voluntary enlistment interests. Do we not need a new head for a new government that will make war-making a business and not a side-line to party aggrandisement.

Baronetcies and similar honours are bought with a price in England. Have we a higher standard of honour or "honours" in Canada?

The Borden Surrender To The Rogers Calamity

Sir Robert Borden's well-wishers throw up their hands in a gesture of despair at his latest surrender to the lowest influences in his own party.

At a critical time, when it was specially incumbent upon him to study to regain public confidence and to enlist the good-will of his political opponents, he has chosen to affront the moral sentiment of the country by pledging anew his fealty to Mr. Rogers. He had already scandalized the Dominion by choosing the Minister of Public Works, freshly branded by the Galt report, to sit with him in the Councils of the Empire, posing as a representative Canadian statesman. It was a mark of peculiar favour which made honest Conservatives wring their hands. If they were unsophisticated, they wondered what evil spell had been thrown over their leader by the Manitoba magician. The practical politicians behind the scenes could have enlightened them. As the man who holds the lever of the machine, as the great patronage-jobber and place-provider, the wire-pulling wizard and chancellor of the party exchequer, Mr. Rogers had become invaluable to an administration which attained office by the Rogers system. Apparently Sir Robert Borden has neither the will nor the power to refuse Mrs Rogers anything. The country has just had the spectacle of over seventy members of Parliament being terrorized into signing a testimonial to Mr. Rogers—one of the most melancholy incidents in the history of Parliament. Is is incredible that these men would have so compromised themselves if they had not been afraid of the withdrawal of patronage through loss of the Minister's favour.

If the Prime Minister had wished to subordinate everything to the public interest and to give the country a proof of his moral courage and independence in the midst of a political crisis which called for firm leadership, he should have made the second instalment of the Galt report the occasion for dismissing Mr. Rogers and restoring, to some extent, his own badly damaged prestige. Instead, he again singled out his discredited colleague for an extraordinary token of approval. By his appointment of a whitewashing tribunal and his immediate acceptance of its verdict he lept himself to an assault upon the integrity of Mr. Justice Galt, and upon the Judiciary of Manitoba. The McLeod-Tellier report, which attacks the Judge and defends the politician, more like a lawyer's plea than a judicial finding, cannot be the last word on the case. Fair play to Justice Galt demands that it be carried farther and higher. In undermining the Bench in order to prop up a politician of the antecedents and reputation of Mr. Rogers, the Prime Minister has greatly embarassed patriotic Canadians who hoped to see politics lifted to a higher plane in order to meet the exigencies of the war. He has deliberately put difficulties in the way of the "Win-the-war" movement.

SLACKERS IN THE WAR OFFICE.

London, August 9.—Answering Sir Kinloch Cooke in the House of Commons last night, the War Secretary had received no official information that persons avoiding military service in Canada and claiming conscientious objection to fighting would not be given employment in the civil service. The question was evidently prompted by the fact that conscientious objectors were discovered in the civil service here. Some were employed even in the War Office and departments contiguous.

STORE OPEN AT 9.30 a.m.

A record business in February led us to anticipate a Spring and Summer selling of unusual volume and we provided accordingly increasing stocks very largely. Then came the dreary days of March, April, May and June, instead of the sunshine. Business only remained normal, even with our unusually attractive merchandise. So to-day we face the question of finding immediate outlet for our enormous stock of seasonable merchandise bought since last February—some of it delivered only last week—as it is our policy to sell in season all seasonable merchandise. Remember this sale lasts only eight days. So come early and get best choice.

Thrift Will Win the War

Thrift means economy, and economy is largely a matter of "WHERE TO BUY."

Some people, some how, get more for their money than others. Their money isn't worth any more, but they make better use of it.

Strange? Not a bit. They simply know where to shop. We know them well and they know us.

That's why they're our customers.

If Economy is worth while, then no person can afford to ignore this event.

Those Who Purchased Honours Do Not Want To Disturb System

LONDON, Aug. 8.—Lord Zebonde's debate in the House of Lords yesterday evening on the sale of honours proves highly interesting, although no attempt was made to secure a vote. Lord Knutsford told how a stranger went to him when he was treasurer of a hospital and asked if he presented £25,000 to the hospital on the King's visit would he be as likely to get a title as if he gave the money to the party funds. Knutsford told him "no." The hospital did not get the subscription, but shortly afterward the person became a baronet.

Lord Curzon, who spoke for the Government, said nobody would defend the sale of honours. He believed abuses were few, but added: "If a man contribute to the party funds, will the doors of the temple of honour always be closed to him. "It is not necessarily a public or private dishonour to subscribe to party funds or to receive an honour in which the contribution to party funds may have played a part."

The Times to-day says the debate gave a real answer to the demand for reform. Men who have risen under the old system do not wish to disturb the machinery which has served them, and which they know how to manipulate. That is now the view of the public, which is alive to the scandal.

The Morning Post says, officers of State have got too much into their hands, and a clique of professional politicians are looking upon the Government as a means of livelihood for themselves and friends.

The Daily Telegraph remarks that the system of attack does unquestionably play an important part in the life of the parties. It is exposed, discredited and utterly at variance with the ideals of the present time, for which all men realise, public life must be greatly changed in spirit and practice.

The Daily News, which has always been bitter to Lloyd George since he superseded Asquith, asks what ground is there for believing that a Government which has no party support behind it, and is consequently much more urgently in need of political support than pecuniary and otherwise, will be blind to the considerations alleged to be all powerful with those who have much less reason to respect them.

Should We Have Supervised Bathing Facilities?

The Photographs on Exhibition in the Roy Show Cases Tell the Need

The most effective arguments that have yet been presented as to the necessity of bathing beaches in this city may be seen in the series of photographs taken by Mr. F. L. Roy of the bathing conditions in Peterborough, and which are now on exhibition at the Roy Studio.

One picture shows that a little boy or girl wishing to get into the water has to be dressed and undressed behind anything that is available. Others show the regular boys of the river, who use the lumber piles, etc., to dress and present conditions do not bother them much, but the young man and young woman of the town has either to dress for bathing at home, put on a waterproof and walk where they desire to swim or dress behind bushes or trees or any other barrier, from the public.

Altogether the series of photographs makes it very plain that supervised bathing beaches are needed in this city.

Goverment War Certificates a Splendid Investment

Every bank and money order post office in Canada offers an opportunity for war service. The National Service Board has mobilized them all as supporters for the financial line which is the home support of the fighting line. They carry War Savings Certificates. For $21.50 you can buy a certificate worth $25. Those to the value of $50 and $100 can be bought for $43 and $86 respectively. Every cerificate is registered in the name of the owner at Ottawa. It cannot be lost. You lend your money for a period of three years and secure interest at a rate of nearly 5½ per cent. You can have your money back at any time during the three year period with the interest during the time of investment. By buying these war bonds, you are being of direct war service. Money is essential to victory. You can help the man at the front, help your country and help yourself. Canada needs your dollars. Invest in War Savings Certificates. F-9.

Shell Holes Make Swimming Places Writes Pte. H. White

The following letter has been received by Mrs. Peter Simons, 311 Rubidge street, from her grandson, Pte. Harold White:—

France, July 1917

Dear Grandma,—I received Annie's welcome letter of June 2nd, and I am glad to hear all at home are well.

We have had some swell weather out here and it sure was hot for a few days; everyone was going around in their shirt sleeves, trying to keep cool. A few other lads and myself kept cool for a while. There were three large shell holes in a field, all connected together, so we had a swim and a good bath, and in no hurry to come out, and often we call around when we can, for another dook in the water. It is grand to have those shell holes around us, for the baths are quite a long way from us and we are experts at washing out our goods, but it is all in a soldier's life.

I have a pet in the little dog we picked up in a French village; he was running around and looked as if he had nothing to eat for weeks, so we fed him up till he got too fat, then we starved him for a couple of days, and now he is O.K. and won't leave us. You can't loose him, and he is a good fighter and does not "compren" French. He understands the Canucks—he has a bit of Bristol bull in him, and is "tray bon pour lo soldat." We name him after the big man—guess his name?

Well I see Lt.-Col. Johnston is back. He sure did make a good success of the 93rd boys and they are made of good stuff and they showed it out here. It is about time some more of the men around home would get some pep in them and fill the vacant gaps of the men who gave their lives for a good cause. It sure will be a happy day for all when the war is finished, but it stands to reason it won't unless we have sufficient men to maintain our present strength and continue our victorious offences.

Well I see by the Examiner "the good old home town paper," that the Hunter street bridge is to be replaced by a new one, and the Quaker Oats Company is to build again. Some class to "Greater Peterborough our Electric City." Eh, grandma. Sorry to hear Father Phelan was sick and I hope he is better again. He was good to us boys. Remember me to him and also our good Bishop O'Brien. How did the 1st of July picnic at "T.A.S." park come off? I hope to be at that picnic next 1st of July 1918, please God.

What kind of a time is Uncle Dan having at home. I am expecting a letter from him. There is a big Canadian mail just in so I expect a bunch of letters and papers, which I always get.

We are billeted at a pretty place at present, lots of water and a swell spring, nice cool drinking water, just 25 yards from camp (Oh you lovely water). Only thing we are in tents, three to a tent, so we made beds of church wire and pieces of timber from a ruined village. Our tent is like a sifter full of shrapnel holes. We no sooner get in bed and get nicely asleep when there is a flash and a crash and a whistling through the air above us, "What's that?" says my mate. "Oh it's only a fifteen inch giving Fritz his rations. Go to sleep says I, but we don't go to sleep. Just lay on our backs and listen to them as they roar and batter, first to the right of us, then to the left, and when they all get going their hardest we sure have some music. The favourite song is "Where do we go from here, boys." When they get through, we fall asleep when down comes the rain and we all get wet by the rain coming through our tents by way of the shrapnel holes. So we arise and block the holes with newspaper. After that we are in the land of dreams.

How is Jim's garden coming along? I see some grand lillies growing in the woods. I wish I could send you a bouquet, and pansies growing beside a hut. I am enclosing a couple.

Just think Grandma, I am here two years, would you think it? But I am not sorry. I only hope to see you all again when this awful war is over. I hope to come home again, but poor Pete will not.

Give my love to one and all. A big kiss to dear little Helen. I would love to see her. Lots of love to you, dear Grandma, from HAROLD

You can at least put your pride in your pocket when it is empty.

Soldier Killed in France, Remembered in Keene

The Coughlin Monumental Works, Peterborough, are lettering a monument for Mr. Patrick Bolan, of Keene which bears the inscription of his wife and son, although the son's body lies on the banks of the Somme, in France, where he was killed in battle on the 21st of October, 1916.

Scale of Wages Now Paid The Employees Of Street Railway

The scale of wages obtained by the Street Railway Men's Union in their recent application to the Hydro-Electric Commission is reported unofficially, as follows: First year men, 20 cents an hour for first month, and 22 cents for the balance of the year; second year, 24 cents; third year, 26 cents, and fourth year, 28 cents.

This is the third increase within a year, but the men state that the original wages were entirely too small, and that the advances during the past twelve months have not been commensurate with the leaping cost of living. Previous to last August the wages corresponding with those mentioned above were 16c, 17 1-2c, 18c, 19c and 20 cents.

This Spring the men received an increase that gave the new men 18 cents and fourth-year men 25 cents. While there is more or less satisfaction with the new wages, first and second-year men claim that they have to work about fourteen hours before they have earned a fair pay.

Previously the men obtained their uniforms free after having been employed one year, but now they have to pay one-half the cost of all their suits no matter how long they have served.

The men also state they were promised $10 "change" to work with, but that they have not yet received this.

WHO COUNSELS PEACE?

(By Robert Southey.)

Who counsels peace at this momentous hour
When God hath given deliverance to the opprest
And to the injured power?
Who counsels peace when vengeance like a flood
Rolls on, no longer now to be repressed:
When innocent blood
From the four corners of the world cries out
For justice upon one accursed head?

• • •

Woe, woe to all, both woe and endless shame
If this heroic land,
False to her feelings and unspotted fame,
Holds out the olive to the tyrant's hand.

No Prosecutions Without Consent Of Minister of Justice

Ottawa, Aug. 8.—An important and significant amendment to the Military Service Act was provided by Sir James Lougheed, leader of the Government in the Upper House. This amendment provides that there shall be no prosecution for any offence against any of the provisions of the Act without the consent and approval of the Attorney General. The Attorney-General is Hon. C. J. Doherty, Quebec's Irish-Catholic representative in the Cabinet.

There are those who venture the opinion that this amendment is designed to allay the clamour against the elimination of divinity students from the exemptions. Against no man more than the Minister of Justice has that clamour been directed, and now it is pointed out he will be able to say that there need be no fear since there can be no conviction for infringement of the Act by divinity students or anybody else without his approval.

Hon. Arthur Meighen always contended in the House that it was the intention of the government to divorce itself to the greatest possible extent from interference with the working of the Act. Much was to be left to the tribunals. Now it is apparent that the Minister of Justice is to have complete power in connection with that part of the Act without which it could not be workable at all. There is bound to be strong criticism of this amendment when the measure comes back to the commons.

TENER IS INDIGNANT.

Soldiers, Not Ball Players, Wanted in France.

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—"The proposal to send baseball players to France at the end of the season to entertain soldiers is the most absurd thing I ever heard of."

This is the way President John K. Tener of the National League, felt about it when told an offer had been made to finance such an expedition.

"The idea of sending a bunch of big huskies over there with their expenses all paid to perform for the benefit of men who are ready to sacrifice their lives for the country is exceedingly repugnant to me. I cannot understand what the man who made the offer could have been thinking of."

CARS BEING FITTED FOR FISH SHIPMENTS

Hon. W. J. Hanna Gratified Over Result of Toronto Experiment.

Ottawa, Aug. 8.—Hon. W. J. Hanna, Canadian Food Controller, expresses complete gratification at the success of the first step in the plans worked out under his auspices by the special fish committee. The refrigerator express car loaded with cod and haddock shipped from the Nova Scotia Coast, arrived in Toronto on Monday in splendid condition. The shipment weighed about 15,000 pounds. According to reports from the trade, the quality of the fish was extraordinarily fine and the refrigerator service the best that has reached Toronto. The car was unloaded and the consignments were all distributed by 9 o'clock the morning after arrival. Some wholesalers reported that by 11 a.m. they had sold out their supply and retailers also had a splendid business. One large store reported that they had sold out their supply of haddock before noon and had only a few pounds of cod left.

On Tuesday fresh cod and haddock retailed in Toronto at 10 cents a pound. Recently cod and haddock was sold at 12 cents a pound in Halifax. The success of this initial test has encouraged the fish committee of the Food Controllers' office in the development of their plans. Additional cars are being fitted up for this refrigerator express fish service. It is the determination of the Food Controller to make fresh fish plentiful throughout Canada. Cheap fresh fish will provide alternative to beef and bacon, which are the two meat items most needed for export to Great Britain and her allies.

"John," said Mrs. Jenkins, looking up from the evening paper, "you know how many dishes Kate has broken lately?" "Yes," said John, "what of it?" "Well," continued the lady, "there is something in the paper about steel plates. I don't know just what they are, but I should think they might be indestructible."—Liverpool Post.

AMERICA WANTS "THINKING ARMY" TO FIGHT KAISER

General Pershing Insists That Troops Be Well Disciplined, but Act Individually.

PARIS, August 9.—Major General Pershing, commander of the American expedition in France, told the Associated Press it was highly essential the men in America's conscript army be in excellent physical condition, well disciplined and capable of individual action. He added that army organization must be built from the bottom up, each man and officer devoting all his energies to the work. The General said:

"Our men must be in good physical condition, keeping their morals clean and thereby capable of meeting the trying conditions of modern warfare. The men must learn to obey promptly, implicitly and willingly, but not, necessarily, automatically.

"I object to the word 'automatic,' becausce we do not want a machine-made organization, but an army of thinking men. Men with individuality, men fully capable and ready to assume command of units, should their officers be killed or incapacitated, as sometimes happens in trench warfare.

"The men must be made to realize war is not sport or play, but serious work demanding the utmost energy and attention to insure success."

General Pershing likened army organization to a football team in which each man is trained to physical perfection under strict discipline, but is capable of brilliant individual action in a crisis. The General added: "We want our men trained the same way."

The General was optimistic and confident America's army would give an excellent account of itself and would come up to the expectations of the other Entente Allies despite the tremendous amount of work necessary before active American participation in trench warfare was possible.

NEW SHOE FACTORY FOR PETERBOROUGH.

B. F. Ackerman, on & Co., who, for twenty-five years have been manufacturing harness and saddlery in Peterborough, are one of the most progressive and widely known leather concerns in Canada. They are branching out into the shoe business, and intend to start at an early date the making of men's, boys' and youths' heavy and medium staples. It is understood they will market their output with the wholesale trade. Frank W. McKeen for the past two and a half years superintendent of Underniffs Limited, Barrie, has been appointed superintendent of the new Ackerman plant in Peterborough, and is looking after the installing of the necessary equipment. He will also have complete charge of the manufacturing end. The most modern shoe machinery on the market is being placed in position by the United Shoe Machinery Co., and it is expected that operations will start during the latter end of the month. Mr. McKeen is a thoroughly experienced shoemaker, and has judgment, insight and skill which, in every way, qualify him for his new post in Peterborough's newest industry.—The Shoe and Leather Journal.

Situation In The Metal Market

In its summary of the iron, steel, metal and machinery markets for the week ending August 7, Canadian Machinery and Manufacturing News, Toronto, makes the following observations:

There has been no material change in the iron and steel situation since last week, the market being a waiting one pending a definite announcement by the American Government with regard to prices. It is believed in some quarters that prices to private consumers will not be controlled, but, of course, nothing is known as to what action the Government is likely to take in this regard. The heat wave caused a considerable reduction in the output of both iron and steel, this, however, is always expected during July and August. Buying has been inactive due to the uncertainty with regard to prices and also on account of the summer dullness in the trade. Prices of steel products are unchanged, although a weaker tendency has developed in some lines. The pig iron situation is unchanged, prices of domestic irons being still withdrawn. Business is practically at a standstill as consumers are keeping out of the market for the present until the situation clears up. Coke prices are showing an easier tendency, but production has been considerably affected by the hot weather. There is some fear of a shortage both in coal and coke, and consumers are stocking up. The scrap market is dull and featureless with quotations unchanged. The non-ferrous metal markets are not as yet showing any marked activity, as consumers continue to hold off pending developments in regard to prices. Copper is a little firmer, due to shortage on account of the strikes.

MAY REGULATE NEWSPAPERS

Ontario May Check Liquor Advertising Under Dominion Legislation.

TORONTO, Aug. 8.—Mr. J. D. Flavelle, chairman of the Ontario License Board, stated the effect of the legislation introduced by Hon. Mr. Doherty at Ottawa, is that any Province with a prohibitory law in force may decide that liquor advertising in newspapers be discontinued, because advertising would come under the direct meaning of soliciting. Even before legislation of this character is passed, firms advertising may be prosecuted on the charge of soliciting, although it would be impossible to impose a penalty until the penalty is prescribed by legislation.

CALLED BY LAKEFIELD.

At a meeting of the Peterborough Presbytery, yesterday, the call from Lakefield for the Rev. P. L. Jull, B.A., was received, and Messrs. Young, Fairbairn and Dr. Smith were heard in support of the call, and it was sustained. It will now be dealt with by the Ottawa Presbytery on the third Tuesday of September, as Rev. Mr. Jull belongs there, and he will have to accept or decline it at that late. Among those present at the meeting were Revs. G. I. Craw, Peterborough; James Skene, Havelock; J. E. Smith, Lakefield; J. P. McInnis, Omemee; W. S. Mahon, of Pontypool; H. Brown, Warsaw, and W. L. H. Rowand, Peterborough.

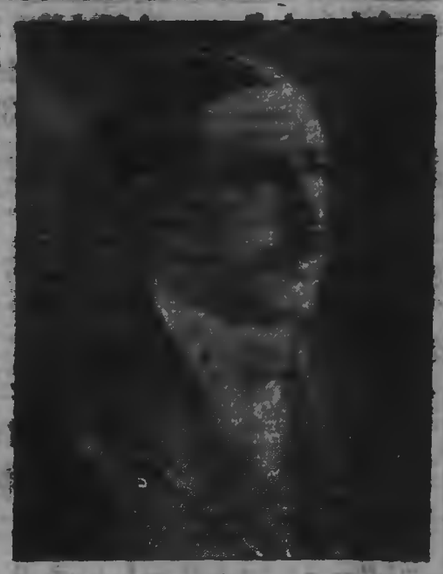
To Conserve Canada's Food



W. A. COOPER.

THE Canadian Pacific Railway Co. has played an important part in the interests of Canada in the world war in a great many ways, and has again been honored by the recent appointment of Mr W. A. Cooper, one of its prominent officials, to the Food Conservation Committee. Mr. Cooper has had considerable experience in dealing with foods, having been connected with the dining cars of the Canadian Pacific for twenty years, and his wide knowledge will be of much value to the Committee in the conservation of Canada's food stuffs. On this committee Mr. Cooper is associated with Judge Rose, Toronto; Mr. W. Wright, Toronto; and Miss Watson of the Guelph College. Mr. Cooper was born in 1871. After leaving school he commenced work with the Grand Trunk Railway as a junior clerk under the late William Wainwright, for whom later he acted as Private Secretary. Leaving that company in 1891 he joined the Canadian Pacific Railway service as Chief Clerk to the General Superintendent of the Eastern Division, and subsequently assumed the duties of Inspector of Sleeping and Dining Cars, from which he graduated in 1897 to Assistant General Superintendent, and in 1905 was appointed Superintendent. In 1910 Mr. Cooper was promoted to General Superintendent, and during the past four years has been Manager of the Dining, Sleeping, and Parlor Cars, operating also the station restaurants, and train news service. For the years 1908, 09, and 10, Mr. Cooper filled the position of President of the American Association of Dining Car Superintendents.

Apaches Rise; Trap Miners

FOREST FIRED BY INDIAN STRIKERS INSTIGATED BY I. W. W. AGITATORS.

GLOBE, Ariz., Aug 8.—A force of mounted rangers this morning is hurrying to the scene of an Apache Indian uprising in the Sierra Anchas mountains, fifty miles northwest of here, where nine white men, employes of the asbestos mines in that region, were reported to be surrounded by a mob of more than 100 striking Indians and Mexican miners, while a forest fire set by the Indians was sweeping the mountains.

First news of the trouble, which began yesterday morning when the Indians and Mexicans employed in the asbestos mine went on strike for higher pay, was received last night in a telephone message from a forest ranger who has ridden twenty-five miles to give the alarm.

The ranger reported that the Indians had set fire to the forests and had been prevented from burning the mine buildings only by prompt action of the guards. Another telephone message was received, saying that the nine white men in the camp had been driven into a dugout on the mountainside and were surrounded by the Indians and Mexicans. The men in the dugouts were said to be supplied with only a few rounds of ammunition and a small quantity of provisions, and it was feared that they would not be able to withstand the combined assault of the strikers and the forest fire.

Because of the lack of communication, all messages having to be carried 25 miles to a telephone, details of the uprising are not yet known, but reports indicated that two organisers of the Industrial Workers of the World, one a Mexican who spoke Apache, had been working among the men for the last week and had instigated the strike.

Impute China's Action To Entente Plotting

AMSTERDAM, Aug. 9. — Austro-Hungarian newspapers, according to a telegram from Vienna, view China's declaration of war as the work of the Entente, especially President Wilson. It is aimed as a blow at German and Austro-Hungarian business interests in China, to oust two troublesome trade competitors by furnishing the Chinese with a pretext not to pay their debts, rescind railway and mining concessions granted to Austrians and Germans, confiscate Austro-German capital invested in the country, seize their ships and intern their subjects.

EARLY WHEAT IN MANITOBA.

WINNIPEG, Aug. 7.—The first delivery of new wheat was received to-day by the Lake of the Woods Milling Company at Gretna, Man. The wheat graded number one northern, and yielded twenty-four bushels to the acre. This is the earliest date at which new wheat has been marketed in Manitoba. Cutting is in progress on Portage Plains, and on the Mennonite reserve in southern Manitoba.

With everything viewed nowadays from the standpoint of its patriotic value, the well-being of the woman at home is more than ever as essential as that of the man at the front. How can she write those cheery letters that the "boys" need if she is not feeling physically fit herself? And if the woman is on the "shady side of 40," she must still keep up, because from her stores of experience and wisdom she will be called upon to bring comfort to the younger women who are meeting the cruel war-horror which is robbing them of their life mates.

meant to break with one's party. He said that he had gone to Sir Wilfrid and urged him to recommend a thorough trial of voluntary enlistment, but to say that failing voluntary enlistment he would support the idea of compulsory service. Sir Wilfrid refused. "My Quebec friends wanted a referendum on conscription before expressing their support of it," said Mr. Turriff, "but that would have meant that every slacker between the Atlantic and the Pacific Oceans would have voted against the war."

In conclusion, the member for Assiniboia urged union Government, while expressing his knowledge that such a proposal was not popular with the convention. When he sat down Mr. Turriff received an ovation in recognition of his courageous expression of opinion.

F. H. Clarkson of Melville seconded the amendement.

BANK CLEARINGS FOR WEEK ENDING TO-DAY

The bank clearings, slightly lower this week than the same week last month, are more than double the same week two years ago, indicating a great increase in business activities in the city:

Correspondence under this heading, containing an invective attacks on individuals or violent or extreme statements, must to secure insertion, be signed with writer's real name, the owner of which thus assumes the responsibility.

Editor of The Examiner:

Objection has been justly made to the Examiner having published a letter from a soldier's wife, a Mrs. Rose Willshaw, who complains of the treatment awarded by Mrs. Fralic to her, Mrs. Willshaw's little six-year-old boy.

The letter was published inadvertently, is claimed to be, an altogether one-sided statement, and the Examiner is requested to publish in connection, the facts, which are that the youngster in question is big enough to make trouble. He is said to be irrepressible, and in the absence of his father, is so asserting his juvenile rights as to interfere with the rights of his neighbours. Fences to him are no barriers. Mrs. Fralic has a yard and Mrs. Fralic has an apple tree in her yard. Young six-year-old Master Willshaw believes in community of goods and asserts his right to play where the apple tree is, and, on these occasions, he asserts his claim, and, indifferent to the pains and aches under his belt, he goes for the green apples. Mrs. Fralic utterly denies punishing the youngster, in fact, though only six, he gets over the fence before Mrs. Fralic can get hold of him.

The good soldier's wife should try and manage this young adventurer while his father is doing valiently against the Germans in France who are laying claim to all the apples in all lands.

Yours truly,
JUSTICE.

Peterborough, Aug. 8th.

Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—Allow me space in your paper to contradict the statement in your paper of last night in regards to the Hargreaves boy. I saw the Hargreaves boy slap my two years old baby, and also hit him on the head with a stick several times, and I punished the Hargreaves boy for doing it. I consider the fine of ten dollars money well spent to have peace and quietness on the street where I live.

TWO ATHLETES PASS TEST FOR U. S. ARMY

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 8. — Ray Bates, third baseman, and W. Noyes, a young pitcher of the Philadelphia Americans, to-day notified Manager Mack that they would quit the team next Saturday and join the new national army. Both men were subject to draft and have passed the physical test, but decided to enlist rather than wait the call to the colours.

FEDS. GET FORTUNE FROM THE "TRUST"

National Commission Decides That Organized Ball Must Pay "Hush Money."

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—August Herrmann, John K. Tener and B. B. Johnson, constituting the National Commission, held an important meeting here to-day, when a tentative plan was discussed to arrange a settlement with the backers of the defunct Federal League.

According to the terms of the peace agreement, the Feds in Brooklyn, Newark, Pittsburg, Chicago and St. Louis voted to dissolve their circuit. Weeghman of Chicago and Ball of St. Louis obtained the Cubs and Browns, respectively. The Wards, who backed the Brookfeds, stepped down and out in return for $400,000 in twenty annual payments of $20,000 each. Gwinner of Pittsburg accepted $80,000 for his franchise and good will, while Sinclair of Newark turned over the lease of his ball park with the understanding that he would receive $10,000 annually for ten years. The payment of this money was held up by organized baseball, however, because of the big damage suit lodged by the Baltimore Feds, who had been left out in the cold. Several weeks ago this suit resulted in a finale so that the National Commission decided to-day that the time had arrived to make good various obligations and the major league will soon pay $40,000 to the Wards, $20,000 to Sinclair and $10,000 to Gwinner on account, each of the sixteen clubs being compelled to furnish about $4,500.

Tell a boy that he is no good and you will help him to be so.

It takes some men a long time to discover their unimportance.

YALE—FARQUHARSON.

On Thursday, August the second, at 5.30 p.m., at the home of the bride's parents on Inches Avenue, Miss Madge Farquharson, of this city, and Mr. Walter W. Yale, of Peterborough, were united in marriage. The ceremony was performed by the bride's brother, Rev. C. D. Farquharson., of St. George, assisted by the Rev. Dr. Farquharson of Toronto, and the Rev. Dr. Dickie of Chatham. Besides the members of the family, there were present at the wedding about fifteen guests, including Mrs. Denoon, of Peterborough, a sister of the groom; Mrs. Farquharson and Miss Jean Forbes, of Detroit, and Mrs. C. D. Farquharson of St. George, whose little daughter, Helen, acted as flower girl. The other guests were relatives of the bride from Tilbury East: Mr. and Mrs. Alex. Farquharson and Miss Ada, Mr. and Mrs. John Fletcher and Miss Bella Holmes. Supper was served at the close of the ceremony, followed by a happy hour of speech-making and congratulations until train time. Mr. and Mrs. Yale left on the 9.00 p.m. train for London, Cornwall and other points east. They will return to Peterborough to live, and will be at home to friends after the first of September.—Chatham Planet.

"Selfishness Is Treason And Worthy of Death"

"Playing Politics on the Edge of Hell" Was the Title of a Red Hot Editorial in Last Night's Montreal Star

Special to The Examiner:

MONTREAL, August 9. — It is thought here that a red-hot editorial in the Montreal Star last night entitled "Playing Politics on the Edge of Hell," may have incited the attempt to destroy the home of the Star's proprietor at Cartierville. The editorial says bluntly that the allies are not winning the war, and Canadians may yet have to fight the Huns on the western soil. The Star said: "The man who accepts the confidence of the people these days and betrays it for his selfish and party ends should be shot down by a firing squad. This is a time when selfishness is treason and worthy of death."

Early risers say that a big touring car with six men aboard drove up to the Athelstan House at 3:30 a.m. They wrenched the lock off the iron gates and went up to the house on foot.

Lord Athelstan to-day moved his family to his city house. Dominion police are now working on the case.

Gunner "Ned" Simmons Wounded After Three Years In Service

To-day's casualty list includes the name of Gunner Edward Simmons, who is reported admitted to the 22nd General Hospital at Camiers on July 29th, with a gun-shot wound in the right foot. The information was re-received by his father, Mr. Chas. Simmons, who was notified by the Records Office at Ottawa.

Gunner Simmons left Peterborough on the 21st of August, 1914, and consequently has been in khaki three years practically all of which were spent at the front. He has been through the thick of it with the 3rd artillery brigade, practically all of whose men have been killed or wounded. Among the first contingent from Peterborough, he is almost the last to appear in the casualty list which included Downey, McGill, Doris, Simmons, King, "Bob" Hay and others of the old 24th Field Battery of ante-bellum days. Gunner Simmons has been serving as a driver of artillery.

GERMAN PLOTS IN GREECE.

Activities of Propagandists Caused Martial Law to be Invoked.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8. —German propagandists and agents are active in the Greek provinces of Attica and Boetia. It was reports of plots and their open activities that necessitated the proclamation of martial law in those provinces, according to official dispatches received to-day from Athens. In addition to German influences, partisans of the deposed King Constantine and personal enemies of Premier Venizelos were said to be attempting to create difficulties for the new Government under King Alexander and Premier Venizelos.

Official dispatches received here today state that the Inter-Allied conference at Paris decided that the withdrawal of the Italian troops from northern Epirus, in Greece, should not be completed at present moment, although Janina was to be turned over to the Greeks. The Paris conference held that the Italian forces should retain temporarily and for military reasons the territory of Epirus along the Santi Quaranta road between Arinista, Hanklibaki, and Mesopetra. The conference decided also that the boundary of Albania should remain as it was fixed by the Conference of London in 1913.

Firemen Have Done Their Bit On Farms

Most of the firemen are taking regular turns on the farms. They spend the days they are allowed off by helping farmer friends, from whom they regularly obtain their supplies of butter and eggs. When the regular holidays arrived many of the men went to the country. Last week Fireman S. F. Raymond brought a load of hay to the city and had just sold it when Chief Howrd arrived on the market looking for a load. This week George Crouter has gone to the Hiawatha district to help Mr. Geo Watkins bring in his harvest. From all accounts the firemen haven't wasted any time joy riding in automobiles.

93rd Man Is Now Officially Listed Killed In Action

The slender hope that her husband had been taken prisoner or would be located in an hospital, was shattered this morning when Mrs. John Jenks, Brown street, Byersville, received a telegram announcing that he is now officially reported killed in action. Pte. Jenks, formerly a clerk in the C.G.E. company, enlisted in the 93rd Battalion and has been missing since the taking if Vimy Ridge on April 9th. He leaves a wife and one son aged five years. Private Jenks was born in Lindsay, but had spent practically all his life in Peterborough.

An Open Verdict In Murder Case

"We find that Carmen Lapello was found murdered by stab wounds on Salisbury avenhe, Humber Bay, in the early morning of July 26, 1917. We are unable to state who committed the infamous deed."

TORONTO, Aug. 9.—So ran last night the verdict of the jury inquiring into the death of the Italian found with 15 wounds in his body nearly three weeks ago on the outskirts of Mimico.

The inquest, resumed last night before Coroner Dr. Carmen Ricker, revealed all the remaining evidence there was to be submitted. Four witnesses were heard, but no light whatever was shed on the committing of the deed, or any further motive uncovered why the victim might have been done to death.

Minnie Lapello, the dead man's sister, declared that Lapello had worked for his father-in-law, and the money that he earned had been paid to his wife, and the husband got nothing. He had even pawned rings with Mr. Mulveney, said the witness. He made a good decent living out of the taxi business. She added that there was missing from the body his gold watch, his ring and a letter he had received a week previous to the murder from his wife. Boys on the taxi stand, she said, had read the letter, which she understood to have been a very affectionate epistle. She would know the watch and ring if she saw them, she said.

HIS MARRIAGE ANNULMENT

Lapello seemed to be worried over the annulment of his marriage, said Miss Lapello, but she knew of no enemies that were likely to do him harm. His wife had come to the brother's house three times to see her husband.

Arthur G. Bailey, a cattleman, of 120 Sheridan avenue, said that last winter Lapello had called him up and said that he wanted to see him on a personal matter. Witness said that he told Lapello to see him at his office. A week later Lapello repeated the request, and got the same answer. Bailey then told of the 'phone call to Lapello's wife. He had an idea what Lapello wanted to see him about, as he did not know the man at all. He had known the Mulveney family for years. When he told Mrs. Lapello of the 'phone call she had said that her husband had no right to call witness up. Lapello had made no statement to him about the "Black Hand" and had used no threats.

Another friend of the Mulveney family, Reginald Stephenson, also testified. Lapello seemed always anxious to go back and live with his wife. He had no idea why the divorce was obtained, he stated, unless it was that Lapello was not supporting the wife.

Western Liberals Enthusiastic In Support of Laurier

Special to The Examiner:

WINNIPEG, Man., Aug 9.—Amid scenes of indiscredible enthusiasm the Western Liberals concluded their Convention to-day by endorsing Sir Wilfrid Laurier's past and expressing a hope as to his future.

Incidentally, while greeting every mention of Laurier's name with unstinted applause, they also cheered to the echo the Premier of the West, who united in announcing that the "win-the-war" resolution passed last night means that absolutely every means will be taken to get Canadian reinforcements.

The following resolution was presented by Hon. A. G. Mackay, and carried with only about fifteen dissention:

"Resolved, that this convention place on record its admiration of the life and work of the greatest of all Canadians, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, and of his earnest endeavour to carry out his duty as he sees it in the interests of all Canada, respecting our part in the great world struggle. We express the hope that his long experience and matchless statesmanship may be utilized in uniting the people of Canada in this great crisis in the successful prosecution of the war and carrying out the programme of this convention."

This has been unanimously passed by the Resolutions Committee. "This resolution is not concluded in loose words of fulsome flattery," Mr. McKay pointed out. He added that he would be frank about the clause as to "carrying out his duties as he sees it."

THREE YEARS OF WAR

Three years into the past have gone,
And still the tide of war rolls on
Without abate, and sinks the brave
And noble 'neath its crimson wave;
Still foe meets foe, in deadly feud,
Till earth's fair fields with blood imbued
Cry out to Heaven, 'O Lord, how long
Must right, unaided, cope with wrong?

Three years, indelibly the time
Is traced, in rapine, ruin, crime,
Still ambushed 'neath the watery way
Prowls the dread submarine for prey,
Marauding monsters in the height,
Relentless wing their murderous flight,
The nations still the ghastly trade
Of war pursue with reeking blade.

Three years, with war's wild horrors fraught,
What awful havoc they have wrought,
Suffering and sadness mark their flight
And direful, devastating blight
From once bright homes the light has passed
And o'er them sorrow's shadow cast.
Ominous still and dark, appear
The prospects of the coming year.

But tho' cast down and chastened, we Shall never, never vanquished be,
For while with Him, we firm abide,
The Lord of hosts is on our side,
Viewless as air, to mortal sight,
As once on Dotham's mountain height,
With us, are hosts outnumbering far
The hordes that with our foemen are.

Forthwith our armies, if He goes
In vain the millions of our foes
Nor all war's menacing array
Can whelm us in dark dismay,
Even if the struggle be for long,
Our hearts still beat with courage strong,
Our patriot ardour will not slack
Nor from the fray our foot turn back.

Until oppression's lawless might
Is crushed and triumph's freedoms right,
For they the sword who causeless draw,
Must thereby perish, stands the law,
And yet these trivial pains of earth
Shall bring a glorious peace to birth,
When earth, with rightousness will be
O'erflown as waters of the sea.

But oft with heavy hearts we sigh
For the calm, happy days gone by,
Before that dark ill-fated hour,
When the proud Hun, athirst for power
Unleashed his blood hounds and unfurled
His pirate ensign to the world,
And our brave boys their pride to quell,
Left the dear land they loved so well.

And when the cruel war is o'er,
With sweet peace smiling as of yore
We'll welcome home with royal cheer
Then men their country holds so dear.

—Mrs. A. F. Calder.

Irishman To Raise Regiment Of Jews

LONDON, August 9. — The War Office has decided to organize a Jewish division or brigade, and the work will be undertaken by Lieut.-Col. J. H. Patterson, D.S.O., an Irishman. It has been estimated that there are 40,000 Jews in the British army, including 8,000 colonials. About 30,000 are on foreign service.

It is intended to employ the Jewish force in Palestine, and their religious convictions will be considered in every way. They will have their own cooks and bakers, and the dietary will be in conformity with Jewish ideals.

WAR INDUSTRIES BOARD TO END EXTORTION BY FIXING PRICES FOR ALL THE NECESSARY COMMODITIES

Programme is Announced With An Attack on "Unconscionable" Profits—Entente Nations Must Reciprocate —Guarantee For Manufacturers Here.

ALLIES TO SHARE IN BENEFITS OF SCHEME

WASHINGTON, D.C., Aug. 10.—Characterising as "extortion" the prices now charged for many commodities, and denouncing as "unconscionable" the profits made on the natural resources of the country, the newly appointed War Industries Board of the Council of National Defence announced its purpose to establish reasonable prices.

The beneficial effects of the work of the Board will not be restricted to the government, but will be extended to manufacturers whose existence depends upon their ability to purchase raw material at a price which will enable them to make a reasonable profit at a reasonable price to the public.

Prices similar to those paid by the United States will be fixed for munitions and supplies furnished by the manufacturers of this country to America's allies.

"Guns and munitions employed against our enemy," announced the Board, "are for our benefit as much when used by our allies as when used by our own men, and it is obviously unjust to require our allies when fighting our battle to pay our own people more than our own government prices for the materials necessary to carry on the war."

ALLIES MUST RECIPROCATE

The enforcement of the policy, however, will depend upon a reciprocal policy on the part of such nations, and will be limited to war materials in order to prevent foreign manufacturers from obtaining an unfair advantage over American manufacturers. The board pledges itself to take such steps as may be necessary to insure the result. The public not only will be indirectly benefitted by the regulation of the prices to be paid by the manufacturers, but the announcement of the board clearly indicates that, if necessary, it will undertake the regulation of prices to be charged to the public.

Talking over all of the functions of the War Munitions Board, the War Industries Board will exercise a general supervision over the activities of all of the boards of the Council of National Defence which deal in any way with such raw materials as are necessary to the government in the conduct of the war.

It was inevitable that the activities of the numerous committees of the various boards of the council frequently would overlap, and that the demands of such committees for raw materials often would conflict. Heretofore there has been no fixed means or authority by which the priority of such demands could be determined. The War Industries Board will constitute that authority.

The Federal Trade Commission is the authority by which the prices for materials must and will be fixed ultimately, but it is believed that it will be controlled by the prices determined by the War Industries Board to be reasonable.

TO DECIDE STEEL POLICY

One of the most important matters to be determined by this board and that upon which it is believed the board is now concentrating a large part of its attention is the determination of the policy to be adopted in the purchase of steel. Two courses are open, the one being the fixing of a price to be paid by all manufacturers alike, and the other the payment of cost plus a reasonable profit. Adoption of the former course would yield the large producer a much greater profit than would the adoption of the latter because of his ability to turn out his product at much less expense than the small producer. Payment of cost plus a reasonable profit would involve the payment of different prices for the same product, and would necessitate a great amount of work in investigation and computation, which would be unnecessary if a uniform price were asked.

Only Score Of Members Opposed Resolution

When the "Nays" Were Called at Convention a Few From Manitoba and British Columbia Stood Up—Oliver Was Given Enthusiastic Reception

WINNIPEG, August 9.—A standing vote was taken at the Liberal convention to decide on the leadership resolution, and when put to the delegates the majority for it was overwhelming.

When the "nays" were called about a score of delegates, mostly from Manitoba and British Columbia, stood up.

Arthur J. Lobb, member of the Manitoba Legislature for the Rockwood constituency, was the only one of the members of Parliament or Legislature present, to stand in opposition to the Laurier resolution.

Hon. Frank Oliver, who was enthusiastically received, remarked that the West had now declared for a united Canada, and everything that could be done to this end would be done by Sir Wilfrid. The great danger to Canada was the "Hun within the gates."

Sees United Canada.

All that the convention asked was that Canada unite in the great cause, and the duty of the Liberal party now was to take care of the "Hun within the gates," as well as the Hun without. He predicted a united and progressive Canada under the leadership of Sir Wilfrid. Never before did he support his leader with so strong a conviction and full heart as he did on the Conscription question.

Answer to Government.

Mr. Oliver said the Borden Government had hoped by the Conscription Bill to spread disunion in the Liberal party, not only in Ontario and Quebec, but in the West.

"That," he said, "was their hope, but this is their answer that Liberalism stands for unity."

Claimed Misrepresentation.

W. E. Knowles, who seconded the resolution, said: "Laurier was always the same, a great Liberal democrat under all conditions." He declared that "that great imperial statesman is traduced and vilified and misrepresented. The great fear he sees before him is not defeat, but that in the evening of his life he should see the Union of Canada in Jeopardy, and his own life-work undone."

Premier Brewster proposed three cheers for him, and there ensued a demonstration of remarkable enthusiasm.

Norris Backed It Up.

Premier Norris recalled that in the past two years he had advocated National Government. "If we have demanded it from our opponents, we should be willing to consider it in our ranks." Acid great enthusiasm, Mr. Norris declared "he absolutely subscribed to every word" of the resolution in praise of Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

"The last chance of a National Government lies in his leadership," he said, "Borden can ever be returned," he asserted, and the audience yelled "Never."

"With Laurier in power," he added, "we will be able to get a good business national Government."

Puts Laurier Before Borden.

"I also have been in favour of a national government," said Premier Martin, who followed, "but I would demand that seventy-five per cent. of the present Government go out before I would go in. (Loud applause.) We would better trust Sir Wilfrid Laurier in forming a national Government than Sir Robert Borden."

Mr. Martin accused the Government of being deliberately neglectful in recruiting in Quebec for political purposes and contended that "the genius of Government in this country is the pursuing of such a course as will keep the two great races united."

The convention applauded wildly when Martin declared that "I am confident that Sir Wilfrid will carry out to the very fullest possible extent the resolutions of this convention."

Win War At Any Cost.

Premier Brewster, who followed, declared the convention had demonstrated "the attitude of mind and determination of the Western Liberals to win this war at any cost." He said it made his blood tingle to think of any politicians who would for political purposes play race and creed issues during the war. "We're going through by all means, no matter what these things may be, to win this war and back up the boys at the front." Great applause broke out when Brewster said that "This convention has not been manipulated by any blinded party press."

Could Trust Laurier.

Cheers greeted Hon. A. L. Sifton of Alberta. Sir Wilfrid, he said, was a leader the people of Canada could trust.

The people expected that after the next election, Sir Wilfrid and those elected to support him would represent the concentrated essence of the common sense of the country and would carry on the war the way the people wanted it carried on and to a successful conclusion.

"I am not against a National Government," he said. "I do not think any National Government in which the people would have confidence could be formed previous to an election." He concluded by referring to the "Iniquitous Government we had for six years."

The convention was then adjourned until 8:30.

Grain Futures Showed Weakness

Cattle Market Was Slow and Prices Lower

Light offerings of cash wheat on the Winnipeg market again stiffened prices, particularly for the lower grade northerns. No's 2, 3 and 4 grades are quoted 1 1-2c to 2c higher in store, Fort William. No. 1 steady and unchanged. Cash oats, C. W.'s unchanged. The speculative markets were decidedly weak on the futures, Chicago September option going off 3c and the October option at Winnipeg going of 3 1-2c from yesterday's close. Plentiful rains have improved crop prospects. The passing of the food control bill at Washington also affected the grain markets.

Manitoba wheat—No. 1 Northern, $2.40; No. 2 Northern, $2.39 1-2; nominal, store, Fort William; No. 3, $2.36; No. 4, $2.27.

Manitoba oats—No. 2, 81c, track, bay ports.

American corn—Nominal, not quoted.

Ontario oats—No. 2 white, not quoted.

Ontario wheat—No. 2 winter, per car lots, $2.55 to $2.60; No. 3 winter, $2.53 to $2.58, according to freight outside; new crop, $2.25, nominal.

Peas—No. 2 nominal.

Buckwheat—Nominal.

Rye—No. 2, nominal.

Manitoba flour—First patents, in jute bags, $12.90; second patents, $12.40; strong bakers, $12.

Ontario flour—Winter, according to sample, $11.20; track, Toronto, prompt shipment.

Millfeed—Car lots, delivered Montreal, shorts, $45; bran, $36; feed flour per bag, $3.25; middlings $47 to $48.

Hay—Baled, track, Toronto, car lots, No. 2, $11.50 to $12; mixed, $9 to $11; straw $9.

CATTLE MARKET.

Union Stock Yards—Receipts, 37 cars, with 342 cattle, 51 calves, 1,106 hogs, and 342 sheep and lambs.

Trade was slow and the market 25c to 30c lower on good butchers, and other grades in proportion, except for choice heavy steers for export, though there were none of the latter on the market to-day. There was but a light run, and everything fairly well cleaned up at the lower prices. Good butcher cows were steady. Bulls easy.

Stockers trade quiet, and only the choicest grades wanted. No demand for the light common steers.

Calves easier.

Lambs 50c to 75c lower.

Hogs steady at $17 fed.

Prices prevailed as follows:

Be Careful What You Wash Your Hair With

Don't use prepared shampoos or anything else, that contains too much alkali, for this is very injurious, as it dries the scalp and makes the hair brittle.

The best thing to use is just plain mulsified cocoanut oil, for it is pure and entirely greaseless. It's very cheap, and beats anything else all to pieces. You can get this at any drug store, and a few ounces will last the whole family for months.

Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in, about a teaspoonful is all that is required. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, cleanses thoroughly, and rinses out easily. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and is soft, fresh looking, bright, fluffy, wavy, and easy to handle. Besides, it loosens and takes out every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff.

NEEDLE-THREADING HINTS

Are you a busy seamstress lady? Do you have to hustle unmercifully when you sew, trying to get in a vast amount of work between breakfast and time to get lunch? Then you will appreciate this hint for the busy sewer. Take your thread which you are working with and on the spool thread a package of the right size needles. Then as you need a needleful of thread slide one needle along, break off the right length of thread and go ahead. You can save a lot of time and are not nearly so apt to lose needle as if you threaded them first and stuck them in a cushion. You might be able to get some one with good eyesight to do this for you before you start to sew. Remember, too, that a good way to thread either sewing of machine needles is to hold the eye of the needle against a background of white.

Another needle-threading hint which you might try is to stick the needle through eyelets of heavy white paper before you thread it. The paper not only throws the eye into relief, but acts as a gauge for the thread. This is a good trick to know when you are trying to thread an unusually coarse thread through a fine needle.

Marrying one's ideal husband or wife is to take a mean advantage.

"MOUNTAIN MADNESS"

By Anna Alice Chapin

CHAPTER II.

Five O'clock in the Hills.

We fair fine ladies, who park out our lives
From common sheep-paths, cannot help the crows
From flying over,—we're as natural still
As Blowsalinda. Drape us perfectly
In Lyons velvet,—we are not, for that,
Lay-figures; look you, we have hearts within,
Warm, live, improvident, indecent hearts. . . .
—E. B. Browning.

At that very moment her daughter Enid was resting—during a long ride with her fiance, Jack Radnor,—on one of the mountains of which Judge Denby talked.

They had dismounted and climbed to a tiny peak from which it seemed as though the whole world were visible.

Jack, on the rock above her, stared down at her bright head as she sat perched a little below him. He could not see her face so he could know nothing of the varied current of emotion that was passing over it in rippies of expression. She looked as usual: Enid, exquisitely groomed, lovely of figure, a perfect, dainty thing, crowned with living gold, that made him very hungry with longing as he looked.

"If she guessed what I am feeling now," he thought, "she would never speak to me again!"

And, if he could but have known it, Enid was thinking very much the same thing!

Slim and straight as a little white birch tree, Enid carried with her an elasticity, a delicacy, and a freshness that was almost a fragrance. "What a lovely young girl!" people always said, and, sometimes unconsciously, the emphasis was apt to be upon the young. She was golden-fair of hair, and her eyes were golden, too, a strange and exquisite colour-combination, very startling indeed when first come upon. Her fair skin was just the creamy side of pure white; there was nothing of the skim-milk variety about it, yet it was of lily-like purity. And her mouth was a bright though very light scarlet, as were the swift wonderful flushes that came and went in her cheeks and chin.—Enid's coral-tinted chin was the despair of her rivals and her adorers—for different reasons!

Her dearest friend, Alice Baker, always said that Enid had picked out Jack Radnor because his colouring toned in with hers so splendidly. He was a study in browns, just as she was a symphony in the tone gamut of ivory and gold. His hair and his eyes and his clean, clear skin, were all brown.

"Such a pity!" Alice had once moaned. "They're lovely as a picture, but eugenically quite impossible. They couldn't have a blue-eyed baby, and blue-eyed ones are far the prettiest!"

Enid herself did not quite know why she had chosen Jack from the half dozen eligible young men on her string. Of course, any one of twenty women she knew could have given her twenty perfectly good reasons, which she would doubtless have disearded with disdain. There were quite a number of "points" to be accredited to Jack, even by a disinterested observer, and there were practically no disinterested observers among the women. He was very decidedly good to look at. He was an excellent all-round sport; he had a brain, and business ability. He had a sense of humour, and he could dance, and he was just as polite to old ladies as to young ones at dinners,—that is to say, he made them feel that he wasn't being polite at all. He was considered a typical man's man,—the kind always most popular with women—and had the utter simplicity which nothing but breeding has ever been known to give.

These things, however, as have been hinted, were largely discounted by Enid. In fact, they annoyed her by their obviousness, and puzzled her as to why, in spite of them, she had selected to bestow upon him her favour. She felt that not one nor all of such qualities could have won her without something much bigger than they behind them. This something she called "Primitive Force," the "Eternal Masculine," the "Elemental Male," and so on. But there was nothing aggressively primitive about Jack Radnor. Of course, he was a nice, strong, manly, well set-up chap, but he was very far indeed from being a Cave Man. If he ever had any desire to knock her down and carry her off to a lair, he concealed it with exasperating success. Enid herself was quite sure that it would have horrified him to dream that speculation of such a nature had ever entered her debutante head. What then, was the answer?

The answer, though she was destined to travel a long road before finding it, was in Enid herself.

She had completely convinced Jack Radnor that she was the Perfectly Proper Young Person, and, though he loved her to distraction, he would have choked rather than faintly shock her maidenly reserve, and well-trained sensibilities by even an intonation that was too unrestrained.

"Jack," said Enid abruptly, "what interests you most on earth?"

"You," said Jack, promptly, truthfully, but without due fervor.

Enid flushed angrily.

"You don't have to say things like that!" she snapped.

"All right," her fiance returned, unruffled, "then I won't. May I smoke?"

"I wish you would smoke just once without asking permission!"

He lighted a cigarette without answer, and, as she was not looking, bent forward and very lightly touched her hair. It thrilled him through and through, but when she turned upon him sharply he was smoking unconcernedly, with quite a detached expression in his brown eyes.

Enid drew a deep breath of exasperation.

"You are so trying!" she complained. "You always do the proper thing in the proper way—and—"

"So do you, bless you!" he said, smiling indulgently. "Don't fuss, Enid! Isn't it too good a day to waste on a quarrel?"

Enid scowled, but stared out over the valleys, silver-threaded, that lay at their feet.

"It's a good day, Jack!" She stopped, and did not seem to know how to go on. Which of us have not felt the urge of that which we cannot even define, much less express? After a minute, Jack put his hand upon her shoulder, very gently. It was a mute question and encouragement.—and a promise, too. If she had been old enough to read more than printed matter. But perversity made Enid shrink from the tentative caress a trifle petulantly, and Jack, with a slight tightening of his lips, leaned back, thinking: "There's no use! They've made a waxen image of her—the darling. When we're married, shall I ever be able to turn her into a real honest-to-God woman?"

And Enid thought: "If he had been a real man he would have kissed me anyway!"

Sometime, some Titan god engaged in the formation of the universe, spilled a great giant arm load of his properties upon that area of land which was one day to be called "Virginia." Enough of caverns and mountains and glades and gorges and boiling springs growling of hell and sunlit peaks singing of heaven, and fertile valleys, and sweet gardens, and lonely waste spaces, were flung upon Virginia to fit out a dozen ordinary states.

And, given some of nature's most mad and gorgeous stage-settings, man went to work to build bizarre monuments to what we are pleased to call civilization. Here in a small section men and women live the superlatively social existence; yet here in the wild area all around men and women touch depths of human and untamed experience hard to credit by those with a restricted education. Perhaps nowhere in the world do super-cultivation and super-savagery come so close together. The adventurous soul could lunch among millionaires and dine among outlaws, without the slightest difficulty.

Only there are no adventurous souls, so they don't find that out. Or if they do, they keep it to themselves, as one would keep the secret of a new and highly valuable patent.

"Jack," Enid gave a little gasp, "what does it all mean—that?"

She pointed to the great gleaming gold and green stretch between them and the purple mountain range beyond.

"What is it?" she added, vaguely, and ineptly, as she realized, "what is it to you?"

"A background for you, dear."

He was quite sincere. And he was not lacking in depth nor subtlety either. Enid Forsythe was all that he loved and wanted on this earth and the green and golden and violet world was, to him, barely good enough for her stage-setting.

But, because she could not think of him like that, she only winced, as at a sort of impertinent and casual persiflage and shrank again. And the glory of the day, and the valley, and the rippling ranges—royal in their purple and gold—hurt her very much indeed.

"Have you any idea," she demanded, cruelly, "how entirely you are out of the picture?"

"What is the matter with me?" was his imperturable query.

"Your clothes, for one thing. So rotten perfect! Imagine those riding togs on a primeval peak like this!"

"I don't believe," said Jack, mildly, "that a bear skin, or any thing of that sort, would do any better. Hard to ride in, you know, and on a horse one does want to be comfortable."

"Oh, I know you're frightfully keen on your riding!" cried Enid, frowning pettishly. "But your sort of riding always suggests polo to me,—or steeple-chasing—and—and that!"

"Well," said Jack, still without rancor, "that's all right. You have to ride a bit—even in polo, you know. Likewise in steeple-chasing."

His clothes were good; whether the fact were against him or not could be best determined by unprejudiced arbitration. Being big, brown, and about as well put together as a man may reasonably be—not to say a bit better,—he seemed to belong in his riding breeches, just as he belonged on his horse.

It was an unfortunate accident, considering Enid's point of view, that he really preferred correctly built clothes to those of amateurish design and manufacure. Enid knew that he was handsomely prepared for a horse, and handsomest of all when he was on one; but it irritated her that he did not appear before her arrayed in a Mexican sombrero, flannel shirt and the rest of it. It was an insult to her elemental emotion that she had never asked him unshaved, and that his boots were made by Morton and Morton's—and fitted.

"Heaven's! We'll be late for tea!" she remarked suddenly, rising and shaking out her riding-skirt.

The loop and the button that held it at her side had missed connections, and she adjusted it with a lithe bend of her young, little body, and a pretty show of trim black riding boot.

I OWE MY HEALTH

To Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Washington Park, Ill.—"I am the mother of four children and have suffered with female trouble, backache, nervous spells and the blues. My children's loud talking and romping would make me so nervous I could just tear everything to pieces and I would ache all over and feel so sick that I would not want anyone to talk to me at times. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Liver Pills restored me to health and I want to thank you for the good they have done me. I have had quite a bit of trouble and worry but it does not affect my youthful looks. My friends say 'Why do you look so young and well?' I owe it all to the Lydia E. Pinkham remedies."—Mrs. ROBT. STOPIEL, Moore Avenue, Washington Park, Illinois.

We wish every woman who suffers from female troubles, nervousness, backache or the blues could see the letters written by women made well by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

If you have any symptom about which you would like to know write to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass., for helpful advice given free of charge.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

THE WRONG MAN

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1914, by Associated Literary Press.

I was at Stockholm simply as a tourist and sightseer, and I was all alone. I had no idea of meeting any one I knew, and a surprise awaited me on the first night of my arrival when a man whom I clearly saw was a Pole lander edged along to me on the veranda of the hotel as I smoked my cigar and said:

"You are discretion itself, Mr. Grelling. You have registered under another name. How were matters in London when you left?"

"I don't exactly understand you," I replied as I looked him over and made sure that we had never met before.

"The others will be here inside of two days, and we will have a meeting. I have been here three days, and I find nothing to alarm me. I trust matters in London are all right?"

"As far as I know," I replied as I returned his card and wondered whether he was trying to check me or had really mistaken me for somebody else.

Three hours later as I retired to my room the stolid faced and wooden headed waiter who carried my light hung about in a queer way after setting the candle down, and I finally gave him a small coin and waved him out. Instead of going he whispered to me:

"I wish to warn you! Strange men have been here for a week. I think they are waiting for you!"

Next morning at breakfast the same man waited on me. I had a little table by myself, and while bringing my dishes the waiter whispered in my ear:

"The two strange men are at the fourth table. I am sure they are Russian spies and will watch you!"

Now I had the key to the mystery. There was some sort of conspiracy on foot, probably against the peace of the czar, and the conspirators were to meet at Stockholm.

the next two days I was closely shadowed. After the first day of this spy business the same stolid faced waiter slipped into my room with pale face and whisperingly exclaimed:

"Those spies are following you everywhere! For God's sake be careful!"

"See here, Hans," I said as I put my hand on his shoulder, "you are evidently on the inside of this affair, and I wish you would tell me what the dickens it all means!"

He looked at me open mouthed for half a minute, and then a broad grin stole over his face. He thought I was playing off on him to test his prudence and loyalty.

"You will carry it through all right," he finally said, with many heavy nods of his head, and he went away looking very well pleased.

At the end of another twenty-four hours I got a further insight into the mystery. I had strolled into another hotel three or four blocks away to examine the register, as a globe trotter invariably does for no reason he can explain, when I saw a traveler who might have been my twin brother as far as outward appearance went. He was of my height and weight, had the same colored eyes, hair and mustache, and I believe our own mother would have wondered which was which. He stared at me, and I stared back, and I wandered back into my own hotel, knowing that the real man from London had arrived.

The Russian spies must have had a bad time of it trying to settle on the right man, but they finally decided in my favor. The Englishman was free from surveillance, while I was dogged closer than before.

At the end of a week, and while they were still dogging me and I was rather enjoying it, there was a fire aboard of a ship in the harbor. It was about 9 o'clock at night, and a great crowd gathered on the wharf to watch the conflagration. I made one of the number, and in my anxiety to secure a good view I mounted the bows of a smart looking brig lying at a wharf. I was hardly over the rail before two men followed and seized me and hustled me down into the cabin. I found the captain of the brig, the two spies and a Russian government official awaiting me.

I have told you that the Englishman and I looked to be twins, but I had not had time to look for little details. As I sat down opposite the Russian official he began comparing my description and appearance with a written description, and at the end of five minutes he rose up and thundered at the two spies:

"Dolts, idiots, blunderers! You have arrested the wrong man!"

"If not too much trouble," I said to the official as he got through storming, "would you kindly explain why an American citizen has been made prisoner in this fashion?"

I was told that it was a mistake, but got no other satisfaction. The brig was put about, but as the wind fell we did not make the harbor until after daylight. Then I was dumped on the wharf without apology. I walked straight to the American consul and told him the story, and his reply was:

"Why, man, you had best thank your stars instead of looking for an apology! When the Russian officials get hold of the wrong man by mistake he is generally sent to Siberia to cover up the blunder."

Later on I found that the Englishman and his party left Stockholm the same evening, but where they went and what sort of a conspiracy they had on hand I never ascertained.

Double Tunic Over Hoop

A charming dance frock for the debutante is shown in white georgette crepe, the simplicity of which is its most notable feature. In the skirt two tunics drop over a hoop foundation and finish at the bottom with puffings of self material. The dainty bodice has elbow-length sleeves and round neck and finishes at the waistline with a crushed satin girdle.

GOOD WALNUT LOAF

Take two and a half breakfast cups of flour, three-quarters of a breakfast cup of granulated sugar, one of dried walnut meats, one heaped saltspoon of salt, two teaspoons of baking powder, and sufficient milk to bind. Put the walnuts through a mincer or chop very fine, but the former method is preferable as it helps to bring to the surface the rich fat contained in the nuts. Sieve the flour, baking powder, and salt into a basin, add the sugar and minced walnuts with sufficient milk to form a fairly stiff cake mixture; turn into a well-greased tin, and bake for about an hour and a quarter in a slow oven. This cake should be light and feathery in texture with a very delicious flavor from the nuts. The loaf is suitable for either luncheon or tea, and it is nourishing because of the nuts. It is likewise economical, as it needs no fruit, butter, or eggs, the walnuts being rich in fat and flavor enough to take the place of other ingredients.

Britain May Look Back on Execution With Calmness

London Daily News:—The picture of Mr. Justice Darling and Mr. Justice Atkin poring over Parliament Rolls and Statute Rolls in the Public Record Office, and debating, with the aid of a magnify glass, whether certain marks in the Norman-French manuscript are the modern equivalent of a comma, or merely marks on the parchment caused by the lapse of centuries, is a pleasing commentary on the thoroughness with which justice is administered in this realm. We can scarcely imagine the German authorities taking such trouble in the case of a prisoner appealing against a conviction for treason.

FOR BABY'S MOTHER

How to Make a Nice Crocheted Lap Pad

A useful gift that will be appreciated by a mother with a small baby is a lap or carriage pad. It is a crocheted affair, made of rather coarse but soft knitting cotton without a decided twist. Two sixteen-inch squares of solid shell-stitch are first required. This is perhaps one of the easiest of crochet stitches to make. You begin by crocheting a sixteen-inch chain and go back, running four double crochets in about every fourth chain, with no chains between the doubles. For the next row, you merely take four chains for the turn and make your four doubles between the second and third of each underlying group, and so on.

When the two squares are finished join them together, with the exception of one side, with single crochets. To this single crochet edge now make a beading by using a double crochet in every other stitch with one chain between each double. Finish with a shell of six doubles with a chain between each, in every third mesh of the beading, holding the ends of each shell by a single crochet on top of the second double following the mesh in which the shell centres.

When this pad has been finished, slip through its open end a piece of rubber sheeting of good quality and thickness. This is an invaluable article for nursing or bathing time, and may be used whenever the baby is to be laid down for any length of time. Ribbon should be run through the beading in the pad if it is to be given for a gift. If a mother is making one of these for herself she will hardly bother with the ribbon, and may, therefore, omit the beading. They launder quickly, and may be crocheted almost in an afternoon.

Tomato Fritters

Boil seven medium sized tomatoes which have been peeled and cut in small pieces, one tablespoon of chopped onion, a teaspoon of salt and a dusting of paprika. When soft rub through a sieve and slowly add to one-half a cup of cornstarch cooked for five minutes in one-third of a cup of butter. Cook for another five minutes and add a well-beaten egg and three tablespoons of grated cheese. Do not let boil after adding the egg. Drop by spoonfuls into deep boiling fat and when brown, drain on paper and roll in grated cheese.

Delicious Tea Cake

Take one cupful of cream, two beaten eggs and one cupful liquid yeast one-half cupful sugar. Beat all together, add flour with a very few currants to make it soft dough. Set away to rise. Roll out, cut with biscuit cutter, lay on pan far apart and let rise until very, very light and bake. When done (well browned) brush with a little cream and three spoonfuls of brown sugar, mixed.

Cucumber Chow Chow

Three quarts of cucumbers which have been split, seeded and then chopped fine. Three pints of onions and ½ pint green peppers, all chopped. Two tablespoons celery seed, 1 teaspoon white pepper, 3 tablespoons salt and vinegar to cover. Place the chopped vegetables in a crock and sprinkle the salt over them. Let stand overnight. In the morning add the vinegar and spices. Pack into jars and seal without cooking.

Flannels should be washed with soap and warm water; never hot or boiling water, and if a little glycerine is added the wool will keep soft.

To get long service out of scrim or muslin curtains, hem them top and bottom alike so that they may be reversed.

Take Off Your Coat and Give the Farmer a Hand!

When, three months ago, we called upon Ontario's farmers for mighty efforts to avert the threatened Famine and World-Hunger, they responded splendidly.

Aided by Providential weather, Ontario's Crop is one of the biggest in her history.

The farmer has done his part.

We Town and City men must do our part.

The crop is on the ground — the farmer can't possibly take it off unaided.

To lose a sheaf of it for want of harvest-help would be an unthinkable crime.

We call upon the Men of Ontario to rouse themselves. To co-operate, employee with employer, in this patriotic service. Many employers have agreed to make it financially possible for their employees to do this work, and the Ontario Government will pay railway fare both ways of all men who go.

Help us, so that we may send word to Ontario's Sons in the trenches — that Ontario's Second Line of Defence stands fast, — that here, as well as there, we "Carry On."

Josiah's Good Reign. 2 Chronicles 34:1-13.

Golden Text: Remember also thy Creator in the days of thy youth. Eccl. 12:1.

1. Verse 1, 2. Whose son was Josiah?

2. What had been the character of Amon

3. Whose son was Amon?

4. What had probably induced the wicked reign of Amon?

5. Verses 1,3. Is a boy eight years of age morally responsible to God?

6. Verse 3. How old was Josiah when he began to seek after God?

7. If Josiah, when a boy, had not sought and found the Lord what effect would that have probably had upon his reign?

8. If a boy is not converted by the time he is sixteen years of age, what are his chances of ever being converted?

9. Verse 3. Take on hundred boys at sixteen years of age, in the same social positions, fifty of them converted and fifty not; what are the chances respectively for the worldly success of these two sets of boys?

10. In the training of boys there are at least three things essential to their success; health, education, and character or religion. Which should parents pay most attention to, without neglecting any one and why?

11. How old was Josiah when he began to take an aggressive part in the spiritual welfare of his kingdom?

12. Verses 4-7. Why should the rulers of the people feel responsibility for the righteousness of the nation, and see to it personally that reforms are carried out?

13. Which comes first in order and why, the purging of the nation from gross national sin, or the outward and public worship of God?

14. Why can there be no real worship of God on the part of an individual or community, if at the same time sin is being committed?

15. Verse 8. Which should have first claim upon our resources, our homes or the church.

16. If the homes of the people are well cared for, and the church is in a run down condition, how would you estimate such a people?

17. Verse 9. Who are the people that are in duty bound to keep up the church of God?

18. From whom had the money been collected to repair the Temple at Jerusalem?

19. Verse 9. Should money be solicited from outsiders to build, repair or keep up the house of God?

20. Can you find any place in the Bible where they raised money for the worship of God other than by direct giving?

21.—Where do you find in the Old or New Testament any precedent for presenting bazaars, concerts, lectures, tea meetings or for any other commercial method for financing the church?

22. Verses 10-13. Why is it vital that the church of God should be kept in a comfortable and an attractive condition?

PUT CREAM IN NOSE AND STOP CATARRH

Tells How To Open Clogged Nostrils and End Head-Colds.

You feel fine in a few moments. Your cold in head or catarrh will be gone. Your clogged nostrils will open. The air passages of your head will clear and you can breathe freely. No more dullness, headache; no hawking, snuffling, mucous discharges or dryness; no struggling for breath at night.

Tell your druggist you want a small bottle of Ely's Cream Balm. Apply a little of this fragrant, antiseptic cream in your nostrils, let it penetrate through every air passage of the head; soothe and heal the swollen, inflamed mucous membrane, and relief comes instantly.

It is just what every cold and catarrh sufferer needs. Don't stay stuffed-up and miserable.

Beer is said to be fattening, but much of it will make a man lean against something.

ALUMINUM KITCHENWARE

Aluminum utensils for the kitchen cost more than enameled, tin, or granite kitchenware, but are more economical and satisfactory in the long run because of their wearing quality. The initial cost of aluminum is double that of enameled ware, but it will last more than twice as long. Tin, tinned iron, or agate lined utensils wear out much more rapidly. The enameled or agate wear chips off, whereas aluminum cannot be injured by being dropped or knocked against some object. Fruit and vegetable acids will have no effect on aluminum, but alkalis are harmful. Alkaline solutions, such as solutions of soda, should not be heated in aluminum utensils. The lime residue on the inside of an aluminum teakettle may be removed with nitric acid, which forms a thin coating of aluminum oxide, and protects the kettle against further action. Hydrochloric or sulphuric acid cannot be used for this purpose, as either one would dissolve the aluminum.

An excellent hard sauce is made of butter and sugar creamed in the usual way, with the beaten white of an egg added.

SINKING THE LUTZOW: MIDDY'S NARRATIVE

[illegible]-account of Experiences in [illegible] Battle—Sank Cruiser in Point Blank Range

A midshipman of 19 years, who was on board one of the first battle squadron of British ships that accounted for four German vessels, including the Lutzow, in the Jutland battle, wrote a letter to his parents, since that young hero has met his death, telling the story of his experiences.

"During the forenoon watch we were going down the North Sea on the port side about three o'clock in the afternoon a signal came through to say the battle cruisers were engaging the enemy. When this signal came we proceeded to charge down to meet them at full speed. At about six o'clock we sighted the battle cruisers firing furiously. The battle cruisers were sliding at the [illegible] on the sky line.

"We forged ahead, hoping that all this time they would be firing all ammunition, and thereby [illegible] destruction. [illegible] were right ahead of us at full speed [illegible] firing rapid fire at the enemy, [illegible] of the projectiles [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] four [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] short time we stopped to see what damage we had done. She was on fire from stem to stern, and we could only see her by the smoke and flame that surrounded her. We thought that was the last [illegible].

"Then there was a funny old cruiser all alone on our starboard quarter. Owing to the fact that she was almost nearly sinking she fired last her stern until (I think it must have been by accident) she fired one solitary gun. That was enough. We put one salvo into her, which set her on fire. Then another ship put another salvo into her, at which she literally disappeared in a cloud of smoke.

Sank the Lutzow

"Next a destroyer appeared on the scene, which fired two torpedoes at us. Both fortunately went under our stern. We hit the destroyer with our whole salvo and she stopped, on fire [illegible] [illegible]. Just then another torpedo was fired at us. I imagine by the [illegible] [illegible], which also passed under our stern.

"Then suddenly we got the shock of our lives. The German battle cruiser Lutzow loomed out of the fog at point-blank range. Of course we opened off as soon as possible, and so did they. We hit them with our third salvo, and they hit us, but fortunately we hit them fair and square, while they only hit us in a sort of half-hearted way. Our first salvo put her on fire [illegible] and she was sinking fast.

NOT TO BE BRIBED

Dutch Journalist Opposed Any Sympathy for Pan-Germanism!

Gerard Keesmaekers, the famous Dutch cartoonist, writes: As far back as the first few months of the war three Germans in Amsterdam tried to buy the services of a very well known Dutch journalist who was connected with many Dutch provincial newspapers. The latter are well known and were subsequently published in the Telegraaf and other papers. This journalist was offered a fortune if he would start a campaign in his papers to persuade the people that it was necessary to call the German soldiers and marines to defend our harbors against an invasion by the English. The idea was to create a public opinion which would bring pressure to bear on the Dutch Government.

"We want you to drop poison in the eyes of the people" said the negotiator.

"No," answered the Germans.

"But I am already anti-German."

"That does not matter. If you will do this you can ask what price you like—10,000 marks, 100,000 marks—"

The journalist refused and informed the authorities. There is no question that this has always been the object of the German Government.

"For more than fifty years German politicians and professors have spoken of us as Germans, and as being geographically the door of the German house. Friedrich List, a great German writer, said: "Holland belongs to Germany as much as Brittany and Normandy to France, and as long as Holland remains independent Germany can never develop to her full strength, any more than France could when those two provinces belonged to England."

"That expresses the attitude of the German Government and the German people to-day, although it was written [illegible] the middle of the last century. I have seen maps circulated in Germany showing what they think will be the extent of her Empire in 1920, and Holland is included in the black ex[illegible] district engulfs nearly all Europe

ONTARIO TROOPS CARRIED RAID TO GERMAN RESERVE TRENCHES ON 2,000 YD. FRONT

Found the Lines Lightly Held and Could Have Reached the Streets of Lens—Enemy Trenches and Shelters Demolished--Took Some Prisoners.

CASUALTIES LIGHT

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Aug. 10.—Stewart Lyon, special correspondent for Canadian newspapers, cables as follows from the Canadian Army Headquarters to-day:

Under the protection of a heavy barrage, shortly after 4 o'clock Thursday morning, raiding parties from Ontario troops on a front of over two thousand yards, penetrated the enemy's positions in the Cite du Moulin and St. Laurent sectors, returning with several prisoners. The raiders on a large part of the front attacked, passed over the enemy's first line and support trenches which were found to be lightly held and in bad condition. A number of the enemy subterranean shelters were demolished, but nothing is known as to the fate of their occupants.

Our men returned to their own trenches with manifest reluctance. Some of them said there would have been no difficulty in pushing forward to the streets of Lens. Their casualties were slight.

At some points the trenches were found to have been pounded out of all resemblance to defensive positions. Many dugouts were also seen that had been blown in by our heavy guns.

Allies Advance Their Positions On Belgian Front

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Aug. 10.—Renewed advances by the British and French in Flanders, including the completion of the capture of Westhoek, was reported by Field Marshal Haig to-day. The British attack was made early this morning. In addition to gaining complete control of Westhoek, additional positions on the Westhoek ridge were taken.

"East of Ypres," said the official statement. "A successful local attack early this morning, completed the capture of Westhoek, and secured the remaining positions on Westhoek ridge."

East and north of Bixschoote, the French continued to progress.

Germans Attacked Heavily But Were Repulsed By French

Special to The Examiner:

PARIS Aug. 8.—Violent German attacks from Pantheon to Epine de Chevrigny early to-day, while the French were making continued progress in Belgium, capturing several forms, were reported by the War Office this afternoon.

The German assaults were made after violent bombardments, and were supported by the famous "Stromtruppen" (storming troops) of the enemy. All attacks were repulsed.

A strong attack was also launched in the region of Foyet where enemy took and retained small fraction of advanced French lines.

Shipment of Fish Not Here Yet

Toronto Demands Not Met—Some of the Supply is Expected To-morrow

Through the inability to secure a supply large enough to meet the demand in Toronto for the cod and haddock, brought from the Atlantic by the Food Controller, hundreds of Peterborough people who had read in the Examiner that the fish would be on the local market were disappointed again and Mr. Pringle had little time to spare for his usual routine of business answering the insistent demands of those wishing to help out the food situation. The shipment of yesterday to Toronto was not a large one, but that which arrives to-night promises to supply the local demand and will be on sale to-morrow.

BODIES OF 13 WOMEN FROM RUINS OF BIG LONDON FACTORY

Special to the Examiner.

LONDON, Eng., Aug. 10.—Thirteen bodies of women workers have already been recovered, and it is feared others are still in the ruins of a big chemical works which was wrecked and burned, following a terrific explosion last night. Many others were injured. The works are in East London.

Food Controller's Wheat Prohibition A Ghostly Farce

Special to The Examiner:

TORONTO, Aug. 10. — Under the heading, "A Ghastly Farce," the Toronto Star to-day has the following front pages editorial on Food Controller Hanna's policy:

"Food controller Hanna has prohibited the use of wheat for distilling. What does this prohibition amount to? Last year 88,000,000 pounds of grain were used for distilling in Canada.

"Out of this enormous amount only 27,000 pounds of wheat, less than one pound in three thousand.

"Is the food controller joking with tthe public or trifling with the question? Has he any conception of his duties? Has he any intention of keeping faith with the public? The prohibition is a farce and a ghastly farce. It weakens and discredits the whole policy of thrift."

Summary of The United States Food Control Measure

WASHINGTON, August 9.—Here are some of the outstanding features of the Food Control Bill finally passed by the Senate, and which only awaits President Wilson's signature to become a law:

Government control of foods, feeds, fuels, fertilizer and tools, implements and equipment used in food production.

A one man food administration.

Drastic penalties against hoarding and speculation.

A licensing system giving the President complete power over dealers in necessities.

Enormous requisitioning powers for the President in obtaining war supplies.

Presidential authority to close exchanges and boards of trade if necessary to stop speculation in necessities.

Presidential authority to buy and sell wheat, flour, meals, beans and potatoes at reasonable prices.

A guarantee of $2 a bushel as the minimum price of No. 1 Northern wheat at the primary interior markets until May 1, 1919.

Prohibition against the use of foods in whiskey making and authority to the President if he sees fit to impose similar prohibition on beer and wine making.

Prsidential authority to commandeer distilled spirits in stock and bond for redistillation for war purposes.

An appropriation of $10,000,000 to enable the President to buy and sell fertilizer to farmers.

An appropriation of $150,000,000 to enable the Food Administrator to carry out the purpose of the bill.

Former Peterboro' Man Is Dead

ROCHESTER, N.Y., Aug. 10.—Dr. William A. Keegan, prominent homeopathic physician, died suddenly at his home here. Dr. Keegan was born in London, Eng., in 1861. He came to Canada with his parents and was educated in Peterborough Collegiate Institute and the Chicago Homeopathic Medical College.

Hired Man Shot Farmer and Family

NORTH BAY, Aug. 10.—Word was received in town yesterday morning of a tragedy enacted last night in Snake River, a hamlet a few miles out of Mattawa. L. Ouellette, a young man working for a farmer by the name of Paul Morin, shot his employer, his wife and small son. Morin and his son died instantly, while the wife is in a serious condition. Ouellette was arrested and is now in custody in the lock-up at Mattawa. He will be removed to North Bay.

Submarine Sunk By An Unarmed Steamer

LONDON, Aug. 9.—Another unarmed merchantman has sunk a submarine, but, because of the fate of Captain Charles Fryatt of the British steamer Brussels, who was executed in July, 1913, by the Germans, for attempting to ram a submarine, the names of the captain and crew of the steamer and particulars concerning their achievements cannot be published.

The captain and crew of the vessel, however, have been presented with $2,500 by Sir William J. Tatem, chairman of the Tatem Steam Navigation Co. for their deed.

CONSCRIPTION AND ELECTION MAY BE SYNCHRONIZED

Many of Government Members in Favour of This Plan—Conjecture As to the Rideau Meeting

MUTTERINGS AT OTTAWA

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, Aug 10.—Many are the surmises with regard to the conference of notables held at Rideau Hall yesterday. The rumor which receives most credence at Ottawa is to the effect that it was Sir Robert who advised the conference, choosing as his own representative Sir George Foster and Sir Clifton Sifton. The question of securing a coalition, conditional upon an extension, and a further trial of the voluntary system of recruiting before putting the conscription bill into force, is believed to have been the chief topic of the discussion.

It is believed that the Liberal chief promised "consideration of the' proposal." Certain it is that a number of his lieutenants gathered in his room the same evening. From present indications there is little reason to believe that the Liberal representatives have changed their minds with regard to the situation.

As a matter of fact the Government is facing a dangerous situation. The Conscription Bill will become law within a very few days. It will then be for the government to undertake at once to put it into force. It will take a month to appoint the tribunals and get the machinery in motion. Then the calling out of the classes and the election campaign will occur together, with what results, national and political, may be conjectured.

CONSCRIPTION AND ELECTION

There are many on the Government side who believe that the Government's best plan would be to dissolve and go to the people as soon as the ink is dry on the Governor-General's signature. They foresee disaster for the party if the Government potters along with further legislation in the House, and attempts to enforce conscription coterminously with an election campaign.

It is pretty general gossip around the corridors that the Conservative party are by no means satisfied with Borden's leadership. Mutterings and murmurings are heard on all sides.

Members of the party cannot see why its political future should be endangered because the leader thinks it worth while to flirt with outside elements in an effort to find a stronger government.

The result is that Sir Robert Borden is waltzing around on the edge of an abyss, and a little shove may send him into the oblivion of lost leadership.

Interesting developments may be looked for at any time.

WILL CONCENTRATE SUBS. ON BRITAIN

LONDON, Aug. 10.—A despatch to Reuter Limited from Amsterdam says it is reported from a German source that Germany intends soon to concentrate her submarine activity exclusively against England.

"Bob" Rogers Is The Obstacle To Union

Special to The Examiner:

WINNIPEG, August 10.—The editorials of the Winnipeg Free Press, chief Liberal organ of the West, repudiating Laurier and the Western Liberal Convention, have caused a sensation. They are taken by some to foreshadow a new convention. Such a gathering would have for its object the forwarding of plans for an immediate union government.

Rogers Is Impossible.

There is, however, one fact which limits the likelihood of such a meeting being called and that fact, in flesh and blood, is the Hon. Robt. Rogers. So long as Sir Robert Borden retains him in the Cabinet it will be impossible to reconcile Western opinion to the idea of union.

Public Eating Places Must Not Serve Beef and Bacon on Tuesdays and Fridays—Other Restrictions Too

NO WHEAT FOR ALCOHOL

Ottawa, Aug. 9.—Definite regulations, to come into effect at once, for restricting the use of beef, bacon and white bread in public eating places, and for prohibiting the use of wheat in the distillation or manufacture of alcohol have been promulgated by order-in-Council at the instance of the Food Controller. The serving of beef and bacon is prohibited on Tuesdays and Fridays, and at more than one meal on any other day. Substitutes, such as corn bread, oatcake, potatoes, etc, must be provided at every meal at which white bread is served. Under the order the expression "bacon" includes cured (either pickled or smoked) sides, backs, hams, and any portion of what is termed, in the trade, Wiltshire sides.

The term "public eating places" includes any hotel, restaurant, cafeteria, club, or other place where meals to the number of twenty-five per day are served to persons other than mmbers of the family or household of the proprietor. In all such public eating places there must be prominently displayed a printed notice to the effect that all persons in ordering their food ought to consider the needs of Great Britain and her allies and their armies for wheat, beef and bacon, and that the Food Controller requires the public to do everything in its power to make these commodities available for export by eating as little as possible of them and by making use of substitutes and avoiding waste.

No Wheat for Alcohol.

The regulation relating to the use of wheat in the manufacture of alcohol reads: "No person shall use any wheat for the distillation or manufacture of alcohol unless such alcohol is to be used for manufacturing of munitions purposes, and no person shall use wheat in the distillation or manufacture of alcohol for manufacturing or munitions purposes unless such person has obtained a license therefor from the Food Controller for Canada. No fee shall be payable for any such license."

Heavy penalties are provided under the order for violation of the regulations. In the case of public eating places the proprietor or manager and any clerk, employee or servant violating any of the said regulations shall be guilty of an offence and shall be liable upon summary conviction, for the first offence, to a penalty not exceeding one hundred dollars and not less than twenty-five dollars, and for each subsequent offence to a penalty not exceeding five hundred dollars, and not less than one hundred dollars, or to imprisonment for any term not exceeding three months, or to both fine and imprisonment.

THE PRINCE CHAP AT THE EMPIRE

Five Spectacular Reels of Love, Romance and Adventure—Wonderful Lighting Effects

Do you like beautiful scenery? Do gripping climaxes appeal to you? Do you appreciate a strictly all-star cast of players, one of the greatest casts ever appearing in a single motion picture drama? If you appreciate all these items do not fail to see "The Prince Chap," the Selig Red Seal Play De Luxe which will be presented in five heart-stirring reels to-day and to-morrow, at the Empire Theatre. The stars include Marshall Neilan, Geo. Fawcett, Bessie Eyton, and Mary Charleson. This V. L. S. E. production is from the pen of Edward Peple, the world famous dramatist. It is a story of unrequited love which in the end blossoms and thrives though a new hope.

Only Four Counties Without Good Roads Peterborough Is One

All of the 37 counties in Ontario with the exception of four—Elgin, Lambton, Peterborough and the United Counties of Durham and Northumberland—have taken advantage of Provincial highway legislation and undertaken a county road system. Before the end of the present year every county ,it is expected, will have passed by-laws for a comprehensive system of highway improvement. Under the Highway Improvement Act, the Government bears 40 per cent. of the cost of an improved county highway system, and 20 per cent. of the cost of maintenance.

CRITICISM OF SIR ROBERT GROWS IN HIS OWN CABINET

Dissatisfaction With His Lack of Leadership and Continued Blundering—Reconstruction Expected Soon

ROGERS' POWER RESENTED

Ottawa, August 9.—Premier Borden's leadership of the Conservative party is threatened. Party murmurings,, gradually growing in intensity during the past two weeks, are crystallizing into plain speech. Dissatisfaction is beginning to seethe. Conservatives are now grumbling in groups. They talk bitterly about "inertia," "lethargy," "indecision," "blundering," and "lack of leadership."

It is significant that Sir Robert's sharpest critics include members of his own Cabinet. There is amazing unanimity in the expressed opinion that impending Cabinet "econstruction" should be based upon change of leadership. Conservatives are openly blaming the existing political turmoil on the indecision of the Premier, and claim that their success at the polls in the forthcoming general election is jeopardized by the Borden blunders.

Let Matters Take Their Course.

The stand-pat partisans, who have been hostile throughout to all suggestions of union or national government have been protesting and manipulating for weeks. The significance of the new situation is in the insurgency of the Conservative win-the-war unionists. They are deeply chagrined with the turn things have taken and they do not hesitate to blame the Premier. They claim that instead of directly and frankly negotiating with representative Liberal conscriptionists, who would have brought with them to union Cabinet councils a substantial public support, Sir Robert Borden "let matters take their course," contented himself with leaving an open door, did his negotiating through Sir Clifford Sifton and Hon. Arthur Meighen, and "tied himself up' to the J. M. Godfrey and Arthur Hawkes organization, which they bitterly declare did not carry a strong strain of general public support behind it.

Affront to Unionists.

Outside of Ottawa it may be said to realize the affront which the Conservative unionist Ministers and members think they received when the Premier, according to their complaints, gave his first confidence and assurances to the Toronto deputation, and, by implication, forecasted the removal of certain of his Ministers.

Is Killing Conscription.

They protest that Sir Robert has himself "killed coalition," and that by procrastination and indecision he is "killing conscription." The propose to force the Premier's hands — to demand the immediate enforcement of the conscription act and a strong reorganization of the Administration, or the resignation of Sir Robert himself.

"The whole thing has been mussed and muddled from the start," was the statement of one Conservative member, "and I'm afraid the Premier has been to blame. What the people want in a crisis like this is leadership, not indecision and procrastination."

The smouldering resentment has broken into flame over the result of the Western Liberal convention. Unionist Conservatives claim that if the Premier had definitely and decidedly entered into negotiations with representative Western Liberal leaders, and given them assurance that he was sincere, would do some necessary cleaning up, and would mobolize the entire resources of the nation in man and material power, instead of aimlessly pussy-footing and waiting for things to turn up and fall into his lap, he would have given Canada the

VICTORY WITHIN THE GRASP OF THE ALLIES BUT ITS PRICE IS PERSEVERANCE TO THE END

Neutral Observer States That Germany's Difficulties Are Increasing and Not the Least is the Drain on Her By Bulgaria and Turkey.

CANNOT BE STARVED

Paris, August 8.—"Germany is on her last legs, but her feet are still firmly planted."

This is the summary of the situation by a prominent Swiss manufacturer whose position enables him to obtain exceptional knowledge of affairs in the Central Empires. "I am surprised," he said, "to find how many persons here fail to realise the state of affairs in Germany. Your optimists exaggerate the stories of starvation and bloody revolts; your pessimists say gloomily 'Germany is as strong as ever,' and no one seems to be able to judge the question on its merits without prejudice.

"If Frenchmen knew how steadily and inevitably the war pressure on Germany is increasing there would be none of this talk about their own difficulties. Remember Japan at the end of her war with Russia. The world knows now that Japan was exhausted and that had Russia persevered she must have been victorious. That is the situation to-day.

"If the allies can surmount the 'last quarter of an hour,' victory is in their grasp.

"I will tell you the facts on which my opinion is based: At the beginning of this year well informed Germans admitted freely that their situation was desperate. The peace diversion has failed and Germany has to meet the combined forces of the allies at maximum strength with her own army so shattered by losses as to be almost a skeleton.

'They will probably never learn the real figures of German losses. Even the high officials tell you that much has been suppressed, "in the public interest." Heroic measures were necessary and they were adopted.

"Germany has contrived to pass 1917, but in doing so she has reached her limit. There is now no issue from her difficulties and her leaders know it.

"There has been much talk in the allied countries about the shortness of the German food supply. It is true that her food is reduced but make no mistake: Germany will never fall by starvation. I should not be surprised if half of those stories were deliberately circulated by the German Government to distract attention from their real weakness.

"No; Germany's weak spots are to be sought elsewhere. They are three; men, transport and allies. The first two are intimately connected. Apart from the never-ending and gigantic drain of the armies, Germany has made colossal efforts to cope with the huge demand for war materials. By concentrating on a standardized patterns of their most dreadful weapon, the cannon, she has been able to reply to the allied artillery augmentation and still increase the output of other growing necessities, like grenades and machine guns.

"Her allies, too, are a continual drain on German's vitality. Bulgaria and Turkey need money always, and men often. Austria needs men, money, and above all, peace. For the moment the Russian collapse has silenced the Austrians' murmurs, but the German leaders have no delusions on the subject. They know the victories in Russia, like the exploits of their submarines, are only palliatives which soothe and stimulate the people without affecting the main issue. The evil day is merely postponed, that is all. They have a little more time in which to try to evade destiny, and nothing further."

CANADA WILL SAVE 50,000 LBS. OF MEAT BY NEW FOOD CONTROL

Special to the Examiner.

TORONTO, Aug. 10.—It is estimated here that fifty thousand pounds of bacon and beef per week will be saved in the whole of Canada as the result of Food Controller Hanna's order, prohibiting the serving of beef and bacon in restaurants on Tuesdays and Fridays.

British Labour To Be Represented At Big Conference

Special to the Examiner.

LONDON, Aug. 10—British labour to-day decided to be represented at the international Socialist conference scheduled for Stockholm in September, but not to be necessarily bound by action that may be taken there.

This decision was reached at a labour conference at which six hundred delegates, representing all the labour elements in England, were present.

The resolution, as adopted to-day, favours participation of British labour in a consultative way, but without being bound by action that may be taken. The vote of the delegates, representing two and a half million workers, favoured participation by a vote of nearly three to one.

Ennismore Tax Rate Is 26.5 Mills

The Ennismore Council met in the town hall, on Aug. 6 for the purpose of levying a tax on all ratable property in the said township for the year 1917.

Reeve Young presided.

Special school rates were varied, but when all levies were added it reached the average maximum of 26.5 mills on the dollar with the township tax $2.00 lower than last year.

The above rates were levied under by-law No. 378, with three readings.

The following accounts were drawn on the treasury:

Moved by Mr. Telford, seconded by Mr. Harrington, that Eugene Moloney be paid the sum of $8.00 for work on road.

Moved by Mr. Telford, seconded by Mr. Harrington, that Thos. Flood be paid the sum of $10.00 for work on the boundary line.

Moved by Mr. Telford, seconded by Mr. Crowley, that Wm. J. Clark be paid the sum of $10 for work on Boundary Line.

Moved by Mr. Harrington, seconded by Mr. Crowley, that Clayton Telford be paid the sum of $4 for tile and putting in culvert.

Moved by Mr. Telford, seconded by Mr. Crowley, that John Young be paid the sum of $5 for expenses on Government grant for road.

Dynamiting Finds Favour With Marcil

Special to The Examiner:

MONTREAL, Augg. 10.—No arrests yet in connection with the dynamiting of Athelstan house, the residence of the proprietor of the Montreal Star. All English speaking newspapers, even those antagonistic to Lord Athelstan personally, are demanding drastic treatment of those inciting such outrages. Notwithstanding this, Tancrede Marcil and other French Canadians are openly glorifying the incidents by anti-conscriptionists show that they mean what they say.

Ald. Dobbin Back From Kingston

Ald. F. H. Dobbin of Peterborough, former publisher of the Peterborough Review, was in the city yesterday and to-day on business. Mr. Dobbin is the political pooh-bah of Peterborough, being the "one dependable" for the whole city, or example he is the manager for the Patriotic Fund; the leading spirit in the municipal coal yard undertaking; the publicity expert, etc., etc. He is a man of marked ability and energy and has a host of friends in every part of the Dominion.—Kingston Standard.

Germans Claim 1400 Russian Prisoners

Special to The Examiner:

BERLIN, via London, Aug. 10.—The capture of 1,400 Russian prisoners in two days in the Orta sector, was claimed to-day.

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

FRIDAY, AUG. 10, 1917

A WELL WARRANTED DEMAND.

The Army and Navy Veterans of Winnipeg adopted a resolution to be presented to the representative committee from the Liberal convention, urging the necessity of a national government,

"composed of representatives of the two political parties and representatives of labour, agriculture and other industries for the purpose of carrying out the proposed policy of conscription and an aggressive win-the-war programme."

There seems to be wisdom in this demand. Any advocate of conscription as a necessary, practical and working element in helping win the war, cannot, with consistency, associate a hope if its effective and fair application by the present government, with its partisan spirit and its record of inefficiency in most of the details of war administration for the past three years.

"For forms of government let fools contest Whate'er is best administered, is best."

"EVERYTHING IS LOVELY".

We don't quite know where we stand in the matter of getting at the causes of the extravagantly high cost of living. We thought we had glimpsed a little bit of explanation last winter when with an ascertained shortage of potatoes, the shortage that normally accounts for advance in price, was sharpened by the Government permitting large exports of potatoes.

We thought we had some explanation when carloads of potatoes, in transit, were dumped upon the railway right-of-way to freeze, rather than permit them to reach the market and lower prices.

We thought that when fire ate into the vitals of the Flavelle cold storage plant at Lindsay, and the segregated eggs and hoarded butter flowed is riverlets into the Scugog, that this evidence of cornering these necessities of living accounted for the high prices—gave antecedaneous wings to the eggs to permit the price to soar, and by massing the golden butter developed gilt-edge prices.

We thought we had got some slight clue to the cause of high prices, but, as it now appears, we were mistaken.

We thought that when Food Commissioner W. F. O'Connor, K.C., after asserted careful investigation, officially reported that the pork packing and provision firm of Davies and Company, Limited—in liability, if not in profits— had cleaned up the tidy profit of five million dollars in one year's operations—we thought that this was some explanation of the means by which the milk got into the cocoanut; but we were "floored" again. With the righteous indignation of a greatly wronged man—with a little too much protesting—Sir Joseph Flavelle, Bart., on his knightly word denied that the Company had made anything like five million dollars, and left the impression that the Company was lucky to have covered expenses. He jumped on the report of Commissioner O'Conno, K.C., and virtually declared it a vile slander of, and an outrage upon, a struggling infant industry.

Of course Commissioner O'Connor, K.C., saw his duty and did it. He virtually retracted his report. It would never do to contradict a brand new baronet and a strong friend of the Government, a man who has so much influence that he managed to get his denial of the immense profits of his company spread upon the pages of Hansard, by a little juggling with rules of the House.

Commissioner O'Connor, K.C., saw his mistake in his vile slander of the Davies Company, Limited. He not only repaired that error by retraction; by sending Sir Joseph Flavelle out of the box "without a stain on his character," but he took the cold storage business, as a whole, under his wing, and has given that industry a beautiful certificate of character, making it almost a charitable institution.

Mr. O'Connor has made a report of his investigations into cold storage conditions, and in it declares that "there is no food trust in Canada"; that "there is nothing like combination amongst cold storage companies in Canada; but, on the other hand, there is lively competition amongst the cold storage companies, a statement suggesting that they are cutting each other's throats in an effort to give the people cheap food.

So it comes to this: We cannot blame the cold storage companies, but must, it seems, come to the point of blaming high prices upon the rapacity of the corner grocery.

But we mustn't too rashly accept the cold storage explanation as fiction. Commissioner O'Connor made a huge mistake, so he and Sir Joseph Flavelle say in his report, of big profits in the Davies Company; and it is possible that he may have made a mistake in his sweeping acquittal of the cold storage companies.

Lieut. Nickle, son of Mr. W. F. Nickle, M.P., after being wounded twice, is returning to the front. This is a case where we don't obect to Canadian Nickle reaching the enemy.

MANHOOD AND MONEY.

The member for West Peterborough in Parliament manfully kicked against conscription and resigned his seat as a supporter of the government as well as his candidature, because the conscription of wealth was not embraced at the same time as conscription of manhood in the conscription bill.

His kick appeared to be genuine—for a day or two—but he was easily placated, and lured back to the fold.

After his "grand-stand play" to solidity himself with certain interests at home, he was easily satisfied with a most nebulous assurance of Sir Thomas White, Minister of Finance, that possibly, at some time in the future, some measure would perhaps be adopted to make wealth bear its share with manhood. There was no definition about the promise, not even a promise to make wealth pay its share.

But "a nod" is said to be "as good as a wink to a blind horse"; and that covers the case of "our member."

The misty hint of the Minister that he had a dim idea of touching up the government's special friends, the "big interests" was enough for him and he got back into the ranks of thick and thin government supporters. Speaking in the House on the proposal of Sir Robert Borden to create Sir George Perley overseas Minister of Militia for Canada, Mr. Burnham is reported in the House and as saying, that, though, he thought that the salary of $7,000 was "excessive-at this time,

"I will vote for it because we are on the eve of an election. . . I am willing to go it blind, and vote for it."

That's the kind of supporter for the kind of government we have. Peterborough's labour interests so dramatically appealed to will not be so easily appeased by Sir Thomas White's misty promise to conscript wealth as well as manhood. He is still hedging over the matter. On Friday night, in Parliament he hinted that "if" the war lasts; "if" the financial demands upon us are increased; "if" it appears there should be abnormal taxation upon abnormal profits—in a word, "if" the profiteers will consent to the conscription of abnormal profits, then, perhaps something will be done to make wealth, gained through Canada's agony and sacrifice in the war, bear a share; and it will have to be a mighty big share if it approximates to one-tenth of the sacrifice, a single conscripted Canadian soldier will have to make.

But so long as Sir Thomas White, who, by the way, is one of the most capable executives of the Cabinet, is more the Minister of the "big interests" than he is Minister of Finance; so long as the government is supported by "blind" abettors of proposals their conscience condemns, because, "we are on the eve of an election," so long will wealth get preference and exemption from war burdens and manhood be "soaked" to the bone.

The government has enacted conscription and will enforce it, perhaps and probably, as a party privilege, and the manhood of the country will probably enough come under its demands or—according to the spirit of its application—exactions. Manhoo is required to give its all, its life for Canada; but the government won't lay a finger upon wealth. It is truly said, by a writer in the Globe, an out and out conscription journal that,

"It is absurd for Sir Thomas that fails to tax excessive wealth, and which transfers to the consumers with small incomes the burden of war expenditure on which exempted profiteers have grown fabulously rich."

Can we expect a government, which in the enactment of conscription fails to place a part of the burden upon the broad back of wealth, to enforce it without "fear favour or affection"?

Fish is the only food which has not risen in price and the wise house wife will take advantage of this fact.

Progressive Club Has Forwarded 11 Bales of Comforts

During July the Peterborough Progressive Club sent to Miss Plummer, Captain of the Field Comforts Commission, 148 pairs of socks for the men in the trenches. Since March the Club has been able to forward 11 bales. These contained socks, hospital supplies and surgical dressings. They were divided between the Field Comforts Commission and the Moore Barracks Hospital. Some bales have been acknowledged while others are still on the way. The club also sewed for the local Red Cross Society. 50 pairs of pyjamas. The following letters to the Treasurer and Secretary of the Club will be read with much interest:

Canadian Field Comforts Commission, Moore Barracks, Shorncliffe.

July 18th. 1917.

Mrs. Morris, Treasurer Peterborough Progressive Club, Peterborough.

Dear Mrs. Morris,—Thank you very much for the ten dollars. Will you please convey our thanks to the lady who contributed this.

We are having a very good response to our appeal for money for special requests. This is a department of our work which is growing steadily, and the officers and men at the front seem so very grateful to have some one near at hand to whom they can send when they have a real need.

We have been busier this year than we have ever been before in the summer months; of course the much greater number of men in France makes a difference, but our supplies have been splendid, shipments coming in regularly, and large ones. We are now awaiting a shipment of about 300 pieces which is on its way from the docks.

The continual gratitude and appreciation which come all the time in the letters of acknowledgment make this work so very much worth while and we are so glad to be able to forward the things (socks etc.) for the women at home, and to know that they reach their men in the fighting line.

With best wishes to your Club,

Yours faithfully

MARY PLUMMER,
Captain, C.F.C.C.

To the Secretary, Progressive Club, Peterborough.

Dear Mrs. Cameron,—In future, instead of addressing the boxes for shipment to Captain Plummer, or Miss Arnoldi, please address to Officer 1—c, Canadian Field Comforts Commission, Moore Barracks, Shorncliffe, as we are told this will hasten delivery on the railways and docks. The Admiralty now give us shipments at fortnightly intervals, and we are allowed up to a very generous weight. It is not counted by pieces and our cases are unlimited as to size and weight.

We wish to draw your attention to our "Order Parcels." We are keeping a large stock of articles suitable for such parcels always on hand and on receipt of money and names of men to whom the parcels are to be sent, will be able to despatch them in a few days. So many articles can be bought cheaper over here at wholesale prices, for which we have very good arrangements, and we think that this department ought to be more widely known, as it saves filling up the ships with addressed parcels.

Captain Plummer and Miss Arnoldi have gone to France for a few days and will probably get some useful hints as to the needs of the troops.

Yours faithfully

LIEUT. E. W.
For Mary Plummer, Capt. C.E.F.C.

Sergeant Walter Miller Wounded On 2nd of Aug.

Sergeant Walter ("Giddy") Miller is officially reported wounded on August 2nd and received at No. 1 Casualty Clearing Hospital. The telegram to his wife and parents at 315 Bethune street announced that he had sustained a gun shot wound in the back. Sergeant Miller enlisted in the 93rd Battalion as a private and won his stripes on the field. He was transferred to the 4tth Battalion. His many friends in Peterborough will hope to hear that his injuries are not serious.

CRITICISM OF SIR ROBERT

one thing most necessary to consecrated national continuance in warwinning.

There are—as in every crisis—side-currents. Chief among these is the Rogers embroglio. There is a considerable faction of the Conservative membership, probably in fact, as indicated by the recent largely-signed testimonial, a majority, who are straight Rogerites. There is, however, a substantial minority who resent the dominance of Honorable "Bob" over the premier, and will never forgive the latter for his complicity in the appointing of what is known here as the "Whitewash Commission." There is likewise a small group who are deeply chagrined over the income tax proposals of Sir Thos. White, and the fact that men with substantial incomes are let off so easily.

The situation is quite acute. No organized steps have yet been taken, but the restive chagrin is amazingly general among Conservative members—they meet in the corridors and in their rooms and bitterly discuss their grievances. They declare that there will be a "show-down" with the Premier—that there must be one. Either Sir Robert must "get a gait on" and do something or he must quit. The insurgents talk of plain speech at the next party caucus. The impression seems to prevail, however, that things will come to a head as soon as the Premier starts to "reconstruct" his Cabinet.

WRECKED ZEPPEPLIN NOW IN NEW YORK

Machine Downed with its Crew in London Air Raid Subject of Customs Dispute.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—New Yorkers may soon see the remains of a Zeppelin shot down in one of the German raids over London. Custom House authorities gave up yesterday the attempt to classify for duty the wrecked airship and sent the papers to the Board of General Appraisers.

The wreckage, which in its fall carried to death a crew of more than thirty Germans, arrived in the hold of a cargo steamer in cases, excepting the sections too large to be boxed.

The tariff law makes no classification of airships, but under a ruling of the Treasury Department airships and aeroplanes may be entered under bonds for racing. The customs examiner reported that the Zeppelin in the form in which it reached New York, appeared to be composed almost wholly of steel and aluminum and recommended that duty be taken at 20 per cent., ad valorem, as 'manufacture of metal' not specially provided for."

Weekly Report On Farm Conditions

Fall Wheat Harvest is Well Under Way—Farm Labour

In some localities half of the fall wheat has been cut, while in other places harvesting of that grain is just beginning. The yield per acre is likely to be about an average. Winter rye is also a good crop. Some barley has also been harvested, having come along with a rush during the last two or three weeks of hot weather. It will be a good crop. Oats promise a bumper yield, although owing to the great length of stray there is much danger of the crop lodging should heavy rains come before cutting. Peas are also well spoken of.

The new fall wheat area is likely to be restricted by the lateness of harvesting generally, and the great scarcity of labour. At present the soil is very hard for ploughing, owing to heavy rains having pounded the earth during the first part of the season, and the dry and intensely hot weather prevailing for the past few weeks.

Potatoes are doing better than was expected a week or two ago, as the fine weather has checked the blight considerably. Many farmers also have been using Bordeaux mixture.

Roots of all kinds are doing well, mare especially turnips.

Hay Crop.

The hay crop is heavier than was expected, and the quality of the later cutting is good. The main portion of the crop is cut and stored. The second cutting of alfalfa is under way.

Cherry and raspberry picking has been general during the week, but owing to the scarcity of pickers some of the fruit will have to be left untouched.

Live Stock.

The general condition of live stock is first-class, apart from the discomfort of heat and flies. Comparatively few animals of any class have changed hands during the week.

Pastures have been so affected by the very dry and hot weather of the latter part of July that the falling off in the yield of milk is most noticeable.

Farm Labour.

Farm help continues to be very scarce, but the open weather has been favourable for croc cutting and saving, and for general farm work. Some of the reports complain of the high rates of wages asked by some whose quality of work is indifferent. Applications for the use of Government tractors are many times more than can be filled.

BREAD CARDS NECESSARY.

PARIS, Aug. 9.—The impending bread cards which will be introduced in Paris probably in October will be necessitated in part by the unprecedented bad weather prevailing during the last several weeks, which has affected the crops.

U. S. QUICKLY SOLVING THE TONNAGE PROBLEM

FRENCH WAR MINISTER EXPRESSES SUPREME CONFIDENCE IN THE ALLIES' POWER TO WIN.

LONDON, Aug. 9.—Paul Painleve, the French Minister of War, according to the Evening Standard, said before leaving London at the conclusion of the Entente allied conference: "America is quickly solving the tonnage problems and will become a fruitful field for airplanes, machinery, steel and food. She already has sent many specialists and is sending more, especially airmen and engineers. "Then, in time for the decisive battles will come her great armies. Together the British American and French armies will exert continuous pressure on the enemy with staggering blows at such intervals as the high commands think fit.

"The Russian trouble will pass. We must be calm and patient. Complete accord in aim exists between the entente allies and their determination is strong. Together, without faltering, we will overcome the enemy in sanquinary battle until the day comes when we, laying down our arms, will be able to say. "Our task is over. Justice will now reign between the free nations."

"All Frenchmen are now in the fighting line or in war workshops, and French blood has been prodigally shed on the battlefields. The whole French nation accepts the prolongation of the war as a rude duty, but a duty which must be faced so long as the war is not brought to a point required by liberty and justice.

"British and French soldiers know that success is certain and that it depends only upon the valor and steadiness of themselves and their allies."

CONGRESS MAY GO ON LECTURE TOUR

AMERICAN LAWMAKERS TO ENLIGHTEN PEOPLE ON CAUSES OF WAR.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—Congress may go on a lecture tour when it finishes work here to enlighten every section of the country on the need for prosecuting the war vigorously, not only as a war for world democracy, but as fight for American rights and preservation.

President Wilson himself may "do his bit" in the same direction, possibly by a speech on some occasion or by a letter to congressional leaders.

Plans were in a nebulous state today but all the under current in official quarters was toward such a move. Congress leaders were talking of virtually putting every Representative and Senator to go through his district during the recess, speaking on the part of the United States in the war.

Those who favour the plan point out that the country is hearing many agitators who oppose the draft and participation in the war. They think that fathers and mothers who are giving sons to the colours should hear something on the other side of the question, and from official sources.

DUTCH. RIDICULE GERMAN CHIVALRY

Newspapers Disply U-Boat Murder In Parallel Column with Pastoral Letter.

Amsterdam, Aug. 9.—Dutch newspapers print in a parallel column with an account of the murder of the crew of the British steamship Belgian Prince a Berlin telegram giving the followig extract from a pastoral letter read in all the Protesant churches of Berlin last Sunday:

'We will comport ourselves as Christians toward our enemies and conduct the war in the future as in the past wih humility and chivalry."

The pastoral letter was read at a service which Emperor William and the German Empress attended at the Cathedral. It exhorts the people to humanity and recognizes the hand of God in the protection from invasion which the Fatherland has enjoyed.

The British steamship Belgian Prince was sunk July 31 by a German submarine. According to survivors who reached a British port the Germans removed the lifebelts and outer clothing of all the members of the crew except eight, smashed the lifeboats with axes, and then re-entered the submarine and closed the hatches, leaving the men on deck. The submarine travelled on the surface for about two miles and then submerked. Thirty-eight of the crew were drowned. Three others were rescued by a patrol boat.

AUTOMOBILE AND BUGGY COLLIDED

P. C. Lawrence reported last night an accident on Hunter street east in which an automobile driven by Leo Phelan collided with a buggy containing Mr. and Mrs. Weeks. The lamps went out and the car was slowed down and an effort made to relight them. In the meantime the buggy approached and a collision resulted. Mr. Phelan had not turned out from the centre of the road.

An adjustment of damages will be made to-night.

When taking gelatine or blancmange out of a mould, immerse the latter in a pan of hot water for an instant.

THINKS MEN ARE TOO LIGHT

The local committee which has been delegated to recruit one hundred men for service on the farms, is highly satisfied with the result. The one hundred volunteers will be readily obtained and it remains for the farmer to come in and make his selection. This morning one farmer stopped long enough to remark that he doubted whether one half of the number referred to would ever reach the farms. In his opinion the wages asked by the majority of applicants are too high. This particular farmer deprecated the idea of store clerks and others attempting to do anything like a man's work on a farm. When asked what he thought of the wages that were being asked, he laughed, and drove on.

Conduct Of Sir George Perley's Office Under Criticism By Mr. Coleman Who Visited It

The parliamentary discussion of Sir George Perley and Canada's official representation overseas, lends a timely interest to the following letter from Mr. Chas. Coleman, who recently returned from England. He makes the charge that the Canadian office in London is inefficient, is disinterested in the applicants for information and is even out of touch with present-day affairs. The letter follows:

Sir,—At this particular time, when the vote of credit for Sir George Perley is taking place, I thought a few impressions of the administration of the offices of the High Commissioner of Canada would not be out of place. While I am out for a win-the-war policy, and am most anxious to avoid saying or doing anything to embarass the Borden government, yet I feel it my duty, experiencing as I have, at the hands of those in charge of Sir George Perley's offices in London. A kind of treatment far from satisfactory. And I am sure if Sir Robert Borden wishes to insist on having efficient service in all departments at home or overseas, I can assure him and Canadians, generlly that there is lot of room for improvement at 19 Victoria street.

When applying for endorsation of my passport I found the British government telling me I was expected to work and not slack as a win-the-war slogan; also to travel as little as possible, but at the Canadian Office, through the indifference and lack of interest I was told I should have to get my discharge. I could have done this only three or four weeks before leaving the country, and would mean that I would be idle during that time, instead of remaining at work until a day or two before departing.

Moreover, through being unable to obtain plain and explicit advice, I was compelled to travel up to London from Woolwich arsenal several times at great inconvenience and loss of time, when men of my ability were needed in the worst way.

Incivility, lack of courtesy and interest in the people applying for information at the Canadian Office appeared to be its usual atmosphere. When I complained and said I should report the matter on my return to Canada I was told that they did not care a damn, and "I suppose the Imperial Government will worry." I replied to the effect that I understood that I was talking to Canadian officials. I should not have complained personally, but as far as I could see and hear the same kind of treatment was being dished out to many others of both sex. I heard women complaining at not getting good advice and having to go to and from several times from Canadian to foreign office. I saw two or three ladies nearly crying because they failed to get good advice as to how to proceed. Also to my surprise from what I heard on the boat coming out, I found complaints quite general. In fact have yet to hear any compliments, and this from people who are not, as a rule, guilty of finding fault. I also found the same complaints from a most worthy and highly esteemed man who has just arrived to take up a high position in Toronto. He thought, from the treatment he got, that Sir George Perley had too much to do, and did not see that others did it, or that he was very indifferent about how things were run.

Chas. Coleman.

Lubin Said To Be In Montreal

Man Who Operated in Peterboro' Is Still at Large

(Lindsay Warder.)

Lubin, the young man who cut quite a figure around Lindsay for several weeks, afterwards hurriedly leaving the town with a number of creditors in his wake, has again been heard from. This time in Montreal, Quebec.

At Montreal, Lubin succeeded in cashing a cheque for $18, payable at the Standard Bank, Lindsay, and made out to one Daoust, of Montreal. Evidently Lubin possesses a Standard Bank Cheque book and secured some person in Montreal to identify him.

Lubin, who has also used the name of Webber and Laurent, has operated in Lindsay, Fenelon Falls, Peterboro, Kingston and Montreal, to the knowledge of the police of Lindsay, and perhaps has succeeded in playing the same game in other towns and cities.

Chief Short immediately got in communication with the Montreal police, and acquainted them with the lawless doings of Mr. Lubin. It is expected that ere long he will be in the toils.

Couldn't Have Done Greater Kindness

Mrs. Wellington Will Always Thank Friend Who Told Her About Tanlac

"My friend who persuaded me to take Tanlac couldn't have done me a greater kindness, for now I'm feeling like a different woman and sincerely hope my statement will be the cause of others finding relief," said Mrs. Alice Wellington, who resides at 142 James street, Hamilton a few days ago.

"I was in a general run-down condition, nervous, weak and dizzy," continued Mrs. Wellington. "I suffered with something like gastric indigestion, had frightful pains in my stomach, and what I would eat seemed to do me no good. My head ached terribly and I had such awful pains through by temples and forehead I thought I would go destracted. My blood became so thin that my skin was all covered with some kind of rash that tormented me day and night. I was as nervous as a cat, couldn't stand any kind of noise, and even if I heard a dog bark it would upset me so I would almost have to go to bed. I would roll and toss all night never getting much rest and would get up in the morning all tired out. I never felt like doing my work and every time I stooped over I would turn so blind and dizzy I would almost fall. I had a drowsy, sluggish feeling and yet I could hardly sleep at night at all.

"I suffered this way so long and tried so many different kinds of medicines without getting any relief that I was getting discouraged and out of heart. I took twelve bottles of one kind of modicine and it did me no more good than that much water. A lady friend told me one day about Tanlac doing her so much good that I decided to try it, and there's where the long lane turned. I bought a bottle of Tanlac and have been on the road to recovery ever since. I wake up in the mornings now feeling rested and refreshed and it's a pleasure for me to do my housework. I sleep better than I have in a long time and all that tired, lazy feeling is gone. My appetite and stomach have improved until I can eat hearty of anything I want without the least trouble afterwards. No kind of noise disturbs me now because my nerves are strong and steady and all my pains and headaches have disappeared. The rash that worried me so is so nearly gone that I hardly notice it any more. I have gained several pounds in weight and as I said before I'm feeling like a different woman. A medicine that will do so much for suffering people is worth recommending to the public and it's a pleasure for me to make this statement."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by Warne Drug Co., Ltd.

Sees Russia Soon As Strong As Ever

Charles H. Boynton, Just Returned From There, Has Confidence in Government and Army

New York, August 9. — Charles H. Boynton, president of the American-Russian Chamber of Commerce of this city, has just returned to New York from Petrograd, where he went the first part of the year. Mr. Boynton, who has had exceptional opportunities of meeting the leaders of Russian thought and of analyzing Russian conditions, has absolute confidence in the political restoration of Russia on substantial lines and that the army will soon be restored to full discipline. In outlining his views Mr. Boynton said:

"That the Provisional Government in Russia will endure and come from its recent serious political contention stronger than at any time since its establishment is my confident belief. Every individual, who has the welfare of the Russian nation and her people sincerely at heart should encourage that government by sympathetic as well as material aid to steer a course that it will pass through the Scylla of counter revolution and the re-establishment of autocracy on the one hand and of the Charybdis of German intrigue and propaganda on the other hand.

"Up to the time of the last Ministerial crisis there was no government—and by government I mean a body capable of forcing its decrees and decisions even against an opposing armed force. A strong, dominating individuality had to take the helm or, the license being allowed, political propaganda of a dangerous type would have endangered the conservative, patriotic and better element of Russia in its efforts to bring a substantial dependable democracy to that huge nation.

"Premier Kerensky is the man of the hour—not that he is more courageous, more self-sacrificing, and more capable than many others in the Cabinet, but because from his position in life before the revolution he is trusted by both the army and the people not to betray them. I believe he has formed a coalition government, which will have the support and respect of 75 per cent. of the Russian people, the other 25 per cent. being composed of antagonistic political parties of extreme anarchistic, and counter-revolutionary tendencies.

"While the recent military movements have clearly demonstrated weak spots in the army, the fact that discipline is even partially restored, and that improvement goes on steadily is a source of the deepest gratification to the Russian who knew that two months ago any military operations whatever would have been impossible. I notice that the same sort of seditious propaganda is being attempted among our people that had such a temporary success in the army and navy of Russia, where ignorance gave it fertile ground. Men are being urged to resist the draft, to disobey the law, to refuse to fight, and intimations are made that German rule would be better than the existing order of things. Here our people are too intelligent to be seriously affected by such propaganda, but in Russia the change in the government, the ignorance of the soldiers of all governmental affairs, and other suddenly developed conditions, permitted a temporary success.

"It has taken time to bring the discordant and ignorant elements into something like harmony and it will take more time than yet has passed, but each crisis makes a stronger, conservative situation, and there will soon appear an orderly and responsible government, which will take its proper place in the councils of the Allies. I believe that a coalition Cabinet will be followed by a coalition Duma, formed from the old Duma and the members of the present Workmen's and Soldiers' Delegates. Such a step will be another great for ward movement in formulating the future political status of Russia."

BAND WILL GO TO FENELON FALLS

The Temple Band will pay their annual visit to Fenelon Falls this week end, leaving Peterborough at 5.35 Saturday evening. An hour or so in Lindsay will be spent in entertaining the citizens there. Fenelon Falls are having their Civic Holiday Monday in honour of the Band's visit.

Captain Foster and Wilfred McElhiney who are yet in the hospital, are doing nicely.

TORONTO MEN REACH LINDSAY

A Party of Twenty-five Men Available For Farm Work

(Lindsay Warder)

About twenty-five men and boys from Toronto, the majority of whom belong to Wm. Davies Co., and who have been released to help the farmers harvest their crop, are in Lindsay. About ten of these came in Wednesday night and the balance Thursday morning. Mr. Knight of the Department of Agriculture, was caught unprepared, but has succeeded in placing a number on farms throughout the vicinity at the wages they demand, namely, $45 a month and board. However, the rest are as yet unable to find employers who are willing to engage them at this figure. The farmers argue that inexperienced labour is not worth this price, while the men declare that the farmers should be only too glad to get help at any price and should not expect a man to work for less than they get in the city. It is to be hoped that they can come to some satisfactory agreement with the farmers as no doubt their assistance would be of great value at this critical time.

Peterboro' Students Were Successful

Local Students in Pass Junior Matriculation Examinations

The following list contains the names of the Peterborough candidates who were successful in whole or in part on the pass junior matriculation examination. Normal entrance candidates who were also candidates for matriculation have been considered in the results.

In Group I, under each county has given the names of all candidates who have obtained complete matriculation by passing on the twelve required examination papers, which are as follows:—English, Literature, English, Composition, British and Canadian History Ancient History, Algebra, Geometry, Latin Authors, Latin Composition, together with the four papers in any two of the following subjects:—Experimental Sciences (Physics and Chemistry) French (Authors and Composition), German (Authors and Composition), Greek (Authors and Composition).

In Group II., under each county are given the names of those who have passed on at least nine of the papers required for complete matriculation and have obtained the minimum required on the whole examination. They have, therefore, failed in not more than three papers. These papers are indicated in brackets after the candidates' names. Full particulars will be shown on their certificates. In order to complete their matriculation they must pass on all the papers indicated, at one examination, the standard for pass being forty per cent. of the marks assigned to each paper.

In Group III., under each county are given the names of all those candidates who have failed to obtain the minimum required on the whole examination, but who have obtained forty per cent. on each of at least eight papers, with an average of sixty per cent. on the same. Such candidates have been awarded partial matriculation, and in order to complete their matriculation must obtain at one examination forty per cent. on each of the remaining papers, with an average of sixty per cent. on the same. The papers required for complete arts matriculation are indicated in brackets after the names of the candidates. Candidates for matriculation into the Faculty of Applied Science who have obtained pass standing on at least eight papers, with an average of sixty per cent. on the same, are reported in this list. The honour standing of such candidates in mathematics will be found in the honour matriculation results.

An Immense Task Confronts The New Russian Cabinet

LONDON, Aug. 9.—Special despatches from Petrograd reviewing the construction of the new Ministry agree that although it is not ideal, it probably is as strong as circumstances permit and on the whole satisfactory. All refer to the immensity of the task confronting it, the first necessity being the restoration of order and discipline in the army, the present condition of which warrants the greatest anxiety. Internal disorganization is hardly less serious.

One correspondent refers to factories being brought one by one to a partial standstill owing to a lack of fuel, which is due to a lack of transportation, while lengthening lines waiting at shop doors murmur apprehensively of the coming winter. The same writer refers to Premier Kerensky as "turning for advice to the aged grandmother of the revolution, Catharine Breshkovskaya," in the tremendous burden of responsibility he has undertaken.

The decision of M. Tseretelli to remain outside the Ministry as a connecting link between the Government and the Workmen's and Soldiers' Council is mainly approved, and his appeal to the latter to abandon the domestic class war and range themselves around the Government to save the country is warmly commended.

It is believed he will have great influence in inducing the Workmen's and Soldiers' Council to strengthen Premier Kerensky, whose maintenance at the head of the Administration is regarded as of paramount importance. If Kerensky fails, one correspondent says, Russian democracy will receive a blow from which it will hardly recover.

Wednesday the first of the three "liberty loan" days in Russia, proved a great success. Automobiles paraded the streets of the capital, and decorated booths were installed in the principal thoroughfares for the sale of the war bonds.

Not Only Firemen But Police Too Are Food Producers

The concluding reference to the farm work of the firemen in their spare hours in which it was observed that they were not spending their leisure in automobiles seems to have prompted the members of the police force to bare the private activities of their hours at home. It was even intimated that there was a sting for the policemen in the tail of the innocent articles revealing a sensitiveness that is unexpected of the force.

True several of their members have reached the opulent or at least prosperous stage of which the automobile is accepted as convincing proof, but there are hundreds of cars in town whirling joy riders the police can scarcely hope to emulate. Hence the assurance is offered that there was no reflection intended upon Chief Thompson's men, and their record as individual producers would counteract any impression if it were created.

Hence if Chief Howard's men have been contrbiuting to the greater production movement, listen to the accomplishment from the Water street headquarters:

The Chief and eight policemen are working 12 1-4 acres of vegetables; they have 360 fowls and 13 pigs; they have been helping friends take the crop off 75 acrets and have promised ti help in several other cases. Incidentally it might be remarked that Detectives Newhall and Sergeant Kidd are something of experts in particular lines and having mentioned these members others, not excluding the Chief, have records that place the police securely in the position of producers.

Top of marning to ye, Mrs. Murphy. Same to you Mrs. Maloney an' sure its illegant weather we're having.

Where's the procession goin' this mornin'? Sure such a crowd I never see.

Oh, now! Didn't ye hear? They're going to Paskin's store to get next week's supply of vegetables. They're selling cabbage at 2c each and carrots and beets 3c a bunch; also cauliflower at 4c each.

Oh! you don't say. Sure I must get some of those cause my old man is so fond of green stuff, he says that's why he married me. Sure, when I want him home from the club, I put on last week's cabbage water to bite and the smell fetches him every time.

Well now you'll want to quick, or they'll be sold out, and they're giving away an Art Kitchen reminder, with every dollar order.

Oh Gee! Come one let's go now.

No More Medical Men Available in Britain

LONDON, Aug. 10.—The Earl of Derby, Secretary of State for War, was informed by the Central Medical War Committee that no more medical men are available for army commissions without "seriously endangering the supply of doctors for the civil community. The committee's announcement was made after a thorough canvass conducted by it.

Members of the committee to-day expressed the hope that the solution of the difficulty will be found in a supply of doctors from the United States, saying that they believed that thousands of medical men there are willing to come to Europe.

CANADIANS MAY TRAIN IN TEXAS.

NEW YORK, Aug. 10—Official announcement was made by the British recruiting mission that Lieutenant H. B. Denton, in charge of recruiting for the Royal Flying Corps, will go to Texas soon to lay out an aviation camp for the Canadians.

GERMANS WEAR THE SHOES.

Relatives of French Soldiers Prisoners in Germany warned against Sending Footwear.

Paris, August 9.—The war office to-day advised relatives of French soldiers held prisoners in Germany, not to send leather shoes to them. The Germans confiscate the shoes, and none of them reach the prisoners.

Where Can You Match Feinberg Shoe Values

Saturday will be another chance to buy summer shoes at unmatchable prices.

Feinberg's Shoe Store, with the red front, opposite Turner & Sons, will offer hundreds of attractive Shoe Values all day Saturday.

THE CAR SHORTAGE

Consignees Can Help by Ordering Full Carloads

The railways solicit consignees' co-operation in their endeavor to provide all their patrons with a satisfactory freight car supply.

Consignees Can Help by Ordering Full Carloads.

Many consignees never order more than the minimum authorized under the tariffs and classification. The result is an economical waste which reduces the efficiency of the railways and the public suffers.

To increase the average car loading by 1 ton, would be equivalent to placing 10,960 additional freight cars in service in Canada.

To fully load cars would go a long way towards solving our transportation difficulties.

Railways realize that some consignees cannot always order full carloads, but they are requested to help by ordering in as large units as possible.

A Car Saved Is a Car Gained.

The difference between minimum loads and full loads of certain standard commodities is given herewith:

Flour shipped in 214 lb. barrels. Minimum load 210 bbls.: A 30 ton car will hold 300 bbls., a 40 ton car will hold 315 bbls. 98 lb. sacks. Minimum load 459 sacks: A 30 ton car will hold 673 sacks, a 40 ton car will hold 900 sacks.

Sugar shipped in 100 lb. sacks. Minimum load 300 sacks: A 30 ton car will hold 660 sacks, a 40 ton car will hold 940 sacks.

Cement shipped in 87½ lb. sacks. Minimum load 457 sacks: A 30 ton car will hold 754 sacks, a 40 ton car will hold 1074 sacks.

Nails shipped in 107 lb. kegs. Minimum load 236 kegs: A 30 ton car will hold 616 kegs, a 40 ton car will hold 878 kegs.

Consignees Can Help by Promptly Releasing Cars.

To most consignees such an appeal is unnecessary—they do not delay cars under load. There are others however, who appear to be satisfied if they release cars in what is known as "free time." Again, there are others who hold cars in storage service for weeks, and such consignees are largely responsible for car shortages and terminal congestion.

A recent check of cars placed for unloading and held by consignees at some of the stations on one of the railways showed 700 cars delayed an average of twelve days. Had these cars been released within even five days they would have made nearly 1,400 trips, and would have handled about 35,000 tons of freight. 2,615 other cars unloaded within three days could have been placed for delivery on the tracks occupied by these 700 delayed cars.

The railways do not want their cars to earn demurrage, but want them employed in carrying freight.

A Rolling Car Gathers No Demurrage.

If consignees will order freight from shippers so as to increase the average loading by 5 tons per car, and if they will reduce the average delay in unloading by 24 hours, it will prevent car shortages.

In Co-Operation There Is Efficiency.

Brantford Has Profit On Potato Transaction

MUNICIPALITY MAY SPEND $50,000 FOR FOOD AND FUEL.

BRANTFORD, Aug. 10—At a special meeting of the City Council last night, Ald. Macbride submitted a detailed statement of the city's recent transaction in seed potatoes, involving the purchase and sale of two carloads of potatoes to the citizens of Brantford, with all accounts collected. A balance of $28.25 remains at the present time in the hands of the City Treasurer as a result of the deal.

The council in committee as a whole amended the by-law authorising the municipality to enter into the food and fuel business, limiting the sum to be borrowed and expended in this matter of $50,000. This action was taken in accordance with a stipulation by the Ontario Railway and Municipal Board, that a definite sum be fixed before the by-laws was approved by them.

Slayer of Leitch Sure of Recovery

Doctors Pronounce Wm. Bennett to be Improving—Remains in Passive Mood.

RENFREW, Aug. 10.— It is learned from the doctors attending William Bennett the slayer of Bruce Leitch, who lies in Victoria Hospital, wounded in by his own hand, that his recovery is now certain, although he will remain disfigured. He never mentions the tragedy and remains in a passive, contemplative mood.

WHEN CANNON SWELLED

Experiences of Gunners While Protecting Infantry Rushes

A British gunner writes from the front as follows: "At last, the day dawned and, after an early cup of tea, we started to dispatch a few more specimens of English metal into the enemy lines. For a couple of hours, we (as well as every other battery in the line) poured a ceaseless stream of metal upon the poor 'blighters' waiting for our infantry attack. In the gun pits, stripped to the waist, with sweat running down us and covered in oil and dirt, we do some record firing. Deaf, owing to the terrific noise and concussion, smarting eyes where the lachrymatory gas had penetrated under our masks, strained faces due to lack of sleep; but, withal, a look of satisfaction on every face.

"We got the signal to pause for a minute, as the infantry is going 'over the top.' The London Terriers (London Scots, Rifle Brigade, etc.) who were in front of us, went steadily across, and in exactly 30 minutes from the time of starting had penetrated the enemy's fourth line of trenches. As they got nearer the German lines, the latter rushed out and threw up their hands, but on the Terriers went to the next trench, though not without bestowing a kick on the tender part of the 'blighters' anatomy, leaving them for those who followed. We started firing again at a longer range, and worked like demons as our range gradually crept up, and the fuses were lengthened accordingly, for we knew our men were going on rapidly. We set up a cheer when we knew they had reached the fourth line of trenches.

"At one time we reached such a rapid rate of firing, that water had to be poured down the muzzles of the guns to cool them. All that came out the other end was—steam, and, the steel of the breech expanding, we had to force the breech open after each shell with a stave of wood. At length the guns became so hot that one could hardly stand near them, let alone touch them. The steel, of course, expanding under the heat stopped the gun from sliding back into its proper place after the recoil. Two of the guns in our battery were thus compelled reluctantly to 'cease fire' till they cooled down a bit."

HOW TO CAN MEATS

Hints For Home Canning of Vegetables and Meats

The "cold pack" method of canning consists of putting the vegetables or meat cold into a clean cold can or glass sealer and these are placed in a boiler and water added half way up or some cover the cans or jars. They are almost sealed tight and sterilising is proceeded with. In the case of meat there is a shrinkage of about 17 per cent. and in order to have the jars full it is well to boil the meat for about 20 minutes in the open with enough water added to make up for the shrinkage which takes place and when the cans are filled they remain full. For home canning glass jars are the best unless they are put up for sale. A quart sealer costs five times as much as a quart can but it may be used five times and more before being broken. In the case of meat, corn, peas and even beans it is safer to use pint jars, although quarts will succeed if sterilising is well done.

Apple Fritters

One and one-third cupfuls of flour, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, one-fourth teaspoonful of salt, two-thirds cupful of milk and one egg. Mix gradually and egg (well beaten). Into this batter stir two or three apples which have been pared, cored, quartered and sliced. Drop by spoonfuls and fry in deep fat. Serve with lemon sauce. Apples may be chopped and added to batter, if preferred.

Rice Pudding

Allow three tablespoons of washed rice to one quart of milk. Stir in four tablespoons of sugar and turn into a baking dish. Bake in a slow oven for four or five hours.

Potato Sticks

Pare and slice potatoes in long thin strips. Lay in water for half an hour. Drain carefully and fry in deep, boiling fat.

We all talk too much—because there is so much to talk about.

No popular writer is a genius to his stenographer.

RAEMAEKERS IS ANXIOUS TO SHOW UP BRUTAL BOCHE

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Louis Raemaekers famous Dutch cartoonist on whose head the Kaiser set a price of 12,000 marks for showing up the Hun in all his frightfulness is in America and will attempt to rouse Americans to a full sense of the "brutal Boche" driving home his argument with his powerful cartoons.

Raemaekers arrived at an American port recently after playing hide and seek with the German spy system at London and evading U-boats whose commanders had orders to "get" him.

When seen at the Vanderbilt Hotel he told how he evaded the Germans, who were intent on preventing him reaching America.

He remained in London for several days, then jumped over to France, where he apparently sailed on at least a dozen vessels bound for the United States. He would board a vessel late at night. The German spies, seeing him go aboard would feel satisfied they had him cornered but early the next morning a few minutes before the ship sailed Raemaekers would quietly slip ashore and embark on another vessel. In this way he managed to keep the spies on a wild goose chase and eventually sailed unobserved.

BLIGHT ON EUROPE.

Raemaekers told the United Press how German and "kultur" blighted Europe.

"If the Kaiser tried to stop the war to-day I believe the people would depose him," he declared. "They abused him before the war for not starting one when he alone knew Germany was not quite prepared. Blood and iron are drilled into the German people from childhood. And now by a system of atrocities, they are trying to bring about the moral and physical collapse of their opponents to make war so cruel that it will be shortened."

Raemaekers became furious as he discussed Germany. His blue eyes seemed to flash fire. He paced the floor, emphasising his argument by pounding his fists on tables and chairs.

"Germans do not talk about the atrocities committed by their men," he said. "They are too terrible. Yet they are right now planning organised sympathy, for after the war. My idea is to conduct a trial after the war. A just trial where every man's guilt will be tried, just like any criminals. Let no spirit of revenge prevail, but mete out to every man the punishment he deserves for the part he played in the outrage. The German spy system is more perfect than their army. Every man is a potential spy."

Asked if he did not feel apprehensive for his personal safety, Raemaekers shrugged his shoulders. "I am armed" he replied. "Again, if they murder me it will only accentuate, only spread what I am trying to teach."

Raemaekers is in America for an indefinite stay.

An old bachelor says the average wait of women is until they are asked.

Directions For Canning Vegetables

The following directions for canning vegetables has been supplied by the Department of Agriculture:

ROOT AND TUBER VEGETABLES.

Carrots, Parsnips, Beets, and Sweet Potatoes.

Wash thoroughly. Scald in boiling water sufficiently to loosen skin. Plunge quickly into cold water. Scrape or pare to remove skin. Pack into jars whole or cut in sections or cubes. Add boiling water and one level teaspoonful of salt to the quart. Place rubbers on tops in position. Partially seal, but not tight. (Cap and tip tin cans).

Sterilize 90 minutes in hot water bath.

Remove jars. Tighten covers. Invert to cool and test joints. Wrap jars in paper to prevent bleaching and store.

Note.—In canning beets, if vinegar is added to the water in the proportion of one part vinegar to four of water, the natural bright colour will be preserved.

Hot Water Bath Canning Outfit.

These are manufactured commercially, but may be adapted from a new wash boiler with a frame for holding the jars. A deep pail, a kettle, or any other container which is at least six inches deeper than a quart jar, and which has a close fitting cover, makes an excellent home canner when equipped with some means of preventing the jars from resting directly on the bottom. Wire frames with bail handles can be obtained. After placing the jars in the canner, surround them with warm water, reaching to within one inch from the tops of the jars. Do not have the water hot enough to break the jars.

Some people are away up in the social scale because they are too light to bring it down.

OBITUARY

MRS. SAMUEL SHERIN

Sarah Ann Roseborough, relict of the late Samuel Sherin died yesterday at the family residence, Lakefield, ager 78 years. Mrs. Sherin has been ill for several months and three weeks ago took a turn for the worse. She was born in Smith township and has resided in Lakefield practically all her life. Always a kindly neighbour and faithful friend her death will cause widespread sorrow amongst those who knew her. She leaves to mourn her loss two sons, Wesley, of Lakefield, and Bert of Maryland, and two daughters, Nina, of Lakefield, and Alice of Toronto. The funeral, from the family residence will take place on Saturday afternoon to the Lakefield cemetery.

WEDDING BELLS

BAIRD—ARMSTRONG.

The Trinity Church parsonage was the scene of a quiet, but pretty wedding, on Wednesday afternoon, Aug. the 8th, at 2 o'clock, when Anna Pearl, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Armstrong of this city was united in marriage to Mr. James Baird of Toronto. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Mr. Wilson. The young couple left on the 3.47 train for Toronto and points west. The bride received many handsome presents, including a cabinet of silver from the Primer Department of the C.G.E.

Marriages Valid, But Husband Liable

OTTAWA, Aug. 10.—The clause in the Military Service Act which says that any man married after the 5th July, 1917, shall be deemed to be unmarried, appears to have been misconstrued in some quarters. Letters received from clergymen indicate that marriages have fallen off as a result. Apparently would-be contracting parties have come to the conclusion that marriages after the 5th of July are invalid. This is, of course, absurb. The object of the clause is to provide that unmarried men may not avoid being called out in that class for military service by reason of marriage after that date, 5th day of July.

BAD STORM AT KINMOUNT.

Cash Wheat Prices Unchanged

Prices Off Yesterday—The Cattle Market

There were no changes in the cash quotations yesterday except on the grades below Nos. 1 and 2 northerns, which moved up one and two cents. Trading is almost negligible in the options, owing to the action of the Hoover commission in the States in announcing that the Government is prepared to take over the entire crop of 1917. The September option at Chicago went off 11 cents at the close below Saturday's close. The October at Winnipeg went off five cents.

Manitoba wheat—No. 1 Northern, $2.40; No. 2 northern, $2.40; nominal, store, Fort William; No. 3, $2.38; No. 4, $2.30.

Manitoba oats—No. 2, 78c., track, bay ports.

American corn—Nominal; not quoted.

Ontario oats—No. 2 white, not quoted.

Ontario wheat— No. 2 winter, per car lots, $2.55 to $2.60; No. 3 winter, $2.53 to $2.58, according to freight outside; new crop, $2.25, nominal.

Peas—No. 2, nominal.

Buckwheat—Nominal.

Rye—No. 2 nominal.

Manitoba flour —First patents in jute bags, $12.90; second patents, $12.40; strong bakers, $12.

Ontario flour—Winter, according to sample, $11.20; track, Toronto, prompt shipment.

Mill feed—Car lots, delivered, Montreal, shorts, $45; bran, $36; feed flour, per bag, $3.25; middlings, $47 to $48.

Hay — Baled, track, Toronto, car lots, No. 2, $11.50 to $12; mixed, $9 to $11; straw, $9.

Cattle Markets.

Union Stock Yards—Receipts, 231 cars, with 4,526 cattle, 277 calves, 1,238 hogs and 1,937 sheep and lambs.

With a record run for this season of over 4,500 head of cattle, prices were forced down from 20 to 30c. on the ordinary grades of medium and good butcher steers and heifers. Trade was fairly active, but with such a big run, and a large proportion of very good quality, it was inevitable that prices must give way. The decline was on the butcher grades alone. For the heavy steers for export prices were firm with last week, a couple of extra choice loads topping the amrket at $12.65, one load at $12.30, and several par loads at $12 to $12.15.

There was a heavy run of lambs yesterday and the market was from $2 to $2.50 lower than the middle of last week.

Hogs were quoted firm at $2.25, fed and watered, and $12.35 paid in some cases.

Naval Aeroplanes Bring Down Two German Machines

One Was a Gotha Machine and the Other a Seaplane—Aerial Defences More Efficient—Fleets of Machines in Waiting —Fire of Anti-Aircraft Guns Excellent

LONDON, Aug. 14.—Two of the German machines which Sunday evening raided the English south-east coast watering places were destroyed by British naval airplanes. The official statement issued by the Government says that one of the machines was a Gotha airplane and the other a seaplane.

Reports from various local correspondents indicate the probability that the German airplane raid Sunday would have been more serious, but for the preparedness of the British defence. British airplanes at the first intimation of the enemy's approach from all points, climbed upwards at a terrific pace at daring angles, with the result that before the Germans arrived fleets of British machines were in waiting.

OPERATIONS WERE NULLIFIED

The activity of the airplanes and the excellent fire from anti-aircraft guns appears to have nullified the attempted operations of the invaders virtually everywhere except at Southend. There are many stories of scattered flights of the Germans to avoid risking engagements with the defenders. The weather was bright and fine with a strong westerly wind, which, perhaps, was less favorable at the great height the raiders travelled.

It appears that the largest section of the invading squadron operated over the Thames Estuary, but the circumstance which resulted in Southend being the chief victim are not apparent. The town was full of holiday-makers, numbers of whom were only visitors for the day. Many of these were on the way to the railway station to take a train for London when the bombing began, and there were many casualties among them. One bomb alone killed seven persons and wounded many others.

GERMANS AVOIDED FIGHTS

Elsewhere the people who remained in the street instead of taking cover were the chief sufferers. Hundreds were thrown to the ground by the concussions, but all escaped serious injury. Reports from Deal, Ramsgate, and other coast towns say that the main result of the air raid warning was to draw crowds to the sea fronts to watch the invaders.

Thanks to the promptness of the British airplanes in attacking the raiders, all these places escaped and the onlookers saw aerial battles, though at a dim distance. None of these fights seems to have been prolonged or, as far as is known, to have resulted seriously for the invaders, whose plan seemed to be to avoid fights in order to insure a safe return to their base.

ARMY NURSES ARE TO GET THE FRANCHISE

Every Soldier Will Have a Vote—Minister of Justice Introduces Important Bill in House of Commons —Take Vote Overseas

Ottawa, Aug. 14.—Hon. C. G. Doherty, Minister of Justice, yesterday afternoon introduced a bill entitled "The Military Voters Act of 1917." Mr. Doherty declared that the purpose of the bill was to make more complete provision for the taking of the soldiers' vote during the present war than exists under the Act of 1915.

He declared that conditions had changed materially since that Act was passed. The number of men was five times as great, Transportation facilities were not nearly as good. It was therefore proposed to modify that Act completely rather than to amend its provisions. A change was to be made in the qualification for military voting. It was proposed to extend the vote not only to men of age, but to men under 21 who were overseas.

It was also proposed that not only should men in the Canadian forces vote, but men who had enrolled in Canada, and who were now in the Imperial units. This applied particularly to the aviation corps and naval units.

Gen. Hughes: "Why not give every Canadian in the Imperial forces a vote, whether he enrolled in Canada or not?"

Dr. Doherty explained that the Government was open to advice along these lines, but intimated that the machinery required might be greater than would be warranted by the number of votes secured.

Army Nurses, Too.

It was also proposed to do away with any distinction of sex among those engaged in active service; nurses would be included. The fact that a soldier might be an Indian, moreover, would not prevent him from voting.

Mr. Marcil: "Does the measure make provision for taking the vote of reservists who have gone from Canada?"

Mr. Doherty declared that the same difficulty applied to them as to men in the Imperial forces who had not enrolled in Canada.

To take Vote Overseas.

The Bill, said Mr. Doherty, provided for complete machinery overseas to take the vote. As though an election were actually being conducted there. The results would be sent to Canada and would then be considered in conjunction with the results in Canada. The combined results would determine the election.

Under the 1915 Act, provision was made for each returning officer to send the ballots taken by him to the clerk of the Crown of Chancery in Canada. They were to be assorted by the latter according to constituencies. That would have been easy at the time when transportation facilities were better and the number of the troops less. But there was now danger of the ballots being lost in transit.

It was therefore provided that the returning officers should send the ballots taken in France to the High Commissioner in Paris, and those taken in England to the High Commissioner in London. They would by this be transferred to a special general returning officer, whose duty it would be to count and assort the ballots according to constituencies. The result would then be communicated to Canada. They would here be counted in conjunction with the Canadian home vote by another special returning officer, who would announce and proclaim the result of the election.

Canadian National Revives Competition for Farmers and Farmers' Sons.

Among the new departures at the Canadian National Exhibition this year are the judging competitions for young farmers and farmers' sons under 26 years of age. They will be held under the supervision of the Ontario government and a very large entry is expected from among the three thousand students now taking the government short courses. Liberal prizes are offered to winners in live stock, poultry, grain, roots, fruits and vegetables. Some years ago judging competitions were held at Toronto, but the present ones are on a much more pretentious scale, and under government auspices should prove to be a great success.

To Keep Your Skin Free From Hairs

(Beauty Topics)

If you are willing to spend a few minutes' time in your room using a delatone paste, you can easily banish any ugly, hairy growth without discomfort or injury. The paste is made by mixing some water with a little powdered delatone. This is then spread over the hairy surface and after about 2 minutes rubbed off and the skin washed. You will not be disappointed with this treatment, providing you get real delatone.

Fireman Never Misses A Run Now

St. Thomas Man Often Had to Lay Off From Work on Account of Condition

"Before I began taking this Tanlac I was constantly losing time from my work, but I'm on the job every day," said Henry A. Osborn, 32 Maple St., St. Thomas a few days ago. Mr. Osborn has been railroading for the past ten years or more. He is now firing on the Michigan Central from Windsor to Buffalo which has been his run for the past three and a half years.

"For several years," he continued, "I have suffered from stomach and liver trouble, I always had a fairly good appetite but my food just seemed to stay in my stomach and form a knot that felt as heavy as lead. Gas would form soon after my meals and keep me miserable for hours. I would swell up terribly, my heart would flutter, and I would often get in such a bad fix I would have to call for help. I had awful pains in my left side and several times I was unable to go out on my run. I was under treatment four different times and tried any number of different kinds of medicines but nothing helped me except just to patch me up a little, and things had begun to look gloomy for me.

"But Tanlac is changing things right about, and while I have taken only a little more than one bottle so far my relief has been nothing short of wonderful. I hardly feel the pains in my side any more and that lumpy condition has left me entirely. Gas has stopped forming on my stomach and since my food digests like it should I'm not troubled with palpitation of the heart. My food seems to nourish me like it did when I was a boy and I simply feel stronger and better in every way. Tanlac certainly is great. I haven't missed a run since I began taking it and it's a pleasure to recommend it, especially to people suffering like I did."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by Warne Drug Co., Ltd.

BODY BURIED IN HOLE

Farmer Upon Whose Homestead Remains Were Found is Charged With Murder.

DAUPHAN, Man., Aug. 14.—Felix Letain, a farmer of this district, was charged in the police court to-day with the murder of Joseph E. Grenier, of Winnipeg. Grenier's body was found buried in a hole four feet deep on Letain's homestead, Saturday afternoon. The body bore bullet wounds, indicating that the murdered man was shot in the back.

Grenier had not been seen since July 5, when he left the village of Laurier in an auto with Letain.

NO COAL EMBARGO

G.T.R. Official Makes Denial of Introduction of Embargo on Coal to Canada by Lehigh Valley Line.

MONTREAL, Aug. 14.—No embargo on coal coming to Canada has been introduced by the Lehigh Valley railroad, according to information which has come to Howard G. Kelly, vice-president of the Grand Trunk railway.

A despatch from Toronto stated the embargo had been put on because the Grand Trunk railway did not return empty cars promptly. The G.T.R. vice-president characterized the despatch as unfounded.

SAYS GERARD IS WRONG ABOUT THE CABLEGRAM

Germany's Semi-Official Newspaper States That Telegram From Kaiser Doesn't Exist

But says War Lord only Conveyed His Thanks to President Wilson.

Berlin, August 13 (via Amsterdam) —The semi-official Nordeutsche Allgemeine Zeitung denies the existence of the telegram alleged by Jas. W. Gerard, the former American Ambassador at Berlin, to have been sent by Emperor William to President Wilson in August, 1914, when the German Emperor is quoted as having asserted that Belgium's neutrality "had to be violated by Germany on strategical grounds."

The Nordeutsche Allgemeine Zeitung says: "We are in a position to declare that no such telegram from the Emperor exists. It is true that Mr. Gerard was given an audience on August 10, 1914, in order to give him an opportunity of placing President Wilson's offer of mediation before the Emperor.

Only Conveyed Thanks.

"This proposal was made at the time when the armies of both sides had already crossed the frontier, and when it seemed out of the question to call a halt to events. The Emperor could, therefore, only have his thanks conveyed to President Wilson for his offer and thereby remark that while the present moment was too early for mediation by the neutral powers, the President's friendly proposal might later be returned to.

'The Emperor then conversed for some time further with Mr. Gerard, and explained to him the events that led up to the outbreak of war. The Emperor particularly pointed out the ambiguous and dislopal attitude of Great Britain which had destroyed all hope of a peaceful agreement.

Just a Memorandum.

Mr. Gerard's statements in his memoirs appear to be a reproduction of this conversation. If the press in enemy countries sees revelations in them that only shows that they are ignorant of the German white book, which in essence set forth the same events.

"Possibly during the conversation the Emperor wrote a memorandum for the ambassador so that he might not announce anything to Washington that would be incorrect. In that case it would be a matter of record destined to assist Mr. Gerard's memory but it would not be a communication from the Emperor to President Wilson."

"MOUNTAIN MADNESS"

By Anna Alice Chapin

The lower hills, heavily plumaged with rich and various gradations of green, swept in great waves to the east. A stormy enough sea they made at close range, but as they melted into the purples and blues of distance, they grew calmer of aspect, presenting a misty, undulant expanse, softened by miles of cloudy air, suggestive of dreams and mystery. Beyond rose the crests of other and higher mountain ranges, saffron in the sunlight, pure indigo where the cloud shadows lay upon them.

They rode on in silence. A constraint was on them. More than once, one or the other would draw a quick breath, startled by a sudden brilliant glimpse of sunlit valley or far-off hills, but they did not speak to each other.

They plunged into a darker, more thickly wooded stretch. It was the faintest possible trail to follow—evidently but little travelled, and carpeted with moss and dead leaves. It smelt heavily of the woods, the fragrance that always lingers where sunlight seldom finds its way between interlacing branches. The horses' hoofs made no sound; there was only the infinitesimal clink of the bits, the subdued creak of leather.... It was cool and dim and the path, eternally turning and twisting before them, kept them wondering as to what was around the next bend.

Then all at once, after a sharper turn than usual, it suddenly mounted towards a bare sky-line. There were no more trees—only low scrub oaks, and the other dwarf things that are significant of high places and higher winds. The trail became as steep to ascend as it had been to descend. The horses strained upward, stumbled on the loose stones, and seemed to pull themselves to that bleak skyline with a series of scrambling plunges. Another effort; they were up! And—

This time there was no suppressing the involuntary gasp. For, apparently, they were poised on the utmost edge of infinity.

A little clearing, set at a dizzy angle, sloped straight before them for perhaps a hundred feet. There was a small low house perched against the background of blue ether, and there was a sign nailed to the front of it. Red-brown roads ran from it east and west for a few yards, then disappeared enigmatically below the edge of the plateau. And all around was mile upon reaching mile of — Nothing! Clouds, sky, swimming sunshine, winds so boisterous and tingling that they seemed almost visible —but nothing else.

As they gazed, marvelling, a bird came into view, far away, a floating speck in blue and golden space. It looked immeasurably lonely, and gave a strange and convincing impression of the unbelievable height and emptiness of the element through which it was slowly winging its way.

It was their first sight of Four Trail Crossing — that remote high place, poised sublimely, almost miraculously, above the solid facts of the old brown earth and its ways.

CHAPTER IV.
THE TOLL-GATE HOUSE.

I got up the mountain edge, and from the top saw the world stretch out.....And then I thought no more, but my heart leapt to meet the wind.
—Maurice Hewlett.

Everything in this world can be seen from different angles, under different lights that make for a million results and eventualities. The lady in the poem who said "yes" because it was candle light and not day, understood this truth. We all know that the artist's eye and discern purple in a rail fence, and it is an indubitable fact that a grouchy German critic once declared Verdi's melodies to be "hard and harsh!" Behold, my comrades, there is no essential Truth; it is all and always a Point of View!

The sudden panorama which opened out before Enid and Radnor, as they let their horses advance, took on an incredible glamour from the mood and the conditions which controlled their first glimpse of it. They had seen wonderful and impressive views before but this seemed something new, and utterly marvellous.

The vision of mountains far beneath may suggest wonder, awe, terror, admiration—a variety of things. To Radnor and Enid certainly, and perhaps to the other two as well, it spoke of romance and the impossibly lovely. The trail just before was thicky wooded, and when they reached that great open sweep of the unknown they trembled and dreamed.

The young mountain couple were standing in front of the Toll-gate House as Enid and Radnor rode down to it, and in a moment a very tall, roughly dressed man with a flowing gray beard came to the open door, and scrutinized them with the keen, peering look common to those who are accustomed to facing the wind and the sun.

"This is Dad," said Polly, briefly, but with a rich drawl. She seemed to consider it an ample and adequate introduction.

"Going to Middletown?" the Toll Keeper asked.

He clearly considered them in the light of travellers; so Polly felt it incumbent upon her to elucidate.

"She wants water," she said, indicating Enid.

The Toll Keeper's face changed pleasantly. He promptly became unofficial and cordial. They were now his guests and he received them accordingly.

"We can find her something better than water!" he exclaimed. "Polly, can't you make some tea?"

He was looking at Enid with a kind sharpness that puzzled her. One would almost have said that he found something familiar about her, and could not entirely place it.

Still looking at her closely, and in a gentle tone that contrasted in a singular fashion with his unpolished appearance, he added, "May I help you down?"

They noted that he did not say "ma'am," and that when he came to her stirrup it was with a carriage and air lacking alike in self-consciousness or servility.

When they had dismounted, the younger mountaineer went with Radnor to the barn and helped him with the two saddle horses. Enid meanwhile went in to the Toll-gate House with the old man and his daughter.

So it came about that these four went together to the Toll Gate and Four Trail Crossing, and were made welcome by Richard Mason, who kept it and who was the girl's father. It appeared that her name was Polly; the sunburn young god who "was going with her" (Enid had never heard the phrase before) was Martin Hale.

Richard Mason was what nearly anyone would have styled a delightful and perfect type. Only they would have been reasonably certain to get the type wrong. Classifying types is a tricky business; picking winners is child's play to it. The psychologist or the novelist or many of those unnatural, impertinent beings doomed by vocation or avocation to prey upon, and to pry externally into, persons' affairs, would almost unanimously have put him down as a splendid specimen of the Old Mountaineer—rugged and hardy, not too scrupulous and dowered with the inevitable charm which theatre-goers can always discover in no education and objectionable table manners.

As a matter of fact the Toll-Keeper was as perfect a host as Enid Forsythe had ever met for all his ostentatiously rough and awkward ways. He was a splendid looking old man, with great dignity and authority of bearing and when he bowed over her fair little hand she had a fleeting impression that he had for a moment forgotten his part and was playing himself!

He flatly refused toll and insisted that they make him the debtor by taking tea in the Toll-gate House.

It was the strangest, airiest, most remote place in which Enid had ever been. It was as clean and fresh as water and the hill winds could keep it, but there was something more about it—something free and fine and far. After trying to analyse the impression, she realized that it was partly because the house stood so high, and on such a barren space that there was nothing to be seen from doors or windows but sky. One might as well have been floating above the world....

Polly brought out queer, old-fashioned cups and Enid settled herself with an air—well known to her lover—of having made up her wilful little mind to stay for quite a time.

As they had tea they grew friendly enough, though it was not until much later that Enid and Jack found out any but the most superficial particulars of the lives of their new acquaintances. What they learned later we may quite as well learn now.

Richard Mason was something of a mystery even to those who knew him best. He had come to the hills many years before, had married a woman of the mountains, and had never to anybody's knowledge left the upper range even for a day. There was a vague general impression that he had been a man of education before he had turned to the wilderness, though usually he made a point of affecting a manner ruder and views more primitive than his mountaineer associates. On rare occasions he had been know to speak with profound bitterness of some great wrong, once done him, some unspeakable injustice which after these many years, could still whip him to fury with a bare recollection. But he made no close confidante. Perhaps the most intimate friend he had was Martin Hale.

It was an odd friendship; for they were thirty years and more apart in age and both were silent men, solitary by nature and sternly reticent. But they liked and understood each other, and when Hale had proposed to Polly, unemotional as he had made himself Mason had felt something almost akin to joy in the thought of giving his girl into such good keeping.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A CLEVER RUSE

By JOHN TURNLEE

A gentleman boarded a North river boat at New York one afternoon, went to the purser's office and engaged a stateroom, giving his name, Edgar Rawlins. He was followed by a man who was given a room near him and whose name was entered as Thomas Brown. In the evening as Mr. Rawlins was coming out of his room he was met by Mr. Brown, who said:

"Beg pardon, sir! Have you a bunch of keys?"

"I have."

"I have left the key of my suit case at home. Would you kindly let me have your ring that I may see if there is one on it that will fit my lock?"

Mr. Rawlins produced his keys and handed them to Brown, who went into his stateroom. He remained there several minutes, then returned and thanked the man who had favored him, regretting that he had not found a key that would serve his purpose, but he was just as much obliged.

Mr. Rawlins forgot this seemingly unimportant episode, making a journey to Chicago and returning within a week. The day after his arrival at home he went to his private safe, opened it, put away some papers that he had taken with him on his journey and was about to close it when he noticed that a drawer in which his wife kept some valuable jewels was partly open. He pushed it back in place, then, he knew not why, pulled it out far enough to enable him to look within.

It was empty!

He examined every other drawer in the safe to see if the jewels had been placed elsewhere, then called his wife and asked her if she had removed them. She said she had not. A thorough search of the safe was made, but the jewels were not found. There had been no breaking into the house, so far as was known, and if there had been the safe could not have been opened and locked again without the key, which Mr. Rawlins always kept in his possession, and there was no duplicate.

The loss of the jewels was a mystery. If the lock had been picked it must have been done by some one who lived in the house. Yet there was no one there who had the mechanical skill requisite to pick a lock and no one suspected of having the slightest desire to perpetrate a theft. The inmates consisted of Mr. and Mrs. Rawlins, a son twenty-one years old, steady as a clock; a daughter eighteen and the servants, who had been with the family many years. Both the son and the daughter had their friends, who, with other guests, had been where the safe was kept in a hallway at the rear of the house on the second story. No person except a friend of the family was known to have been there during the limit of time when the jewels must have been taken.

No hope was entertained of regaining the lost jewels, but it was finally decided to employ a detective for the purpose of making an effort to solve the mystery. Edward Joyce was sent to the house by the agency applied to and, after a thorough examination of every one in the house, set about looking over the premises. He tested every lock of both door and window and found all in good order, though no one could vouch for the window on the second story having been locked.

In the rear of the house was a grape arbor not quite so high as the second story windows and about ten feet from the house. Any one, by climbing the arbor, could rest a twelve foot ladder on it and thus reach the window. The detective, by means of a magnifying glass, discovered foot marks on the side slats and one of the slats had been freshly broken. The widow near the arbor opened into the hall in which stood the safe.

The detective, after making an examination of this route to the safe, declared that the house must have been entered by it and the robbery committed at the same time. But he was no nearer to how the safe could have been unlocked and relocked than before. A theory was advanced that the thief had gone to Mr. Rawlins' clothes, stolen the safe key and replaced it after committing the theft. But Mr. Rawlins, when at home, slept with his bedroom door locked and was not at home when the jewels were taken.

Mr. Joyce's next step was to call for the safe key. On receiving it he slipped it through his fingers and noticed that it felt as if it had been waxed. Bringing a powerful pocket microscope to bear on it, he asked Mr. Rawlins if it had been out of his possession. The reply at first was "No," but presently remembering that he had loaned his keys for a few minutes to a man on the boat to try if any of the keys would fit his suit case lock Mr. Rawlins told the story of the loan. The detective handed him his key and said:

"The problem of how your safe was opened is very plain. As to your recovering the jewels, that is another matter. When the man who borrowed your keys carried them into his stateroom he took an impression with wax of your safe key. He doubtless knew or learned afterward who you were and where you lived. With a safe key made from the impression he had taken in wax he opened your safe and took the jewels."

The lost property was finally recovered and the detective's theory confirmed.

Desert of Sahara.

At one time, some twoscore years ago, some Englishmen proposed to dig a canal on the northwest coast of Africa, south of Morocco, to admit the waters of the Atlantic into the Sahara desert. It was argued that a great inland sea would thus be created and that ocean vessels might steam into Africa and pick up cargoes along the western Sudan. This fine idea was based upon the prevalent notion that most of the desert surface was much below sea level. It was discovered later that most of the desert stands high above the sea. The French, who have been the greatest explorers of the desert, have corrected other false ideas about the desert. The most conspicuous and persistent of these errors has been the notion that the desert is a vast area of sand. The French have proved that this is not so. In fact, only about one-fifth of the Sahara is covered with sand.

Wonders of Jupiter.

If Jupiter were cut up into 1,300 pieces each would be larger than the earth. All the planets together do not weigh half as much as Jupiter. Only the sun surpasses Jupiter in size. A year on the planet Jupiter is equal to twelve of our years. Jupiter rotates on its axis in less than half the time of the earth, but because of the planet's enormous size the rotation speed is much higher. While the earth travels seventeen miles a minute, Jupiter travels 466 miles a minute. If Jupiter turned on its axis a little faster it would burst, as some flywheels do when they exceed a safe speed. Jupiter may be regarded either as a decaying sun or a developing earth. He has not yet had time to cool. He is a great globe of gaseous and molten matter, the most extraordinary planet in the entire solar system.

When Danton Died.

Whenever the spirit of revolt flames over the earth the name of Danton is recalled. It was on the 5th of April in 1794, that Georges Jacques Danton died on the guillotine, a victim of that terrible revolution which he himself had played so large a part in initiating, fostering and directing.

At the foot of the scaffold he muttered, "Oh, my wife, my beloved, I shall never see thee more!" Then he added, "Be thyself, Danton; no weakness!" His last words were to the executioner, "You will show my head to the crowd; it is well worth showing!"

Just a Suggestion.

"It would save us much needed floor space and considerable money if more of our women customers would use the stairway when going up only one flight," said the department store manager. "I wish I knew of some way to make them do it."

"Why not take the mirrors out of the elevators and put them on the stairs?" suggested his bright assistant.

Little Things.

It surely is the little things that cause the most worry in this old vale of tears, and when some more trifle, like a shoestring or a garter, gives way at an especially inopportune moment one doesn't give much thought for the time being to our international relations.

Breaking Into Society.

"I want you to take some pictures of the wedding," said the prospective bridegroom.

"Very good," said the prospective photographer.

"And also have a couple of phony cameras along for me to smash.

Steel in the Bible.

In all cases where the word "steel" occurs in the authorized version of the Bible the true rendering of the Hebrew should be "copper." Whether the ancient Hebrews were acquainted with steel is not certain. Steel appears to have been known to the Egyptians.

THE AGILE WEST.

It is admitted by many observers that some of the Universities in the western states have been able to come in closer touch with the general public than the older and perhaps nobler institutions of the east. The State University of Kansas, for example, has conducted a form of University Extension work in music which has had most interesting and satisfactory results. Prof. H. L. Butler, Dean of the School of Fine Arts and Prof. Arthur Nevin have travelled all through the State giving concerts, lectures, and phonograph recitals, and rousing the people to the formation of choral societies large or small. This past season two of the choruses formed in this way gave choral arrangements of Tannhauser and Carmen and there were several performances at Easter time of Dubois' Seven Last Words.

The fact that the University has been behind the movement has done much to clear away the difficulties that too frequently abound when any effort is made for musical co-operation in a small community. Other States are inquiring of Kansas about the organization of its Fine Arts Faculty. Whether or not any Canadian Provinces are beginning to inquire is not stated. Certainly there is room, after the war, for a wider co-ordination between the Universities and the public particularly in the extension of musical knowledge.

Rain After Thunder.

Why does a heavy downpour of rain often follow a clap of thunder? asks the Popular Science Monthly, and gives this answer: Not, as is popularly believed, because the thunder jostles the cloud particles together into raindrops. In the violent turmoil between the positive and negative electricity in a thundercloud there will be places where the production of drops by condensation and their subsequent breaking up proceeds more rapidly than elsewhere. Hence in these places there will be more drops to fall, as rain and also more electrification, the rainfall occurring about the same time as the flash.

We have, then, starting toward the earth at the same time, light, sound and raindrops. The light, traveling at a speed of about 186,000 miles per second, reaches us almost instantly. The sound travels far more slowly—about 1,000 feet per second—but the rain falls much more slowly still. Thus we observe, first, the lightning, then the thunder and then the rain.

THE FOUNDATIONS OF GERMAN TRADE WERE UNSTABLE.

Expert Who Has Investigated the Affairs of Firms That Formerly Carried on Business in Hong Kong Makes Surprising Statements Regarding Teuton Methods Used in China.

WHEN the war began nearly thirty per cent. of the trade of Hong Kong, excluding Chinese native trade, was in the hands of Germans whose business methods were considered by many to be most progressive and worthy of emulation. It now appears from the investigation of enemy firms that the methods employed by the Teutons were, despite the great volume of trade, unsound and unprofitable, according to the periodical Truth which publishes an article based on a book just written by Dennis K. Moss, a man of long experience in Chinese trade and one of the liquidators of enemy firms in Hong Kong.

"The knowledge gained from the liquidations is summed up by Mr. Moss as being, mainly, 'a more complete knowledge of how not to do business.'" says Truth. "Instead of the valuable lessons in trading methods which some people expected, the merchants and accountants in charge of the windings-up discovered practically nothing but evidence—unmistakable, conclusive evidence—of the unsoundness and unprofitableness of the lines on which the Germans did business. Nearly thirty per cent of the trade of Hong Kong (excluding Chinese native trade) was in their hands, but they did not make one-twentieth of the profits of the British—indeed, more than one British firm there makes for itself net profits equal to those of all the German firms lumped together. The great aim of the latter was to have a big turnover, no matter whether there was any profit or not.

"As an instance of this, on the export side, one firm had built up a turnover of $4,000,000 a year in silk, but only covered the cost of running the department. All engaged in cut-throat competition, not merely against British rivals, but against one another, and even in the handling of their own German and Austrian manufactures. In the main, however, the goods they sold to the Chinese—giving dangerously long credits—consisted of Manchester and Bradford goods, for, though the plums of that trade in Hong Kong were retained by British firms, the Germans had captured a substantial portion of it by taking business—as their books showed—on miserably inadequate terms, sometimes even at a loss. This had temporarily benefited Manchester and Bradford merchants, but many of the enemy firms were getting deeper and deeper into a state of such chronic overtrading that very little would have been needed to upset the whole fabric and bring a crash which would have seriously injured British mercantile and banking interests.

"It is not at all surprising to learn that German firms at Hong Kong added dishonesty to their recklessness in trading. The winding-up inquiries disclosed the fact that the bulk of their business was actually done on capital borrowed on what were virtually false pretenses from London finance houses. Nor is it surprising to learn that merchants who treated their own 'letters of lien' as so many scraps of paper deliberately violated the conditions under which they were allowed to continue business in Hong Kong for two or three months after the outbreak of war."

The periodical says that Mr. Moss certainly shows that the methods of German traders "are for the most part methods to be avoided, and adds in conclusion:

"And Hong Kong is not the first place from which we have had proofs that German commerce, about the growth of which we used to hear so much, rested on a very unstable foundation."

SUFFERED TERRIBLY

For Four Days and Nights From DIARRHOEA

Diarrhoea arises from many causes such as change of diet change of water change of climate, catching cold, the eating of unripe fruits or anything that will cause an excess of bile.

On the first sign of any looseness of the bowels it should not be neglected, but should be looked after immediately, for if not diarrhoea, dysentery or some other serious bowel complaint may ensue.

Miss Florence Harfield, 325 Lauder Ave., Toronto, Ont., writes: "I was troubled with a violent attack of diarrhoea. I suffered terribly with it for four days and nights, and finally I became so weak I did not think I could stand it any longer. My sister advised me to try a bottle of Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry. I did so, and after I had taken three doses I felt a whole lot relieved. I kept on taking it, and by the time I had taken six doses, the diarrhoea had completely stopped. I think it a wonderful remedy, as it is so quick to act. I will recommend it to all my friends."

There are so many spurious "Strawberry" preparations sold that you should see that the name "Dr. Fowler's" is on every bottle you buy. Price 35c. Manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Spiking the Guns.

The expression "spiking guns" is a survival from the day when all that was necessary to put a gun out of action (provided, of course, that you had access to it) was a large nail or spike and a hammer. You simply drove the nail into the touch hole at the breech. If the nail was long enough to turn round at the end on the bottom of the bore so much the better. It is just as simple, perhaps simpler, to put a modern gun out of action. All you want is a hammer. The breech block of the modern gun is held closed by screw threads. After the breech block is shut on the shell a turn of two or three inches engages the threads. By knocking a bur on these threads you prevent them engaging. Any attempt to fire the gun without the breech block being perfectly closed would, of course, be of material assistance to the enemy.

THREE WINGED WORDS.

How the Famous Expression "Swat the Fly!" Originated.

Once upon a time there was a man with a large assortment of ideas, and he went to a baseball game to find surcease from thought in the crack of the bat and the long hit. Now, the particular idea that had been buzzing the loudest in his head at that time was the common housefly and how to make it uncommon.

He never could look at a fly without feeling a cruel desire to squash it. He was, in fact, about to publish a health bulletin indicting the fly on more counts than the fly has eyes, and it has several thousand and fifty. Well, when he got to the game and had just rid himself of the whole notion for a moment and was eagerly awaiting action on the part of the batsman somebody—in fact, a lot of them—shouted, "Swat the ball!"

The batsman did. He swatted the prettiest fly any fan would ask to see. And then while the crowd roared the fly hater took out a pencil and scribbled on a bit of paper those three winged words that were destined in the months that followed to fly around the world and back again, "Swat the fly."

The man was Dr. S. J. Crumbine of Kansas.—J. Wainwright Evans in Nation's Business.

THE SHORT STORY.

Its Chief Failing as Seen by a Somewhat Cynical Critic.

The short story, taken in the aggregate, is a collection of 6,000 words that tell how the hero happened to marry the girl. It seldom mentions the enormous number of girls that the hero has kissed prior to the affair in hand, nor does it bear heavily on the previous little love affairs of the heroine. The chief trouble with the short story is that it fills the reading public with the idea that to be happy one needs only to be married.

This idea is erroneous, for the success of a courtship depends not on the marriage, but on the manner in which the contracting parties readjust their ideas and peculiarities in order that there may not be a wholesale interference of ideas and peculiarities and a consequent stripping of mental gears and wrecking of hopes.

Every short story should have footnotes attached explaining the status quo of the hero and heroine at the end of five years, together with the condensed but honest reason for the unsatisfactory or satisfactory results.—Puck.

Never mind about being better than others; try to be better than you yourself were yesterday.

Marked the Snakes.

A member of the house of representatives last season had a habit of marking certain bills on his bill file with a blue pencil, making curious spiral wriggly lines all over the face of each bill he marked.

"Why do you mark your bill file in that manner?" one day asked the legislator who sat next to him.

"I do that," he answered, "because them bills has a snake in them, and they ain't goin' to wriggle through without my votin' agin them. I know them when I get them by the blue snake marks."—Harrisburg Star-Independent.

Fearless.

"There goes a man who has faced death in every possible form without a tremor."

"He doesn't look like a man who has led a particularly adventurous life."

"He hasn't, but he goes to the movies every night in the week."

Speed of the Dromedary.

The speed of the dromedary has been greatly exaggerated, the Arabs asserting that it is swifter than the horse, but eight or nine miles an hour is the utmost that it is able to perform. This pace, however, it can keep up for hours together.

An Admiring Spectator.

"I never saw a man with a truer eye for measurement or a firmer hand for execution."

"You refer to a sculptor?"

"No; to the butcher who cut a steak for me this morning.

Riddles.

Solomon, king of Israel, is said to have been fond of riddles. Riddles were in favor with the ancient Egyptians. They were especially used at banquets both by Greeks and Romans.

All Must Help.

A wise man who does not assist with his councils, a rich man with his charity and a poor man with his labor are perfect nuisances in a commonwealth.

RECOVERY OF NEW JERSEY WOMAN

Due To Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Bridgeton, N.J.—"I cannot speak too highly of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for inflammation and other weaknesses. I was very irregular and would have terrible pains so that I could hardly take a step. Sometimes I would be so miserable that I could not sweep a room. I doctored part of the time but felt no change. I later took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and felt a change for the better after the second day. I took it until I was in a good healthy condition. I recommend the Pinkham remedies to all women as I have used them with good results."—Mrs. MILFORD T. CUMMINGS, 34 New Street, Bridgeton, N. J.

Such testimony should be accepted by all women as convincing evidence of the excellence of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as a remedy for the distressing ills of women such as displacements, inflammation, ulceration, backache, painful periods, nervousness and kindred ailments.

The Life of the Turtle.

According to naturalists, the turtle has a rather good time. As soon as the baby turtle emerges from the egg he scuttles down to the sea and immediately seeks shelter in the tropical profusion of the gulf weed, which holds within its branching fronds an astonishing abundance of marine life. Here the young turtle feeds unmolested while his armour is hardening apace. The turtle, like the sperm-whale, has but one enemy—man. Even the sperm-whale must come frequently to the surface to breathe, and if it gets beached high and dry on land it is in extreme danger. But the cheerful turtle can stay below the surface for a week if he wants to, and he often does. He is neither fish, flesh, nor fowl, yet his flesh partakes of the characteristics of all three. Eating seems a mere superfluity with him, since for weeks at a time he may be placed in a barrel with the bung out and emerge after his long fast apparently none the worse for his enforced abstinence from food, from light, and almost from air. Of all the warm-blooded organisms there is none so tenacious of life as the turtle. Injuries that would be instantly fatal to fish leave the turtle undisturbed, and his power of keeping death at bay is nothing short of marvellous.

A Hard Blow.

The politician rushed past the official Cerberus into the editorial sanctum.

"What do you mean?" he roared. "What do you mean by insulting me as you did in last night's Clamor?"

"Just a moment," replied the editor, "Didn't the story appear as you gave it to us, namely, that you had resigned as city treasurer?"

"It did. But you put it under the head 'Public Improvements.'"

Splash.

Maiden—What's that "trough of the sea" we read about? Corney—Oh, that is what the ocean greyhounds drink out of.

Might Have Been Worse.

"Did the play have a happy ending?"

"It might have been worse. My wife only forgot her handkerchief and one glove."

When you have an elephant on hand and he wants to run away, better let him run

A Soft, Clear Skin

THERE is a very good reason why so many women always keep Dr. Chase's Ointment at hand. The reason is apparent if you will but notice the soft, clear skin of the person who uses it.

Unlike pore-clogging powders, Dr. Chase's Ointment promotes the healthful action of the pores of the skin, and while it heals and cures eczema and every form of irritating skin disease, it is also equally effective as a beautifier of the skin.

Rough, red, harsh skin becomes soft and velvety when this soothing, healing ointment is applied at night after a warm bath. Write to us for a free sample box, or buy a large box from your druggist and put this ointment to the test. You will be surprised and delighted at the results obtained.

More Than Half Million Men Already Listed For New Army; Work Will End This Week

Seventy-Five Per Cent. of the Eligibles Needed Are on Roster Now---Second Call Not Before December 1--First Contingent Will Receive Training and Leave Camps Before Next is Summoned.

TO GO TO FRANCE

WASHINGTON, D.C., Aug. 14.—America's first National Army draft is almost complete. At least seventy-five per cent. of the 687,000 men who are to be drawn for the first force have been listed, according to reports received by Brigadier General Enoch H. Crowder, Provost Marshal General.

Information in hand indicates that the roster of the new army will be completed this week. A large percentage of the registration boards have completed their work of selecting the men first in order for service. The remainder of the 4,557 boards, chiefly those of the Western and Pacific Coast States, will soon finish their work.

At the same time it became known that the second call for men would not come so early as had been expected. It had been supposed that the second call would come about October 1st, but to-day it seemed likely that it would not come before December 1 or possibly the first of the next year.

General Crowder Pleased.

General Crowder and the other officers of the Provost Marshal General's office are pleased with the results of the last week in which thousands of men were listed for service. The returns showed, they declared, that the men of the country are beginning to realize that the draft is a serious thing and that under it all men who are able to serve their country will be expected to become members of the army which is forming.

Little complaint had been received against the revised regulations for exemptions particularly those which refer to dependencies. The authorities, aroused thoroughly during the first few days of the week because of the large number of claims filed on that ground, were satisfied that the various examination boards would hold down such exemptions to a minimum. In some of the districts the number of claims for exemption on the ground of dependencies reached eighty per cent., which officials said was excessive, and which led to a threat by General Crowder that all such claims might be disregarded.

Members of General Crowder's staff were of the opinion that the second call would not come until the middle of the winter owing to the fact that the sixteen cantonments prepared for the army will not be available for the training of a second force much before that time. Army officers generally are of the opinion that it takes months to train a soldier for service in modern warfare, and they do not intend to be rushed in the training of the new National Army.

To Go to France in the Spring.

At present it seems likely that the course of training for the men who now are being summoned to the colours will continue until early in the spring. They will be sent to France therefore, early in the year in time for the spring drive against the Prussians, which is expected to be a telling blow against the forces of the Kaiser.

If such is the case the cantonments will not be vacated by the first army until February or March, and it is not to be supposed that new cantonments will be constructed for the second division. The idea prevails that it will not be necessary to call the second organization much more than a month before time to go to the training camps.

REGATTA NETTED $480

The Juniper Island Event Drew a Large Crowd—The Prize Winners

NEAR DROWNING

Regatta Day, the big day at Stoney Lake yesterday drew one of the largest crowds that have ever assembzled at Juniper Island, and from a standpoint of general good feeling, perfect weather and efficient management it may be counted as the most successful regattas held there yet. The entries on account of the depletion of the ranks of young men were very slow in all cases save the returned soldiers' races which drew every returned soldier on the lake, and which were watched with perhaps the keenest interest of any. The greasy poles race, in which each contestant walked the round pole projected fourteen feet over deep water with the object of carrying off the ribbon on the end was closely watched and immensely amusing.

The Prizes.

The races, which began at one o'clock, were started from the wharf on the east of the store by Mr. J. R. Dodworth, Messrs. Hugh Tarbox and George Douglas, acting as judges.

The first race, the dinghy sailing, was cancelled on account of failure of one dinghy being available at the time of starting. This was entered by Pte. Holly Hill and Gunner Darrell Wainwright.

2. Canoe sailing—1st Harstone, 2nd Stubbs.
3. Handicap motor boat—1st Dodworth, 2nd Mrs. Dr. Watson.
4. Boys' single canoe—1st Paul Dodworth, 2nd Woodbury Willoughby.
5. Ladies' tandem canoe—1st Misses Stuart and Knapman, 2nd the Misses Willoughby.
6. Returned soldiers' tandem canoe—1st H. Martin and Hill, 2nd Cook and Saxby.
7. Girls' single canoe—No entries.
8. Mixed tandem canoe—1st Miss Gilette and Simpson, 2nd Miss Stock and Don. Fitzgerald.
9. Ladies' single skiff — 1st Vera Stock, 2nd Irene Knapman.
10. Returned soldiers' single canoe—1st Dalliday, 2nd Simpson.
11. Men's single canoe—(Champion ship to Ttoney Lake—1st Blewett 2nd Simpson.
12. Crab race—1st Stubbs, 2nd Jack Carlisle.

Donations to Regatta.

The prizes which were cleverly chosen by Mrs. L. H. Grahame included a number of generous donations from several Peterborough and Lakefield merchants. There were: Lakefield Canoe Co., 4 paddles and 2 cushions. The Brown Boat Co., Lakefield, 4 paddles; Peterborough Canoe Co., 2 paddles; Canadian Canoe Co., 2 paddles; Robert Sturgeon, looking glass; Richard Hall, ladies parasol; Turnbull Co., parasol; Elliott, silk stockings; Charles Tanner, bathing cap; Spence Co., olives; Mrs. Grahame, flashlight. A large number of generous monetary donations were also received.

Dance in the Evening.

The dance in the evening when excellent music was provided by Beach's orchestra, was exceedingly bright and drew a large number of the young people from Peterborough and all about the lakes. Some of those who attended were Prof. and Mrs. Renwick, Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Doris, the Misses Hatton, Telgmann, Eastwood, Collins, Austin, Cadet Donald Cameron, Messrs. Hal Crane, Asa Huyske, Elsworth, Duncan, Caniff, Maurice Collins, MacLeland, Pte. Holly Hill, Mr. and Mrs. I. D. Wain-

POPE BENEDICT RENEWS FORMAL PEACE PROPOSALS

Suggests the Restoration of Belgium, Serbia and Roumania and Peaceful Settlement of the Problems of Alsace-Lorraine, Trent, Trieste and Poland.

AT THE STATE DEPARTMENT

Special to The Examiner:

ROME, August 14.—His Holiness Pope Benedict to-day renewed his formal proposals of peace. The Pope suggests the restoration of Belgium, Serbia and Roumanit, and a peaceful settlement of the problems of Alsace-Lorraine, Trent, Triest and Poland, according to reports received from Vatican sources. It is expected the proposals will be published to-day by the Vatican. The note makes a new formal appeal for peace. It invites the belligerents to state their conditions in concerted terms so as to facilitate preliminary understandings, says another report.

HAD UNOFFICIAL KNOWLEDGE.

WASHINGTON, August 14.—The State Department acknowledges that it has received unofficial knowledge of Pope Benedict's peace proposals before to-day's news despatches were received here. Whatever consideration it given to it will be after consultation with the Allies. Pope Benedict has made several peace proposals in the last two years, but all have been of a general nature. He has made no specific suggestions for conference or other definite steps.

UNITED STATES PREPARED FOR GREAT TASK

Special to The Examiner:

WASHINGTON, Aug. 14. — Two more nations (Argentine and China) appeared to-day nearly ready to plunge into the cauldron of war.

The time limit given Germany to answer Argentine's submarine demands has ended. Unofficial advices indicated that Argentine, as well as the far eastern nation, might enter the struggle against Germany. Argentine perhaps passivley; China actively. This development was supplemented by the possiblity of closer co-operation in war arrangements next week with Japan, as a result of the visit of her mission.

Government Prepared.

On the mechanical side of the war this government is prepared for the great task of assembling and placing next month the bulk of the first drafted army. Initial supplies, except clothing and equipment, would be fully ready, Secretary Baker announced.

With assurances from the government that war profits are to be cut to the minimum a marked improvement in the labour situation through out the country was reported at the Labour Deparment.

REV. J. V. McAULEY IS APPOINTED PARISH PRIEST AT ENNISMORE

Rev. John V. McAuley, curate of the church of the Sacred Heart during the past seven years, has been appointed parish priest at Ennismore, succeeding Rev. Peter McGuire who has resigned on account of ill health.

St. Martin's church, Ennismore, is one of the important posts in the diocese of Peterborough and it is a tribute to the priestly qualities of Rev. Father McAuley that he has been chosen to carry on the work that was promoted by Rev. Dean McColl, Rev. M. F. Fitzpatrick Rev. P. McGuire and their predecessors. Following his ordination, Father McAuley came to the Sacred Heart church practically at its opening, assisting Rev. M. J. O'Brien, the present Bishop of Peterborough and, during the past four years Rev. J. J. O'Brien, parish priest. He has endeared himself to every member of the congregation, has won the esteem of the Catholic laity of this city and of the clergy of the diocese, and has made many friends among the general public. His advancement to the responsible charge at Ennismore is a recognition of his abilities, his constant solicitude for the spiritual welfare of the people and his fidelity to the trust imposed in his curacy. St. Martin's congregation has always been provided with some of the ablest priests of Peterborough diocese and this succession is well sustained in the person of Rev. Father McAuley. With the co-operation of his new parishioners it may be confidently expected that his work will be fruitful of success.

In announcing to the Sacred Heart congregation his departure yesterday, a statement that was received with surprise and evident regret, Father McAuley referred to the cordial relations that had existed between himself, the pastors he had laboured with and the people. His departure meant the severance of happy ties that had been formed during the past seven years. He thanked the people for their many kindnesses during that time and asked that their prayers follow him in his new position.

Rev. Father McGuire has been confined to St. Joseph's hospital for some weeks with rheumatism, which has thereby removed from active service, temporarily at least, one of the stalwarts of the diocese.

Father McAuley assumes his charge at St. Martin's church next Sunday.

British Troops Raided the German Lines Taking a Number of Prisoners—Enemy Artillery Active

HOSTILE RAID

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Aug. 14.— North-east of Gouzeak court and at two points east of Vermelles, British troops raided the German lines last night, taking a few prisoners, Field Marshal Haig announced to-day. A number of the enemy were killed by bombs in their dug-outs. North of Roeux a hostile raid was repulsed. To the east and north-east of Ypres and in the neighbourhood of Lombartzy de, On the coast the enemy's artillery was more active during the night.

Nearly 10,000 Murdered By German Pirates to Date

LONDON, Aug. 14.—It is officially stated that the number of lives reported lost on British merchant vessels from enemy action from the beginning of the war until June 30 last was 9,748, namely, 3,838 passengers and 5,920 officers and seamen.

The Canadians Advanced On 600 Yd. Front

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON Aug. 14—Stewart Lyon's cable to Canadian newspapers to-day says: Posts were pushed out on a front of about 600 yards into ruined houses, from which enemy snipers have been annoying our men in advanced line in the region to the north of the Lens-Lienin road early last night. Little resistance was experienced and only one prisoner was captured. The posts put out by us last night are only eight hundred yards west of centre of city, but a belt or razed houses lies between our man and Lens. Over open space thus secured the enemy is able to direct heavy machine gun fire. The artillery duel rages with strongly unabated violence. In counter battery actions yesterday Canadian gunners caused eight explosions in enemy gun positions and destroyed their gun-pits entirely.

Sober Holiday Reflected By The Police Court

The morning after a public holiday is almost as uneventful in the police court precincts as a Sunday afternoon. The old days of the bulging docks, and the overflow of drunks are but a memory, and in a sense a happy memory of the old pre-prohibition days. Chief Thompson mustered only one drunk this morning and he was taken on Saturday. He alleged that he had become intoxicated on Wilson's invalid stout, a patent tonic which, from this account, may be more inspiring than is suspected of it. He was fined $10. Probably there was some secret drinking over the holiday, the milennium hasn't arrived yet, but the police evidently saw no signs of it. There may not be much virtue in enforced sobriety, but there are other positive evidences that are not without economic and moral value.

CHURCH PARADE ON SUNDAY

The annual 12th of August church parade of the Royal Black Knights of Ireland of the Orange order was held on Sunday night to Knox church. The lodge marched about 100 strong to the church where an excellent and instructive sermon on Orange orders and their work was given by the Rev. Dr. Laurence, Birmingham, U.S.

Special to The Examiner.

LONDON Aug. 14.— China declared war on Germany and Austria to-day, Peking despatches assert.

Car Owners Will Hold Another Run

Members of the Peterborough Automobile Association and all car owners are invited to attend a run to Lakefield on the half-holiday, Thursday, Aug. 16th. The annual picnic is being held that afternoon at St. Paul's Church, Lakefield, at the Pine Grove at the wharf (near the station. Tables will be set from 4 to 8 p.m. Cars can leave Peterborough at any convenient time.

Rev. Father Maher assures all members a real fowl supper. Special tables and a mighty good time.

Strike Now General Throughout Spain

MADRID, Aug. 14.—The strike begun on Friday night by the railroad employes became general at an early hour yesterday morning, when the masons, printers, carpenters and other workmn quit work. As the men received their orders to lay down their tools they went quietly home, and no incident so far has been reported.

Some of the strikers declared that the general strike would last only 24 hours, and that the movement was one in sympathy with the railroad men.

Shops are open as usual, and the population is indifferent.

Germans Financing The Spanish Strikers

BILBAO, Spain, Aug. 14.—Several of the metal workers now on strike have not applied for wages, as the Germans are supplying them with funds.

LIVE STOCK MARKET

TORONTO, Aug. 14.—Live stock receipts heavy, market fair. Hogs, fed and watered, $17.60 to $17.75; off cars, $17.90; f.o.b., $16.60. Others unchanged.

Fresh Fish At Ten Cents Pound

Douros & Gettas Have Secured a Supply From the Food Controller

The Douros and Gettas Fruit Company, George street, have received a supply of the fresh fish that is being distributed by the Food Controller of Canada. This fish is being retailed at ten cents a pound, which is the same price that is being asked in Toronto. It may be that the local dealers in the fish will feel the necessity of raising the price, as the circular issued by the Food Controller distinctly states that dealers outside of Toronto are permitted to retail the fish at ten cents a pound plus express and additional charges for packing.

Under the present circumstances it is hard to see how the local dealers can retail the product at the same price as that asked by the dealers in Toronto. The fish comprises haddock, cod, trout, etc.

Careless Driving Caused Accident

A reckless driver of a rented Ford stripped a Chevrolet of the left-side running board and mud guards on the Chemong Road yesterday. The latter car was driven by Mr. Fred Rappe, who was carefully holding to the right side of the road. The Ford was following and when it endeavoured to pass the Chevrolet found two cars approaching from the north. It was forced to swing to the right and brushed with a rending of metal against the Chevrolet. Only skilful work on Mr. Rappe's part prevented a serious accident. As it was he was forced into the ditch.

Mayor Duffus Back From Kingston Course

Mayor Duffus has returned from Kingston, where he took the officers' course, and the first duty that fell to his attention yesterday was the signing about eight hundred cheques for the beneficiaries of the Patriotic Fund. He stated that the course is an excellent one, and apart from other results, has left him trim and fit.

Auction Sale Of Snowden House Effects

The announcement of the sale of the Snowden House furniture, furnishings, etc. appears in another column. It appears that Mr. Gallop's lease of the Snowden House property expires with the end of this month, and that he has decided not to renew it. Ever since the Dominion Prohibition Act came into force Mr. Gallop has found the changed condition such as would not warrant his continuing in business longer than his lease.

The closing of this first-class hotel will be acutely felt by the travelling public, and cripples the hotel accommodation in Peterborough to a further considerable extent.

The auction sale of the hotel furniture, etc., which is to begin on Tuesday, August 21st, at 1.30 p.m., will doubtless attract a large gathering of buyers, and will likely last for the balance of that week. See advertisement.

The auctioneer is Mr. J. F. Thornton of this city, who so successfully handled the Oriental Hotel sale.

PEACE TALK AIDS KAISER

Former U. S. Socialist Says Party is Ruined.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 14.—Aroused by the pacifist meeting yesterday in the Capital, Charles Edward Russell, former Socialist, and now member of the returned Commission to Russia, to-day denounced all persons proposing peace at this time. He declared that as a result of peace activities in the United States, Socilists have ruined their party. Mr. Russell said the party now consists of little more than an alien element.

"One peace resolution offered in the United States Congress to-day is a greater asset to the Kaiser than a thousand men on the firing line," Mr. Russell said.

Sending of American troops to the eastern front would not, in the opinion of all the returned commissioners, except Mr. Russell, who suggested the plan, be helpful to Russia.

Lieut. J. R. Stratton Reported Wounded

Won Military Cross For Rescuing Wounded Soldier From Dugout

A cable message from London announces the wounding on August 9, of Lieut. James Reginald Stratton, M.C., nephew of the late Hon. J. R. Stratton. No further particulars accompany the cable. Lieut. Stratton won the Military Cross during the fighting in France last summer, when at considerable personal risk, he went out under shell fire and succeeded in locating and effecting the rescue of a wounded soldier in a dugout. Lieut. Wilfred Stratton, a former Varsity rugby and hockey star, now in France, is a brother.

THE SHOE FACTORY BY-LAW.

It is well for the ratepayers to keep in mind the fact that voting upon the bylaw to give the proposed and virtually assured shoe factory of the Ackerman Company a fixed assessment of $23,790 for a period of ten years from October 17th, 1917, will take place on September 6th.

This may be regarded as a small assistance to so important an enterprise; but that is one of the reasons it should be cheerfully given. It will not be burdensome to the ratepayers, and in one sense, of many, be of greater benefit to the city than to the company. The value of the ratepayers gratefully granting the proposed fixed assessmnet will come from the fact that it will show that the citizens of Peterborough appreciate their great industries and have an attitude of welcome and encouragement towards them that will give the city a good name as a manufacturing centre; and, added, to our practical and material advantages, will tend to attract other industries seeking a desirable location.

The proposed shoe factory is a new industry for the city and will be another medium for advertising the fact and attractions of Peterborough as an industrial centre, and will tend to attract others on the principle of the Scriptural saying—"to him that hath shall be given," Peterborough showed a big and an appreciative spirit, and a spirit of loyalty to the future industrial standing of Peterborough, by its generous attitude and appreciation of the Quaker Oats industry. It will show the same spirit by dealing generously with the Ackerman fixed assessment bylaw in appreciation of what the company has contributed to our material assets in the past twenty-five years of its history, and as earnest of what its continued manufacturing operations will mean in employment-giving, and the benefit of the local expenditure of a liberal pay roll. Everybody respects a man with a big heart and warm sympathies, and the world will think better of the Peterborough man that takes a large outlook and shows a generous attitude towards what is the backbone of our prosperity, and the condition of our future growth—manufacturing industries—what we have, and hope to have.

Great Britain has had its third war government; nearly all the other allied powers have had new governments, but Canada muddles on with the same combination of leadership and incapacity; it has had in the beginning.

FOREST RESTORATION.

While the war wages and the powers of human destructiveness work their work of waste, trees grow, water flows, and the reparative forces of nature silently do their appointed task, that is, when they are permitted and encouraged to do so. At one time the glory of this land was its stately and almost priceless forests, the repetition of similar forests that grew, matured and died from century to century; but not all at once. While one growth of trees was passing another was coming on, unmolested by forest fires and the axe of miscalled civilization. Nature's way was to conserve. But we have changed all that. We haven't conserved; we have used and wasted largely; wasted without a thought of restoring the waste, or repairing the ravages we have committed.

The whole northern country was once well forested, bearing the only crop it was fit for growing; we have lumbered it out of existence without care to save maturing growth and thus retain continuity of forest stand and new crop. Fifty or more years ago many of the islands of Stony Lake were well wooded. About half a century ago a forest fire swept them and left bare rocks. Nature has, in some parts, partially repaired the waste, and man might have done much that he has not done to reclothe the stony nakedness with the verdure of trees.

That this is feasible is shown by the action and experience of Mr. J. B. McWilliams, as to his island on Stony Lake, near Burleigh. When, a few years ago, he built a cottage there, his island was, to use his own words, "almost all bare rock, and now I have about twenty-five different kinds of trees growing, besides numerous shrubs, all on less than two acres of area." Here is at once practical proof and precept. It shows what can be done when care and recognition of the value, and love of tree growth are allowed to become agencies in repair of waste and in forest restoration.

On this island we have the beautiful and continuously growing evidence of what can be done on most of the islands of the Kawartha Lakes group, inexpressibly enhancing their present beauty, and in all the arid and treeless region of the north country, that with proper government or county action might be clothed with a profitable growth of forest that would be a merchantable asset and source of revenue for future generations.

Forest conservation and reforestation sentiment and practice grow slowly. The Conservation Commission of the Dominion is slowly forcing its gospel into the minds of the public and the minds of governments. In this, the chairman, Hon. Clifford Sifton is doing a good work, for which he is apparently better fitted than for the political reconstruction of this sadly politics-ridden country. Nature always responds to intelligent appeal to the application of her forces; a disgusted or discouraged people, lost in the mazes of the political labarynth in which we are floundering, does not so promptly respond to interested appeals and empirical projects of political reform.

Many Conservative members of parliament who signed a certificate of character for Hon. Robert Rogers, are giving their heads a top-dressing of penitential ashes.

RAILWAY G[illegible]S.

A citizen calls attention to the fact he asserts that the gates at the railway crossing on George street are not operated, and that instead, their place is taken by a man with a flag. He says that this is dangerous, and that there is liability of accident. If his assertions are correct there is need for looking after the matter. The terrible happening at Bowmanville on Sunday, when five persons were instantly killed, suggests, and more than suggests, emphasizes, the great importance of having level crossings securely guarded. With large auto traffic, and with a good deal of recklessnes on the part of drivers, the danger of accident is increased. If the statements made are well founded the City Council might look into the matter. With no inconsiderable difficulty and delay the council secured gates at several level street crosings. This was done on the ground that they were necessary for the public protection. If the gates were thus necessary and the railways were put to the expense of providing them it seems only reasonable that they should be efficiently operated.

derson, Mrs. Bernie, Mrs. Sanderson, Miss Kenyon, Mrs. Widdifield and Mr. Otto Gliddon.

Thanked the Cottagers.

Mrs. Lawrence Grahame in presenting the prizes thanked the Cottagers' Association for permitting the regatta under the Red Cross auspices, loaning the pavillion, etc., and Mr. Fletcher, proprietor of the store, who gave half the profits from the sales during the day to Red Cross. Mr. Grahame spoke of the good feeling which is springing up between the Americans and Canadians. The Stars and Stripes is gaining popularity since the U.S.A. got in the war and "in with both feet."

$480 Proceeds of Red Cross.

The regatta was run under Red Cross auspices, and well it was handled by that society. On the arrival of the boats and during the day, the ladies served refreshments and lunch for the visitors. This end of the day was run by Mrs. Lawrence Grahame and Mrs. Smith, assisted by forty young ladies. The pavillion was gaily decorated in Red Cross style with flags and bunting, and the assistants attired as nurses.

Saved from Drowning.

One feature of the regatta which has grown practically part of it, is the annual sensational rescue from drowning. This was carried out yesterday when Mr. Plater Sherin of Lakefield, to the horror and distress of scores of onlookers, tipped between Viamede and Juniper. Gunner Wainwright with great presence of mind hastened in a sailing canoe to the unfortunate young man and brought Mr. Sherin safely to shore. Mr. Sherin received the congratulations of many in his sensational escape.

Government Report On The Production Of Cheese And Butter In Canada

Production and Value of Creamery Butter—Production and Value of Factory Cheese—Average Prices

OTTAWA Aug. 14.—In a press bulletin issued by the Census and Statistics Office reports on the total production of butter and cheese in the creameries and cheese factories of Canada for the year 1916 as compared with 1915, the report being based upon returns collected from the dairying branches of the Provincial Departments of Agriculture. The figures for 1915 represent approximate estimates, as the returns for that year are not quite complete. The total number of creameries and cheese fatcories operating in 1916 is reported as 3,446, including 993 creameriees, 1,813 cheese factories, 624 combined factories (cheese and butter) and 16 condensed milk factories. The total number of patrons contributing to creameries and cheese factories during the year 1916 was 221,192, the deliveries of milk amounting to 2,600,542,987 lb., and of cream to 157,020,636 lb. The two chief dairying provinces of the Dominion are Ontario and Quebec. Both manufacture cheese and butter; in Ontario more cheese is made than butter; in Quebec more butter is made than cheese. In Ontario the total number of establishments operating in 1916 was 1,165 and the patrons numbered 87,325, whilst in Quebec the establishment numbered 1,984 and the patrons 79,145; so that the average number of patrons per establishment was 75 in Ontario and 40 in Quebec.

Production and Value of Creamery Butter.

The total production of creamery butter in Canada in 1916 is returned as 82,564,130 lb. of the value of $26,-966,357, as compared with 83,824,176 lb. of the value of $24,368,636 in 1915. Comparing the relative production of the provinces the production in 1916 is highest in Quebec with 34,823,275 lb. of the value of $11,516,148, as compared with 24,680,109 lb. of the value of $8,031,998 in Ontario. These two provinces together produce about 70 p.c. of the total creamery butter of Canada. Of the other provinces the production and value of creamery butter in 1916 were in relative order as follows: Alberta 8,521,784 lb., value $2,619,248; Manitoba 6,574,510 lb., value $2,038,109; Saskatchewan 4,310,-089, value $1,338,180; Nova Scotia 1,586,679 lb., value $505,000; British Columbia 1,245,282, value $497,316; New Brunswick 709,922 lb.; value $236,194; and Prince Edward Island 613,380 lb., value $184,164. The average price per lb. of creamery butter for all Canada works out to 33 cents in 1916 as compared with 30 cents in 1915. By provinces in 1916 the highest price was in British Columbia 42 cents and the lowest in Prince Edward Island 30 cents. In the other provinces the price per lb. for 1916 was as follows: Nova Scotia 32 cents; New Brunswick 33 cents; Quebec 34 cents; Ontario 33 cents, the prairie provinces 31 cents.

Production and Value of Factory Cheese.

The total production of factory cheese in 1916 was 192,968,957 lb., of the value of $35,312,530, as compared with 183,978,808 lb. of the value of $27,587,776 in 1915. By provinces the lead in production is taken by Ontario with a total quantity in 1916 of 126,015,870 lb. of the value of $23,312,-935, Quebec being second with 61,906,-750 lb. of the value of $11,245,104. These two provinces together account for 98 p.c. of the total production of factory cheese. The production and value of fatcory cheese in the other provinces in 1916 were as follows: Prince Edward Island 2,129,736 lb., value 409,495; New Brunswick 1,185,-604 lb., value $210,692; Manitoba 880,-728 lb., value $158,931; Alberta 745,122 lb., value $154,454; Nova Scotia 94,-727, value $16,959 and British Columbia 18,000 lb., value $3,960. The average price per lb. of factory cheese for all Canada works out to 21 centh in 1916 as compared with 17 cents in 1915. In 1916 the average price is highest in British Columbia, 25 cents. In Quebec and Ontario the average price is 18 cents and in Alberta it is 21 cents.

Synopsis Of Proposed By-law

Entitled "A By-law to Aid B. F. Ackerman, Son and Company, Limited, By Exemption From Taxation of the Plant and Premises Herein Described, Above the Present Assessment of the Sum of $23,790.00"

The purpose of the proposed by-law is to grant a fixed assessment of municipal and business taxes to B. F. Ackerman, Son and Company, Limited, of their plant, factory, and lands, which are parts of lots Numbers one and two, north of Dalhousie street, and west of George street, in the City of Peterborough, to remain at the sum of $23,790.00 for the period of ten years from the 15th day of October, 1917.

The proposed fixed assessment shall extend to all business and municipal taxes and all other municipal taxes except local improvement rates, school taxes, taxes imposed by any other authority than that of the Corporation of the City of Peterborough, and war taxes, and this proposed fixed assessment is in consideration of the Company establishing and using in their present factory and plant or constructing a new factory on their lands in connection with the said plant and business, a shoe factory, employing continuously thirty hands for eleven months in the year for ten years from the 15th day of October, 1917. There is at the present time no other established manufacture carrying on the same class and kind of business as the one proposed.

Try it Iced (delicious)

RECIPE: Keep on hand a syrup made up of one half cup of FRY'S Cocoa, one cup of sugar, one cup of warm water. Stir until smooth. Then boil for 5 minutes and chill and add one half teaspoonful of Vanilla Extract. To serve, allow two tablespoonfuls of this syrup to a glass with a little chopped ice and fill with cold milk. Stir well.

Try this cooling, delightful FRY drink. You'll want it often.

A Monster Lunge Caught Yesterday

Mr. T. H. Aitken Hooks the Catch of the Season at Campbelltown

The biggest lunge of the year caught in the Otonabee was hooked yesterday morning at 6 o'clock by Mr. T. H. Aitken of 96½ Lansdowne street, after a half-hour's battle. It tipped the scales at twenty-five pounds, certified to by Alex. Gordon, who weighed it. Mr. Aitken, who has done considerable deep-sea fishing before coming to Canada says that the half-hour it took him to land the big fish was the best half-hour's sport he has had since coming to this country.

Mr. Aitken spends the week ends at Campbelltown and states that the fishing, which has been poor for the past month, is getting good again.

Former Peterboro' Man Is Head Of Grand Lodge I.O.O.F.

Mr. C. H. Mann of Hamilton, a former resident of Peterborough, was recently elected Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of the Independent Order of Oddfellows of Ontario. The Hamilton Times made the following reference to the election:

Mr. Mann needs no introduction to the members of the order in Ontario, for in this and other jurisdictions in Canada and the United States he is known as an active and enthusiastic worker in all branches of the order. He was initiated into the order in Unity Lodge, No. 47, of this city, on April 22, 1903, was elected district deputy grand master for the Hamilton district in 1907, and received the appointment of grand marshal of the grand lodge in 1908 at Orillia. In 1915 he was elected grand warden at Stratford; in 1916 was elected deputy grand master at Chatham and as stated above was to-day elevated to the position of grand master at Toronto.

STUDENT AND QUEUE.

Difficulties of the Early Comers to America.

Chinese students in the early days adapted themselves to their surroundings with remarkable facility, exhibiting little of the conservatism of the Chinese at home. They took naturally to the American mode of living.

The fortunate Chinese students of to-day have few of the difficulties that beset these early comers. They were forced to continue wearing their queues, and this curious fashion placed a certain barrier between them and their American schoolmates. They were not allowed to wear Western styles of clothes, but were obliged to accept a sort of mixture of Chinese and European costume that had nothing to recommend it. This "compromise" suit the boys found so distasteful that they resolved to protest, and this they did effectually by secretly ordering from the tailors the most approved style of suits and all appearing in them at the same time. If not arrayed like Solomon in all his glory, at least they were garbed in a manner to defy adverse criticism from Fifth avenue tailors and haberdashers.

The queue remained. The students dared not go to such lengths as to dispose of it. They simply reduced it to a minimum size, laid it flatly down the back and covered it with shirt and collar. Luckily the collar a la mode in the seventies was high and roomy.

Even though thus reduced and hidden, the queue was worn rebelliously. At last one youth, in rash moment, openly defied the Imperial Throne. He had learned to dance and he did the light fantastic so well that he was very popular at parties. One night, when in evening dress and about to start out, he viewed himself complacently in the mirror. (He was a good looking chap.) But it happened that a mirror on the opposite side of the room reflected his back. He saw the beginning of his queue above the collar line. It jarred his sense of fitness. Forthwith he picked up a pair of scissors and neatly snipped off the offending article and departed with a light-headed feeling in more senses than one.

A few minutes later a maid, smelling a strange odor not at all like black birch or pine, hastened to the student's room, arriving just in time to see the last of the queue sizzling on the glowing fire in the grate.

The young man had a delightful evening, but not so delightful a summer, for, while the rest of the boys were in camp at the seashore, he was obliged to remain in town under the eyes of the Chinese commissioners, who jealously watched his hair until it was long enough to braid into a queue of false hair. Then he was allowed to depart, but with a stern warning. He furnished a sufficiently awful example to keep other students from following in his steps.—World Outlook.

A Timely Anecdote.

"Hindenburg's genius-retreat to the Siegfried line—his recoil in order to spring forward better—seems to have got mixed up somehow with the offensive of Haig and Petain." The speaker was Colonel Bradley Evans, of the committee that entertained the English mission, of which Mr. Arthur J. Balfour was the head, explains the Philadelphia Bulletin. "Yes," he continued, "Hindenburg rather reminds me of the little girl who was sent to the store for fly-paper. Her mother waited for her an hour, and then started out to look her up. She found her on a corner, moving backwards erratically. 'Milly, have you got that fly-paper?' she called. 'No, mother,' said the little girl. 'It's got me; but we're coming together.'"

His Strong Point.

"Is your husband much of a provider, Malindy?"

"He jes' ain't nothin' else, ma'am. He gwine to git some new furniture providin' he gits de money; he gwine to git de money providin' he go to work; he go to work providin' de job suits him. I never see such a providin' man in all mah days."

ITALY'S HARD STRUGGLE.

Selected Difficult Front and Is Making Gallant Fight.

More than two years ago, when Italy was on the verge of entering the present world struggle, a well-known Italian soldier, discussing the Italian plan of campaign, declared that what Italy should do, and what she would, and even must do, were two quite different things. Italy, he said, is entering this war, primarily, to redeem the unredeemed Italian lands in the Trentino, and in the region round about Trieste. From a purely military point of view, the best way of accomplishing her purpose would be to hold her well-nigh impregnable frontier in these regions, and throw all her strength into assisting the French in a great drive east and north from Haute Shone. You would never get the Italian people, however, he contended, much less the Italian soldier, to believe that this longest way round was the shortest way home, and so, for good or ill, Italy must fight amidst the mountains of the Trentino and amongst the barren rocks of the Carso.

Italy has been doing this now for over two years, and it is only quite recently that the world has come to appreciate the stupendous nature of the task which has lain, and still lies, before her. Everyone who visits the Italian front appears to come back filled with admiration for what has been accomplished. Such well-known writers as H. G. Wells and Rudyard Kipling have gone there, perhaps in some doubt, but have returned full of enthusiasm; whilst their writings have done much to clarify the situation, and to present "Italy's effort" in a new light.

The latest writer to place his pen at the service of Italy is Gustave Hervé. He deals with the subject with all his usual vigor, and, in a few master strokes, limns a picture of stupendous difficulties manfully faced and brilliantly overcome, of patience, courage, and earnest devotion, such as cannot fail to help France to realize, more clearly than ever before, that she is really being supported by her southern ally with all that ally's resources. "Nothing," he says, "but the strength and energy of this laborious race could accomplish all the wonderful feats of the Italian army during the last two years. Do people realize that the Italian 'poilus' are fighting often at a height of 5,000 or 6,000 feet, and the difficulties of warfare and the transport of heavy guns under such conditions? Do they know that on the only part of their front which is not mountainous, the district which lies between Gorizia and the sea, there is nothing but heaps of bare rocks, which shelter as many cannon and machine guns as the Austrians have been able to put there?" And so he goes on. He might, of course, have told of many other special difficulties, even beyond the many he does mention, the strangely varied conformation of the land, for instance, which makes a special plan necessary for each of the small simultaneous attacks forming the whole offensive. He might have told of the impossibility of massing troops, ready for assault at any point, in the open, and how, in order to overcome this difficulty, the Italian engineers have cut great underground passages, leading to established points of attack, along which whole battalions can pass freely. There is, however, almost no limit to the details that might be given, and sufficient is told to show that Italy has indeed "special difficulties," and is meeting them with commendable resource and devotion to the common cause. None the less, it is a matter of simple fact that it is Italy's own fault that she is fighting in these regions, and there can be little question that her doing so is at once bad strategy and bad politics.

Grand Trunk Men Help In Food Production Campaign.

Twenty-one thousand cabbages have been grown this year by the men of the Grand Trunk Railway shops at Battle Creek, Mich. The employees of the railway throughout Canada and the United States are giving their active support to the important national campaigns for increasing the supply of foodstuffs, and garden plots have sprung up on vacant land owned by the Company at scores of points on the line. The men are in many instances working on a co-operative basis, large tracts of land being cultivated during the noon hour. The men at Battle Creek, in addition to the great amount of other produce, have twenty-six acres planted with potatoes.

IRISH DELEGATES CANNOT ATTEND.

LONDON, Aug. 13.—In the House of Commons, A. J. Balfour, the British Foreign Minister, in reply to a question asked by Joseph King, said that no passports had been granted to the delegates to the Irish Trade Union Congress to attend the Stockholm conference and that none would be granted.

EXAMINER AND MERCHANTS

Great DOLLAR DAY
MONEY SAVING EVENT
Will soon be here

GRATIFIED by the enthusiasm of the people over the previous Dollar Days in Peterboro, and urged by the people from outside who were unable to attend the last one owing to bad roads, the Examiner is again co-operating with the Merchants in featuring a Mid-summer Dollar Day.

WEDNESDAY, AUG. 22

The date selected should be the most suitable of all the summer season, for a record crowd to attend from outside points. There's everything to come for, and only regrets if you don't. There's a company of hustling merchants preparing a feast unequalled in the history of the city. In any line of goods you want, you will find your Dollar has a buying power you would have thought impossible. As Dollar Day selling is just for one day, the merchants in order to add zest to the excitement, make their offerings look reckless, but it is because they have entered into the spirit of the thing, and they are bound to do their part at considerable loss.

Estimate the NUMBER of these Blanks that will be filled in and Dropped into the Ballot Box at the Examiner Office by 7 p. m. on DOLLAR DAY.

As a guide in estimating the probable number of blanks that will be used, the three previous Dollar Day results may be studied. On the first one, March 12, 1914, with good weather and roads, there were 16,000 blanks dropped into the box at the Examiner Office. On the next Dollar Day, in 1915, with bad weather and impassable roads, the result showed only 10,807 estimate blanks put in the box. On the last summer Dollar Day, held in August, 1916, when holiday season affected the crowd, there were 7,054 blanks dropped in the box. With these figures as a guide an intelligent estimate can be made if the weather and season are taken into consideration.

The Dollar Day crowd is the happiest gathering that meets in Peterboro in the year.

Brigadier-General Hughes Pays Tribute To His Old Battalion

Recalls the Bravery and Success of the 21st at St. Eloi, Courcellette and Vimy Ridge in Letter to Present Commander, Col. Jones

Peterborough was well represented in the 21st Battalion whose splendid services are referred to in the following letter received by its present commanding officer Col. Jones, from Brigadier-General W. St. Pierre Hughes, who was formerly Colonel Hughes O. C. of the 21st, preceding Col. Jones:

Dear Colonel Jones:—

"It is almost one year since I left the 21st Canadian Battalion and I feel that as the anniversary of my leaving draws near. I should say something to you regarding the pride I have taken in the wonderful achievement performed by the 21st since going to France and to congratulate you, your officers, non-commissioned officers and men, on the most glorious record which they have built up.

"After the fighting of St. Eloi was over, General Harrington, G.S.O.I., of the Corps told me in your presence. The 21st Battalion did everything that was asked of them during the St. Eloi fighting."

"They took the Sugar Refinery at Courcelette and 286 prisoners. This performance is referred to in the "London Magazine" of February, 1917, as 'the most outstanding performance done by any Canadian Battalion on the Somme'."

"Their raid on the 17th January, 1917, was the most successful of all raids put on by Canadian Battalions up to that time.

"Their capture of their objective in the Vimy Ridge fight and their gallant conduct in the fighting which has followed that eventful performance has been splendid.

"Too much praise cannot be given yourself, your officers, non-commissioned officers and men, and my wish is that you may continue in the same gallant way that has so far marked the performances of the 21st Battalion and I feel sure, when the war is over and the enemy has been finally beaten that the record of the dear old 21st will be still more glorious and more outstanding than it is even now."

"I wish you all God speed and good luck and I will continue to read with interest the performances of my gallant old regiment. I am.

Yours sincerely,
W. ST. P. HUGHES,
Brigadier-General,
C.O.C. Canadians,
Crowborough, Sussex.

Government Dissolution May Come If Labour Upholds Henderson

LONDON, Aug. 14.—A statement by Arthur Henderson, the Labour leader and Minister without portfolio in the British War Council, who resigned Saturday, is expected to be made in Parliament.

It was reported that Mr. Henderson would demand the production of all communications between the British and Russian Governments with reference to the Stockholm conference, with a view to showing that the Premier put a wrong interpretation on the Russian telegram he quoted in a letter to Mr. Henderson.

If the House of Commons endorses the demand, a secret session is likely to be held for the confirmation of certain statements made in a morning newspaper to a telegram which, it is stated, M. Kerensky, the Russian Premier, sent to Albert Thomas, French Minister of Munitions, declaring that the Russian Government not only was not interested in the Stockholm meeting, but that Premier Kerensky, himself, hoped the conference would not be held.

No Evidence of Opposition.

Russian delegates Erlich and Rousanoff, now in London, without referring specifically to this alleged telegram, have given to the Daily News a statement to the effect that there is no evidence that Preimer Kerensky and the Russian Government oppose the conference, and declaring they received from the Council of Workmen's and Soldiers' delegates less than a week ago a request to hasten arrangements for the conference. They say the communication received by the British Government from Petrograd does not alter its position in the least degree, and affirms the Russian Government cannot officially support the conference, but certainly does not oppose it.

It seems to be the general opinion of Parliamentary writers that things will not be straightened without trouble. The possible dissolution of Parliament to ascertain the country's feelings by a general election is suggested by the Daily News, which supports Mr. Henderson, and which, says the Government, is approaching a serious crisis. If the Labour conference to be held on the 21st, upholds Mr. Henderson and endorses the vote of the Labour conference to attend the Stockholm meeting, all Labour ministers, who number seven, must withdraw from the Government, the paper says. In such circumstances, according to the Premier's friends, he will immediately advise the King to dissolve Parliament. On the other hand the Daily News says that if the conference on the 21st fails to support Henderson the crisis will be ended.

FISH DEALERS ALL ARE TO REGISTER

Another Move to Ensure Plentiful Supply—Step Also Aims to Prevent Extortion

To insure that a plentiful supply of fresh fish shall be available to the people of Canada at reasonable prices as a substitute for beef and bacon, it was announced yesterday that all wholesale fish dealers in Canada shall be required to register at the Food Controller's Office, Ottawa. A nominal charge of twenty-five cents is to be made for registration.

It is the intention of the Food Controller to secure returns from all houses registered, with a view to preventing excessive charges. Forms of registration will be supplied upon application to the Food Controller's Office, Ottawa.

It is the object of the Food Controller to assist wholesalers in every possible way to secure the supplies necessary for their business and to increase the demand for the products.

The Fish Committee have interviewed leading wholesale fish dealers in Montreal and are assured of the same hearty support, which they received in Toronto. The success of the plans of the Food Controller are dependent upon the response of the general public.

CENSOR PASSES YIDDISH.

One Effect of Russian Revolution—Living Cost High—Shoes at $15 a Pair.

TORONTO, Aug. 14.—Mrs. J. Sarodsky has received a letter from Russia, dated April 26, in which the writed describes the prevailing conditions in Russia. A translation of the letter, which is written in Yiddish, runs as follows:

Dear Sister, Zapora,—It is for quite long time that I have not written you, because yiddish was barred by the censor. Now, however, they allow yiddish letters to pass, so that you in America can write us.

"The enormous high prices rise from day to day. A pair of small boots cost thirty "rubel" (about $15). Clothing of all sorts are similarly high. Sugar costs one rubel (50 cents) a pound. A small bag of flour costs 30 rubel ($15), and the like. Now you can judge for yourself in what a predicament we are. Our eyes are constantly kept in the direction of America. The children cry for food, but we have nothing to give them. Last winter was a very terrible and severe one, we thought that we should not be able to live through it."

The writer goes on to describe the effect of the Russian revolution. She states that although there is great rejoicing in the streets, yet people fear lest the "old order of things" may come back again.

Grand Trunk At Toronto Exhibition

The work of installing the Grand Trunk exhibit at teh Canadian National Exhibition at Toronto, which opens on August 25th, is now being proceeded with, and a most attractive display of Canada's beauties and resources is promised. Many new ideas are being introduced this year and the Grand Trunk building will be one of the features of the Exhibition.

In addition to a comprehensive display of the principal attractions of Eastern Canada, including enlargements from direct photographic negatives recently taken in the many districts that make up what is known as the Highlands of Ontario and the Thousands Islands region, there will be a series of handsome views of the Atlantic Coast and other territories that appeal to the holiday seeker.

All phases of life in the splendid Western Canada territory served by the Grand Trunk Pacific will be depicted and there will be samples of soil, dairy and farm products, and specimens of the rich mineral wealth of British Columbia. The new route to Alaska will be shown in an attractive manner, while the Transcontinental Line, connecting Eastern and Western Canada, and opening up opportunities for thousands of homeseekers in New Ontario will have a prominent place in the exhibit. Representatives competent to give all information concerning the territories served by the Grank Trunk System will be in attendance.

WILL GIVE DETAILS.

Defender of Miss Cavell Arrives in United States.

AN ATLANTIC PORT, Aug. 14.—Gaston De Level, well-known Belgian lawyer, who defended Edith Cavell in the German court-martial, which ended with her sentence to death, arrived here yesterday.

He will go at once to Saratoga Springs, N.Y., to deliver a lecture before the American Bar Association this month on the subject of German law in Belgium. He also is expected to touch on the Cavell case.

Copy Of German War Prophecy

Copy of Document Over 200 Years Old Taken from a German Prisoner is Forwarded to Toronto Business Man.

TORONTO, Aug. 14.—"A war prophecy found among the effects of a German prisoner taken by the British, has been forwarded to a Toronto business man, who has two sons at the front. It is entitled, "Peace Prospects," and reads:

"On a parchment dated 1701 found in a monastery wall at Wismar Macklenberg, the following prophecy is written:

"At the time when the Papal throne is empty Europe will be visited with an awful chastisement. The murder of a Prince will start the conflagration..

"Seven nations will rise against a 'Bird with one head and a Bird with two heads.' A noble from Central Country, who mounts his horse from the off-hand-side will be led from victory to victory.

"There will be a great struggle in the East and in the West. Troops will dart by without horses. Fiery dragons will fly through the air, spitting fire and brimstone. Towns and villages will be destroyed and humanuity will look on helpless.

"Tumult will last three years.

"The time will come when no man will buy or sell—and when bread will be marked and allotted:

"Oceans will redden with blood, and men will lie under the sea and wait their prey.

The people of the seven seas will fall upon those of the Land and the vanquished will tremble and quake. Still they will not remain utterly crushed, but will endure to the end.

"The War will begin when the corn ears are swelling. When the cherry blooms the third time will the heat of battle be fiercest, and peace will be signed finally at the coming of Christmas."

Armenia's Place In The War Discussed By T. P. O'Connor

Thousands of Armenians Were Murdered at Different Points—Victims of the Turks' Slaughtering Sword

While in this country Mr. T. P. O'Connor has consented to make a number of speeches in behalf of Armenian and Syrian Relief Work, a cause in which he is much interested. He is a member of the London Committee which is working for these peoples, and has long been a student of the "Armenian Question." On Saturday, August 11th, Mr. O'Connor addressed a mass meeting at Chantauqua, New York. His speech follows:

"The story of the Armenian massacres is familiar to you all. The thousands murdered at different points, the terrible shame and more prolonged agony of deportations—the women betrayed by officers, then passed on to the gendarmes, then to the Kurds; the women compelled to march on foot, sometimes naked under burning suns and pushed on with the bayonet or hook when they fell fainting. You know of the madness that resulted, the suicides, and the abandonment of children, whose cries of agony could no longer be borne. So it went on day after day, month after month, until the number of those who died of the persecution rose to appalling figures.

TWO QUESTIONS.

And now let me ask two questions; first what is the duty of the citizens of the British Empire? The answer is but too clear. It was the diplomacy of Lord Beaconsfield as Prime Minister that gave back in the Treaty of Berlin the Armenians who had been transferred from Turkish to Russian rule by the Treaty of San Stefano. Those who like myself followed the Eastern policy of Gladstone when this controversy was being fought out can say that our withers are unstrung. But after all the responsibility remains and many Englishmen today abhor the policy which they acclaimed in the older time, and are doing their best to repair it. This is one of the reasons why the Armenian Committee in London has been able to make so successful an appeal to the generosity of the British people.

What I ask next is, what is the duty of the American people? They also are responsible for Armenia, though in a different way. One of the things which struck me most when reading the stories of these atrocities is the large part which America has played in the history of Armenia and of other countries of the East. It was her universities, among others Harvard, Yale and Princeton, that trained many of the Armenians who first played a large part in educating and up-lifting their country and afterwards were among the first victims of the Turks' slaughtering sword. It was the American mission school and that especially famous school, Roberts College at Constantinople, which educated and trained young Armenian men and women to teach in their own elementary schools. But there was another debt which Armenia owed America, apart from this magnificent contribution—the education of her people—and that was the spirit of hope, of energy, of aspiration towards liberty which must radiate from every centre of American culture.

THE RESPONSIBILITY.

That responsibility, though a glorious one is also onerous for it throws on the American people the duty of rescuing, helping, starting again the remnants of the Armenian race which the massacres have left. That responsibility has been met by your people with apparently a fine sympathy and generosity. Tens of thousands of Armenian men, tens of thousands of Armenian women, above all tens of thousands of Armenian children are alive to-day who would have been in their graves from hunger, from disease, from exposure, but for the dollars that have been sent from over the seas to them. You must not weary in this well doing. The need is still great. I say great, it is gigantic, it is appalling.

In face of such facts I do not envy the man or woman of either British or American lands who can sleep at night if his ears have been deaf, his heart a stone to the thousands of helpless, tortured, starving people who send their wail cross continent and ocean to the inner ear and the generous heart of every good man and good woman.

THE FUTURE.

I have been asked to say a word about the future of the Armenians. I can speak with this much authority, that I have been in closest touch with Nubar Boghos Pasha, the energetic and wise leader of his race. I know the views of some of the British states men who have to deal with this problem. Let me first make this statement, massacred, though they have been to such an appalling extent, gigantically reduced though they have been in numbers, the Armenian race is not doomed to die. No great race dies. A race is like one of those great streams that locked in the icy embrace of winter and frost for ten thousand summers, yet flow on and on and will flow on till time and earth have come to an end. So it has been with the races which racial or religious hate, the sharp sword, the unequal law, the perodical massacre have attempted to destroy. So it has been with the Irish, with the Jews, with the Armenians. The Armenian, like the great river, flows on and on. In the meantime we have to keep the Armenian alive; we have to train his children for future work; we have to give seed for the ground to which they will in time return. But that is not enough. I hear people to-day talking peace when there is no peace. Can any man of sense or who loves liberty, who hates oppression, who deplores the ocean of blood which has been shed during the last three years contemplate that happening without bringing some divine compensation to the suffering world? And must not the very finest compensation be that every oppressed nationality shall be liberated? The case is strong for Belgium, for Alsace Lorraine, for Italia Irredenta, for the Slavs, the Poles, for Ireland, but assuredly strong as is the claim for each of these nationalities, in no case is it as strong as in that of the Armenians. To give these people back to Turkey only to be massacred again would to my mind be one of the most abominable crimes ever committed. I know that the present Prime Minister of England is pledged never to consent to such a crime. I am perfectly sure that Mr. Wilson will never consent to such a crime. Whatever happens after this war, the Armenian man must be saved forever from the knife of the Turkish assassin, the Armenian woman must be saved from outrage and from death, the Armenian babe must be preserved from torture and murder.

FUTURE GOVERNMENT

I may be now asked what form the future government of the Armenians may take. At an early period of the war this question was discussed in the Armenian Committee in London with Lord Bryce in the chair. At the time the one thing we could think of was that the Armenians should be saved from future massacres, and therefore that any country—any government—which secured them from massacre, should be welcomed. We knew too, that a good many Armenians and much Armenian territory had passed into the hands of the Russians, and that one the whole the Russian government had acted well. The Armenians had prospered and had multiplied and there had been no attempt in recent years to attack them. We therefore rather looked to Russia as the power that would have to liberate Armenia, and we found it difficult to give any encouragement to the ideal of an Armenia united and self-governed, deeply as we sympathized with it.

But Russia has had her revolution. There is a new and enlightened Russia, and we note with satisfaction that one of the very first pronouncements of the new Russian rulers was that Armenia should have such autonomy as she desired. I view the Armenian problem from a different angle accordingly now and for myself I give my full adhesion to the ideal of the Armenians themselves; namely that they should be all united—those not merely in the Turkish territory of to-day, but those in Russia as well—that when united they should have self government, guaranteed if need be by some of the Great Powers; that they should have free access to the sea and that thus they should start once more and begin the building up from the ruins of so many centuries the great cultured, united and free Armenia of the ages before Turkish savagery conquered their ancient and historic kingdom.

A SINGLE FACTOR.

This word finally; how does the case of Armenia bear upon the merits and the issues of this war? I am content to have my view of these two things decided by this single factor in the great struggle. I am content to have the merits and the aims of the two sets of belligerents tested by his case. For it is one of the most lamentable facts in this whole tragic story that the German rulers have played a terrible part in these massacres—I say rulers deliberately for we have many Germans earnestly interested in the fate of the Allies. I have met one of them at various Armenian Conferences, Dr. Liepsius. There was a German Consul in nearly every single one of the great Armenian settlements where the massacres took place. The wires were open as we know between the Armenian settlements and Constantinople for as I have said already the massacres were ordered by telegram from the Government in Canstantinople if the wires were open between Armenia and Constantinople, they were open between Armenia and Berlin.

For a generation the voice of Berlin has been omnipotent in Constantinople. At the very moment the troops of Germany and Turkey were fighting side by side. Is it not clear, therefore, that Berlin had only to say a word and the massacres would have begun, and even if they had begun would not a word have brought them to an immediate end? For these reasons I feel entitled to say that the guilt of these hideous massacres lies at the door of the German as well as of the Turkish authorities. If I needed further proof of this fact I would point to the action of the representatives of Germany: to Wangenheim refusing your ambassador Mr. Morgenthau's appeal for intervention; to Count Bernstorff's attempt at Washington to deny the massacres; to the statemen of Bethman Holweg, Zimmerman and other German officials in Berlin, which if they did not justify, at least extenuated this horrible, gigantic, unsurpassed crime against humanity.

HUMAN CHOICE.

As having that conviction how can I, how can any man who loves liberty, hates oppression, loathes cruelty and massacre, how can I help feeling that I am on the right side when I feel myself in hostility to the present regime in Germany? How can I look for hope for the Armenians except in the defeat of both Turkey and Turkey's ally, the militarist party in Berlin? For these reasons I rejoice that your great country has entered the war, has made the wise and the just and the human choice in the war.

I claim to know something of American history and of American character. America, it is true, is patient, long suffering, slow to move, a peaceful nation, living and wanting to live in peace with all nations to the sons and daughters of whom she had opened her hospitable shores and given prosperity and freedom. America was unprepared for war, but never has America undertaken any task which she has not had the tenacity and courage to carry through. She can be ruthless and relentless, as well as gentle and patient, and it is my confident prophecy that of all the nations that will hold out to the last hour and to the last man until liberty and justice, democracy and peace once more are enthroned in mens' hearts and the institutions of nations, Amreica will be the chief one."

Will Invite Hon. W. J. Hanna Here

At the Patriotic Rooms on Friday, Messrs. J. A. Alymer, W. H. Dunsford, Joseph Wearing, R. R. Hall, G. A. Gillespie and W. R. Morris, representing the local branch of the Organization of Resources Committee, met to receive the report of the delegates to the Convention of the Women of Ontario, held recently to consider the matter of food conservation. Mrs. W. R. Morris, and Mrs. A. Stevenson made the suggestion, which was adopted, that W. J. Hanna be invited to address a large mass meeting in the Armouries, early in September. It was also suggested that the Board of Education be asked to see to it that the principles of thrift in food are enjoined on all pupils attending the city schools.

Will Spend a Couple of Days Here Renewing Acquaintances — Mr. Saltzman Has Been on a Visit to the West

Rev. A. Saltzman, who was in charge of the Jewish synagogue here for about a year, and left Peterborough on a lecture tour about five months ago, under the auspices of the Zionism organization, had a most successful trip, visiting the provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta and British Columbia. In many points in the provinces mentioned the organization is already formed, but Mr. Saltzman formed ten new odganizations on the trip.

REV. A. SALTZMAN.

He is in the city for a few days before leaving for New York.

Western Trip.

Speaking of his western trip, Mr. Saltzman said that he observed more patriotism in the western provinces than in the east. Mr. Saltzman said he never visited a house but what the women of the household were busily engaged in knitting socks for soldiers or some other form of industry in connection with the war.

One reason Mr. Saltzman has for believing that the allies will win the war is that based on the understanding that the allies will restore Palestine to the Jewish people. "For the allies to win the war means a victory to the Jewish people. In olden times when a king promised anything to the Jewish people it always meant victory for that particular king," said Mr. Saltzman.

Crop Situation.

"The best crop of the west," said Mr. Saltzman, "is in Manitiba. Next comes Alberta with a medium crop, and Saskatchewan is almost a failure because of the dry season."

Mr. Saltzman is delighted to renew the acquaintance of his Peterborough friends and to find everybody well.

Mr. Saltzman leaves Peterborough this week for the United States. He is delighted with his trip throughout the west. It was a success both mentally and financially. He may decide to remain in New York, otherwise he will return to Kansas City.

HUNDREDS SPENT THE WEEK-END TENTING ON THE OTONABEE

Rice Lake proved as attractive as ever to the holiday crowds from Peterborough. Every skiff headed south either on Sunday or yesterday, and most of them sought the wider waters below. In many cases they pulled up for shore dinners and otherwise enjoyed the beauties of Rice Lake in its richest rainment. From the city to the second bridge two hundred or more campers pitched their tents on Saturday afternoon, and made three days of it. In this respect the river colony has seldom been so numerous as yesterday, and the fishermen up and down the river were beyond count. P. C. Sanbash landed nine bass in the vicinity of landed nine bass in the vicinity of fairly satisfactory holiday. Of course the figures are his own, and the fish have not been officially counted.

The Summer Cultivation Of Old Meadows

Deep Ploughing is Not Necessary —New Ploughing Should Be Rolled Each Day

ROOT CROPS

Two years, on the average farm, is quite long enough to leave meadows down, for best results and greatest profits. They should then be broken up and cultivated for other crops.

The present is an excellent time to commence this operation. During haying and before grain harvest, there are many days after showers, when the teams can be profitably put at ploughing the old meadow.

Deep ploughing is not necessary nor need the furrows be set up with a narrow plough. Rapid work at this time of year is essential. A two-furrow plough, with three horses, will turn over a large piece of land in a day. At the close of each day the area ploughed that day should be rolled. This breaks the lumps, presses down the furrows, re-establishes connection between the surface soil and the subsoil, bringing up the moisture from the latter to aid in rotting the sod.

NOXIOUS WEEDS.

After rolling, discing and harrowing should not be delayed. With such cultivation one retains a surface mulch, opens, aerates and fines the soil and destroys many bad types of noxious weeds and with the co-operation of a summer sun this work is most effective. With the present scarcity of labour, this is the cheapest and most practicable method of weed destruction and soil preparation for grain or even for hoed crops.

After the sod is decayed, a rigid or spring-tooth cultivator with wide points should be kept going at intervals until autumn. Then the land should be thoroughly ploughed, as deep as the humus or plant food in the soil will allow. On the Dominion Illustration Stations, some results have been obtained in comparing the summer cultivation of sod land with fall ploughing the same, which indicates very clearly the benefit derived from summer cultivation as outlined above. In addition to the greater yield obtained, it should be remembered that the land is thereby put into much cleaner condition for subsequent crops.

AN EXAMPLE.

Two fields of 4 acres each were taken; the first field was ploughed after harvest, was cultivated occasionally during the summer and autumn and ploughed in the autumn; the other field of 4 acres was left in the sod also ploughed in the autumn. The oats from the summer-cultivated field gave a yield of 15 bushels more per acre than the field ploughed in the autumn. This difference of 60 bushels on the four-acre field at 50 cents a bushel shows a total gain of $30.00. Counting the cost of summer cultivating at $4.00 per acre, a total cost of $16.00 for the 4 acres, an increase in net profit of $14.00 or $3.50 per acre was obtained. The soil on the cultivated field being in a much finer condition and almost free from weeds, the difference in the profits from the two fields, if worked alike, should be almost as great the following season.

Roots: 28 rows of sugar beets grown on summer-cultivated land produce 10 1-2 tons, while 36 rows of the same length grown on land simply spring ploughed only produced 9 tons, a difference of 3,733 pounds. The price paid at the factory being $5.63 per ton, a gain of $16.03 per acre was shown in favour of the after-harvest cultivation.

Carload of Bass For Sturgeon Lake

LINDSAY, Aug. 13.—A carload of young bass, in charge of Mr. Watson, has passed through to Bobcaygeon, where the fish will be placed in Sturgean Lake, and also Emily Creek. Huns Released Living Skeleton

Dr. Karl Liebknecht Weighed Only 84 Pounds.

PARIS, Aug. 14.—Dr. Karl Liebknecht, Socialist leader in the German Reichstag, who was arrested in connection with the May Day demonstrations in Berlin in 1916, was liberated a fortnight ago by the German Government through fear that he might die in prison. He is said to be suffering from tuberculosis, weighing only 84 pounds.

The authenticity of the above seems certain, says the Tempe' Geneva correspondent, although the German newspapers in obedience to orders have kept silent regarding it.

"The news," says the correspondent "was brought here by a Hollander who had just arrived from Germany. He says the trades union organizations brought pressure upon the government for the release of Dr. Liebknecht, who is now in a private hospital, and is not expected to recover, suffering, in addition to the lung malady, from mental depression, the result of inhuman treatment while in prison."

TORONTO STRENGTHENS LEAD IN THE INTERNATIONAL LEAGUE

RICHMOND, Va., Aug. 13.—If heavy batting be the things of which victories are made and pennants won, Toronto certainly deserves the leadership in the International League, judging by their performance against Richmond to-day when Larry Lajoie's swat fiends clouted Donahue for nineteen hits of mixed variety and eleven runs. The score was: Toronto 11, Richmond 6.

The Leafs went out in front by Saturday's win followed by a double victory over Newark on Sunday.

STRIKE HAS BEEN SHELVED

TORONTO, Aug. 14.—The Great North Western has named F. H. Markey of Montreal as its representative on the Board of Conciliation. This shelves a strike for the present.

PALESTINE PILLAGED.

Country is Almost Bare of Corn, Turks Having Destroyed the Planted Crops.

CAIRO, Egypt, Aug. 14.—"Palestine is to-day somewhat cut off from the world and news of the dreadful happenings within its borders reaches civilization slowly. It is usually impossible to learn the fate of individuals, but a good, general idea of the situation is in our hands.

The disaster that befell the Armenian nation is now being meted out to the mixed non-turkish population of Syria and Palestine. Families are being massacred, towns and territories evacuated, communities plundered and given over to pillage.

The system of oppression in Palestine is thorough, but it is also stupid and wasteful. Cavalry horses are allowed to graze on such of the scanty young crops as the wretched inhabitants have been able to grow, so that there will be no grain this year in a country which is all ready well-nigh bare of corn.

MAY STOP "JOY RIDES."

Users of Automobiles in United States Asked to Economize in Use of Gasoline.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 14.—Warning of the possibility of drastic action by the American Government to stop excessive pleasure use of automobiles during the war, in order that the gasoline needs of the United States and its allies may be met, is given in a statement issued by Director Van H. Manning, of the Bureau of Mines in which he asks the co-operation of automobile owners in stopping the practise.

Enough gasoline to care for the future supply of America and perhaps that of its allies will be saved, in the opinion of Mr. Manning, "if automobile owners of the country will stop unnecessary and extravagant pleasure riding, and if owners and dealers handle this fuel in a careful and economical manner."

LT. ROBT. BOYCE'S DEATH.

Officer of Engineers, Weakened by Gas and Exposure, Succumbed to Dental Shock.

LONDON, Aug. 14.—A verdict of accidental death was returned at the inquest on Second Lieut. Robert Boyce, R.E., who died after having had some teeth extracted under an anaesthetic by a dental surgeon at Maidenhead. Boyce, who was an engineer by profession, came to England with the Canadian contingent, and was attached to the Royal Engineers. He had seen service in France and Belgium, and been gassed. He was on the Gloucester Castle when she was torpedoed, and was rescued from an open boat, but after much exposure. The jury expressed sympathy with the wife and family.

U. S. PROHIBITS EXPORT OF AIRPLANES.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 13.—Neutral countries have been pouring in orders for American airplanes at such a rate that in order to conserve the supply for itself and allies the Government has been obliged to prohibit the export of aircraft except by license.

Dates on Which Men in U. S. Will Report for Service.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 14.—Provost Marshal Gen. Crowder announced to-day that 30 per cent. of the men drafted for the national army would be called to the colours Sept. 5; another 30 per cent. on Sept. 16, a third 30 per cent. on Sept. 30, and the remaining 10 per cent. as soon thereafter as possible.

Athletic Sports.

"Athletics and soldiering go hand in hand. A good athlete generally makes a good soldier. As far as we are concerned, the more athletics the merrier," says an army officer.

"Our country should do everything to encourage rough manly sports. Away with the tango palaces and such places! On with every kind of rough sport that is going to help make the youths and men of the nation physically fit to undergo whatever duties may confront them!

"We not only want athletics outside the army, but we want athletics inside the army as part of the military curriculum. Athletic games and sports should be features in every training camp, and for that matter not only running, jumping, throwing the weights, swimming, etc., but also boxing and wrestling. All such sports make for better physical development, encourage self reliance and breed confidence. A man in good physical condition will shoot better, march longer and withstand the rigors of campaigning better than his soft and flabby brother."

Naming Submarines.

Every one knows what submarines are and what an important factor they have become in modern naval warfare. Their nomenclature is rather interesting, according to the Popular Science Monthly. In the United States navy the first of these crafts were named for various kinds of fish and reptiles, and we had such odd cognomens as Adder, Moccasin, Pike, Sturgeon, Shark, Carp, Haddock, etc., on the naval lists. Before this list of piscatorial names ran out the system was changed, and designations of A-1, A-2, B-1, B-2, etc., down to the more recent submarines known as the O class. In general the numbers applied correspond to the particular lot in which they were constructed, and the letters closely follow the number of years since they were first built. In Germany they are all known as U boats, the U being the first letter of unterseeboot, meaning submarine.

Blunders of a Sculpter.

Stroll back of the treasury department building in Washington into Potomac park and look upon the statue of General William T. Sherman. At each corner of the base stands a soldier figure in full uniform and equipment. Since the day of the unveiling military men have smiled at the lack of knowledge of military costumes displayed by the sculptor. Each figure wears a blanket roll over the right instead of over the left shoulder, making impossible the use of his rifle. The canteen rests on the left hip under the blanket roll, whereas custom places it on the right, and the cartridge pouch is placed on the right hip, while the military manner of dress prescribes that it be worn in front or on the side.

Caustic Criticism.

A young New York man, a member of one of the first families as far as wealth is concerned, had been in the habit of writing poems, which, unable to dispose of, he managed to get printed in certain publications by paying therefor at advertising rates. He attended a social gathering at which a cynical old fellow named Timble, who despised the would be poet, knowing of his manner of obtaining publicity, chanced to be present. The rich young man lost no chance of referring to his "works," and finally remarked, ostentatiously, that he was born on the same day that Washington Irving died.

"Both of which occurrences," snapped old Timble, "have had a very depressing effect upon American literature."

Bible of the Supreme Court.

In the United States supreme court instead of many Bibles we find but one small volume, now celebrated as the Justices' Bible, used continuously during all the years since 1800 for the installation of oaths of all the justices and the pledging of allegiance of all the attorneys who have practiced before that court. No wonder that on an average for about every decade of this period a new or extra outside cover of black leather has been required to keep the red morocco binding of the little book in such freshness as it still possesses. This Bible is five and a half inches long and three and a half inches wide, and tradition says that it formed one of 20,000 which congress imported in the early days of the republic to relieve the Scriptural dearth of the country. The title page shows that it was printed at Oxford in 1769. This Bible has always been in the care of the clerk of the supreme court.

Tribute to a Dog.

To the mind of the true dog lover there are few human passions not shared in by the dog. The dog is subject to anger, jealousy, hatred, envy, love and grief, and it shows gratitude, pride, courage, generosity and fear. It sympathizes with its master in his troubles, and there are numerous cases on record where dogs have rendered the most valuable kind of service at great risk to their own safety and comfort. The dog has an excellent memory, it is capable of associating ideas, and its judgment is often singularly correct. These are the qualifications which raise the dog above all other animals and fit him for the companionship of man. It has the physical and intellectual faculties that never fail to arouse our love and admiration.

Pet and companion of old folks, guardian and playmate of children, friend and servant of man, behold the dog! Long live this noble animal!—William Wood in Philadelphia Ledger.

First Sleeping Cars.

The first sleeping cars ever designed were used on the Cumberland Valley railroad between Harrisburg and Chambersburg, Pa. They were built in the year 1838 and ran for several years. One end of the car was arranged in the ordinary way, with day seats; the other end was fitted up with eighteen sleeping berths for the night, which were changed for the day's running so as to make omnibus seats on each side of the car. There were three lengths of berths and three tiers on each side. The top tier of berths hoisted on a hinge and was secured by rope supports to the ceiling of the car. The middle tier consisted of the back of the omnibus seat, hinged and supported in the same manner. The lower tier was the day seat along the side of the car. There was no charge for sleeping accommodations.

Your Watch and the Sun.

In addition to telling you the time of day your watch may be used for keeping track of the sun. When the orb of day finishes its day's journey and disappears in the west note the time by your watch. Then draw a horizontal line (imaginary, of course) from the point of the hour hand to the opposite side of the dial. The time indicated by the line on this side will be the time at which the sun rises in the morning. Thus if the sun sets at 8 at night the line shows that it will rise at 4 in the morning; if it sets at 7 it will rise at 5; if at 5 it will rise at 7, and so on.

A Round About Trip.

In Copenhagen one may buy a ticket to New York via the Transsiberian route. A trip from Denmark to New York by way of the Transsiberian railway would cover something more than 15,000 miles. The journey would be from Copenhagen to Petrograd, thence across Russia and Servia to Vladivostock, thence by way of Japan across the Pacific and thence across the American continent to New York.

LONDON, Aug. 14.— The executive of the Labour party to-day decided not to change his attitude toward the Stockholm Socialist conference. This means that in so far as favouring British labour representatives at Stockholm is concerned the labour party will stand behind Arthur Henderson, and the convention of last week, which voted to send delegates, despite the announcement of the Government's opposition to the conference through the statement that passports for the Stockholm would not be issued.

The United States food controller says he is going to stop wheat gambling. If he does so he might impart the secret of his success to our government authorities.

PLANS TO CURB PROFITEERS.

Cheap Bread is Hoover's First Step—Elevators, Millers, and Bakers Notified.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 14. —Herbert Hoover yesterday began his drive on high prices.

His first effort is directed toward lowering and stabilizing the price of the American loaf. His next step will be to stabilize prices on canned goods, meats and other foodstuffs.

He started to-day by serving notice on wheat barons that he will vigorously enforce the food control law, and declared the Government is prepared to buy the whole 1917 wheat harvest—approximately 650,000,000 bushels—if necessary, to protect both producer and consumer. He called upon all elevators, millers, distributors and bakers to restrict margins of profit.

Here is what he proposed to do, starting September 1:

License all elevators and mills over 100 barrels daily capacity.

Open Government agencies to purchase wheat at all the principal terminals, and re-sell at reasonable prices for export and to millers.

Establish a committee under President Garfield, Williams College, to determine a fair price for the 1917 wheat harvest.

Call upon elevators and millers to fix a price schedule based on patriotism, designed to stabilize the price of wheat, flour and finally bread.

COAL MINES SHUT DOWN

Output of 20,000 Tons Daily Affected By Strike.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., August 14.—Thirty-two of the forty coal mines in the Springfield district, representing a daily output of 20,000 tons, are shut down to-day as the result of strikes among drivers and motormen, and ten thousand diggers are in enforced idleness.

Indications are that not a single mine in the district would be in operation to-morrow.

The Canadian Northern Railway will operate the first excursion trains for the West, leaving Toronto Union Depot at 9 a.m. and 10 p.m. August 21st, and 10 p.m. August 30th, and running through solid to Winnipeg.

The equipment will consist of electric lighted colonist cars, lunch counter cars, and, in addition, the railway will continue their last year's innovation of keeping a special car for the accommodation of single women and families, and of placing it in the train where the occupants will be separated from the other passengers.

The territory served by the Canadian Northern Lines offers the widest choice of employment with high wages, but regardless of where you may locate, remember we give the best service to Winnipeg, where you will re-purchase to final destination, no matter on what Line it may be.

For leaflet showing special train service, with dates, number of men required at various points and other information, apply to Thos. Mark, Town Agent, or General Passenger Department, Canadian Northern Railway, Toronto. t-t-s-tf-36

Army and War Veterans Says Canada Must Do All Humanly Possible to Win the War.

WINNIPEG, Aug. 14.—"To all who say in this hour of greatest Empire peril that Canada has done enough, we answer she will only have done enough when we can do no more, and the political machine attempting to thwart this sentiment must be emphatically defeated. Army and navy veterans are deeply gratified and much encouraged by your message."

Such was the reply wired by J. Hillyard Leech, K.C., chairman of the Legislative Committee of the Army and Navy Veterans in Canada in response to a congratulatory telegram from Charles R. McCullough, chairman of the Win-the-War League, Hamilton.

OBITUARY

DOROTHY O'CONNOR.

Dorothy O'Connor, the little four-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. F. O'Connor, Ennismore, died this morning in St. Joseph's Hospital, after an illness of a few days.

The funeral will take place to-morrow afternoon at 3 o'clock to St. Martin's church and cemetery.

MRS. ALEX. GIBSON.

Death released a patient sufferer from a long and painful illness when Margaret Moffat, beloved wife of Alex. Gibson, 585 George street, passed away on Saturday.

Mrs. Gibson was born in Peterborough 55 years years ago and has resided here all her life. She was a faithful and consistent member of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church, where her influence in church work will be greatly missed.

She is survived by her husband and one daughter, Mary, residing at home, and one sister, Miss Moffatt in Toronto.

The funeral, conducted by Rev. T. H. Mitchell, formerly of this city, now of Toronto, took place this afternoon at 2.30, the pall-bearers being Messrs. W. J. Ferguson, H. Rush, McKay, G. Morrow, C. A. and F. H. Starr, Toronto. A short service was held at the house before leaving for the Little Lake Cemetery.

FORD WEART.

Ford Weart, bookkeeper for the Canadian General Electric Company, died at the family residence, No. 4 Wolesley street, yesterday, after an illness of some duration.

He was born in Madoc 26 years ago and has worked for the C. G. E. for some years both here and in Toronto. Surviving him is his wife and two small children; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. B. J. Weart and sister, Miss Margaret.

The funeral will be held on Wednesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock from his late residence to the Little Lake cemetery. The funeral services will be held at 2 o'clock and will be conducted by Rev. D. Snider.

BIRTH.

FISHER.—On Sunday, July 12, in St. Joseph's Hospital, to (Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Fisher (Miss Evelyn Foster) of a son.

SIR WM. MEREDITH TO ARBITRATE C.N.R. PURCHASE

Minister of Finance Announces Allotment of Task to Ontario's Chief Justice—Important Assets Were Overlooked

FORCED ACTION

OTTAWA, Aug. 14. — Sir Thomas White, in the Commons yesterday afternoon, moved the second reading of the Bill to acquire the capital stock of the Canadian Northern Railway Company. He devoted his introductory remarks to a reply to criticism of the measure offered on the resolution stage. He did not believe that under the arrangement proposed the Government would be called upon in the immediate future to pledge its credit for loans for the company. Neither would there be any considerable immediate liability in connection with the purchase of rolling stock. Had the Government expropriated its physical assets of the company heavy immediate liability would have been necessary on these accounts.

He referred to the finding of the Drayton-Acworth report to the effect that the shareholders of the company had no equity in the shares of the company. As a result of that finding, opposition members contended that there was no necessity for arbitrating the volue of the common stock.

The commissioners in making the estimate of the cost of reproducing the entire C. N. R. system on Professor Swayne's report placed it at $402,000,000, while the liabilities exceeded $400,000,000.

The Value of Lands Overlooked.

"I will point out to the House," said Sir Thomas, "that there are certain important omissions in the report. Pro. Swayne overlooked its lands, amounting to three million acres. He also overlooked deferred payments on land sold amounting to seven million, and cash in Land Fund account amounting to two and a half million. He thus overlooked an important body of assets. Cash on hand is, of course, a physical asset.

"Prof. Swayne advised in his report that these should be taken into consideration. He recommended that they do so. But Messrs. Drayton and Acworth inadvertently overlooked the recommendation of Prof. Swayne, and as a consequence cash to the value of $25,000,000 and working capital to the amount of twelve and a half millions were overlooked.

"It is clear, therefore, that the balance struck between assets and liabilities, which showed them to be about equal, was incorrect. However, I do not pretend to say that the value of the common stock is equivalent to the difference between assets and liabilities. Many things must be taken into account. The present and prospective earnings must be taken into account by the arbitrators.

"The financial condition of the company at present is another factor for their consideration. Such a considerable body of assets on the one hand has been overlooked and such a considerable body of liabilities on the other hand that through an inadvertant mistake the finding of the Drayton Acworth report is not entitled to be regarded as accurate. It had been considered fair to all parties that the value of the stock should be decided by a board of arbitration.

Sir Wm. Meredith, Arbitrator.

"I may say that the arbitrator we have in view and who will act, is Sir William Meredith, Chief Justice of Ontario.

"I am sure he will have the confidence of all," said Sir Thomas.

"What experience has Sir William Meredith in railway matters?" asked Mr. Devlin of Wright. 'This is an arbitration to find the value of a railway or railway stock. Has he any knowledge of that?"

"His long experience as a lawyer and judge undoubtedly fits him preeminently for the position. Evidence will, of course, be submitted," replied Sir Thomas.

"Has any provision been made for counsel?" asked Hon. Charles Murphy.

"No," replied the Minister.

"Could Sir William Meredith act as an arbitrator after the Senate bill respecting the Judges becomes law?" asked Mr. Graham. "The Senate bill prohibits judges taking emolument for any position outside their regular judicial duties.)

"I only know," replied Sir Thomas "that he has consented to do so. I do not anticipate any difficulties."

Financiers Forced Action.

Hon. George P. Graham declared that there appeared to be three parts to the legislation in the Government, a group of financiers, and Mackenzie & Mann. There was no correspondence to show that Mackenzie & Mann desired the road taken over. The impression was that the group of financiers had prevailed on the Government to take the action. The value of the bonds to the bonholders would certainly be enhanced by the Government taking over the stock. But the interests of the financiers and even of Mackenzie & Mann must be subserved in the interests of the nation.

"I propose," said Mr. Graham, "to move an amendment which has nothing to do with either an arbitration or the Exchequer Courts. It is strange that a mistake of millions should have been made by the Drayton-Acworth Commission and only discovered to-day. If such a mistake has been made, the Lord deliver us from commissions. It would seem that members must use their own judgment with regard to the finding of commissions. I am sure the Minister of Public Works will agree with me on that."

The Minister of Public Works stroked his white moustache and neither smiled nor spoke.

Mr. Graham declared that Mackenzie & Mann had believed that they could pull through without help or intervention from the Government. In a statement of assets and liabilities as of June 30 1917, he declared the company claimed a surplus of over $37,000,000. An estimate of the total requirements for the completion of work placed the cost at something over $400,000,000, with cash or securities sufficient to meet it. In other words, the company had made ample provision for the completion of work deemed necessary to be completed.

Yes, Builds You Up in 5 to 10 Days

Iron For the Blood and Phosphorus For the Nerves

Weak, anaemic, run-down, nervous persons will be glad to know that they can be restored back to their youth vigor by the discovery of this new drug, called Bonised Phosphorus with Iron.

It is spring time now and every person needs something to build them up. Now you know as well as any doctor will tell you, the curse of spring time is impure blood. It takes many people to their grave, ruins health, makes you weak, runs you down and finally you are a physical wreck.

This new drug is a combination of iron and phosphorus. The iron acts directly on the blood while the phosphorus soothes and strengthens the nerves. You start today and take two or three tablets of Bonised Phosphorus with Iron after meals and in 5 to 10 days you will be 100 per cent. stronger.

This drug does not act like other iron tonics you have taken, but instead, it does not blacken the teeth, upset the stomach or make you constipated. This new drug is dispensed by one druggist in each city. P. C. Weber dispenses it for Peterborough.

TO CONTROL SUGAR PRICES.

U. S. Food Controller Planning to Take Action for Reduction in Prices to Consumers.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 15.— Sugar will probably follow wheat in Herbert Hoover's food control. The canning and packing interests also will soon be under his fire.

Although housewives are in the midst of the canning season, the possible lowering of sugar prices by Government control will have to wait on perfection of plans for taking over the wheat crop and reducing the cost of bread. This is considered the most important step before the food administration.

Cash Quotations Are Unchanged

The Speculative Markets Are Stagnant—The Cattle Markets

There were again no changes in cash quotations yesterday. All the grain markets are marking time, pending further definite action by the Food Commission in the matter of fixing prices. So far as the local market is concerned there is little or no wheat or other grains in hand to do any business with, although there is a good cash demand, if the goods were available. The speculative markets are stagnant.

Manitoba wheat—No. 1 Northern, $2.40; No. 2, northern $2.40; nominal store, Fort William; No. 3, $2.38; No. 4, $2.31.

Manitoba oats—No. 2, 77c, track, bay ports.

American corn—Nominal, not quoted.

Ontario oats—No. 2 white, not quoted.

Ontario wheat—No. 2 winter, per car lots, $2.55 to $2.60; No. 3, winter $2.53 to $2.58, according to freight outside; new crop, $2.30, nominal.

Peas—No. 2, nominal.

Buckwheat—Nominal.

Rye—No. 2, nominal.

Manitoba flour—First patents, in jute bags, $12.90; second patents, $12.40; strong bakers $12.

Ontario flour—Winter, according to sample, $11.20; track, Toronto, prompt shipment.

Millfeed—Car lots, delivered Montreal, shorts, $45; bran, $36; feed flour, per bag, $3.25; middlings $47 to $48.

Hay—Baled, track, Toronto, car lots, No. 2, $11.50 to $12; mixed $9 to $11; straw $9.

THE CATTLE MARKET.

Union Stock Yards—Receipts, 30 cars, with 409 cattle, 101 calves, 402 hogs and 271 sheep and lambs.

The market was comparatively quiet yesterday. The run was light, and practically everything was cleaned up, including about 300 head of cattle held over from Monday's market. Prices held steady at Monday's decline on the general run of fair to good butcher cattle. Stockers and feeders stiffened a little, quite a brisk demand having sprung up for good feeders. Several loads of good short beef sold well up.

Sheep and lambs, steady at this week's decline.

Hogs made another sensational advance, reaching to a new high record level at $17.60 to $17.75, fed and watered.

DRAGGED THROUGH STREETS.

Ghent Athlete Subjected to Cruelty by German Soldiers Before Being Executed.

AMSTERDAM, Aug. 15. — Les Novelles, of Maastricht, says that a well-known athlete of Ghent named Van Rentergem, who recently was condemned to death for espionage, was dragged at the end of a chain twenty metres long through the principal streets of the city to the place of execution, being grossly mistreated by the soldiers who were guarding him. He met his fate with the utmost courage without a word of complaint.

The newspaper also reports that at Antwerp the Germans recently shot M. Frank a prominent carpet dealer.

District Draft Board Rejects First Exemption Pleas Uuder Rigid Interpretation of Law

National Necessity the Only Guide, Charles E. Hughes Announces—Marriage Not to Free Eligibles—Two Appellants With Claims on Industrial Grounds Are Passed into the Army.

INDUSTRIAL CLAIM REJECTED

NEW YORK, August 15. — The District Board of New York city, which is the Court of Appeals for passing on claims for exemption from military service, in its first decisions rigidly enforced the draft law. The Board held two men, who occupy important business positions, for the army and ruled that a Russian must join the colours.

Two broad rules have been laid down to be followed in the 25,000 or more appeal cases to be passed upon in the next few weeks. First, in cases of marriage:—Whether the wife is capable of supporting herself if her husband goes to war; and, second, whether a man's services are absolutely indispensible in his business. If they are, the question will be determined whether the business in which he is employed is necessary to the country in war.

Louis I. Cherey and Dr. S. J. Bernfeld, members of the Local Board 99, Lewis and Rivington streets, who were dismissed by order of President Wilson and then arrested on charges of irregularities in administering the draft law, were held in $5,000 bail each. Kalman Cruher also was held in $5,000 bail, accused of conspiring with Cherey and Bernfeld to defeat the draft law.

OTHER CHARGES INVESTIGATED.

Federal agents are investigating anonymous charges of wrong doing in at least two other districts. One accusation is that members of a local board have taken registrants riding in an automobile around a block or two and upon returning the drafted men were found to be disqualified. These allegations relate to an east side district and a Bronx district. Officials said the charges were vague. It was stated that no arrests were expected immediately. Every charge made, from whatsoever its source, will be investigated thoroughly.

The new board for District 99 was organized Monday and began investigation of the records in that district. Call was issued for all who were included in the first summons to return for re-examination.

The District Board's first decision was given on the appeal of Girsh Carchin, a Russian, of No. 1,449 Boston road, the Bronx, who said he wished to be exempted from serving in an American army and that if he had to go to war he wished to return to Russia and fight. George L. Ingraham, formerly a Supreme Court Justice, presenting the report stated:—

"The men who are called presumably are the men who are to serve, and it is for them to present to the board before which they appeal all their claims for exemption."

The decision of the lower board was confirmed and Sarchen must serve in an American army.

INDUSTRIAL CLAIM REJECTED.

Frederick W. Barth, of No. 1,700 Broadway, sought exemption because he said his services were required in the automobile industry. The Board held that many other firms are doing the same kind of work as Barth's company.

"There is nothing to show this man's services are such that they cannot be performed by another," the board ruled.

David G. Hirgelsell, of No. 3,212 Fulton street, Richmond Hill, appealed from the decision of Local Board 183. He argued that his glass manufacturing business would be ruined and his fourteen employees thrown out of work if he were compelled to go away. The appeal was denied on the ground that many other concerns are making the same kind of instruments Hirgelsell makes.

General misunderstanding prevails regarding the way to enter appeals, Mr. Hughes said. The District Board was unable to proceed with hundreds of cases because the appeals were not made in regular form, as prescribed by the draft law. The way to appeal, Mr. Hughes said, is for the registrant to file notice with the local board after it has made decision. Then the appeal with all the papers and affidavits must be sent by the local board to the district Board. The local boards have been careless so far in submitting necessary proofs and affidavits.

United States Will Give "Material Support" to Russia

Having Received From Mr. Root Assurances of New Government's Stability, President Wilson Favours Extending Credit in Large Amount.

A GOOD BIG LOAN

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 15. — Washington will respond generously to the appeal of Mr. Kerensky for 'material support" for the new Republic of Russia, which the Russian premiere so earnestly makes in a cable despatch from Petrograd.

It is stated on high authority that the United States government has been awaiting only a favourable report from the Root commission before extending to the new Republic the full limit of its assistance.

Mr. Root and the other members of the commission have returned to President Wilson that Russian democracy has come to stay, if it can receive the material support of the other democracies of the world and especially of the United States. This is the sober judgment of Mr. Root, recognized the world over as one of the most able statesmen of modern times after careful study of the situation in Russia itself.

Great Loan the Next Move.

Now that the Root commission has made its report, the next move will be the granting of a really great loan to the new Republic, in order that it may receive as promptly as possible from the United States all sorts of much needed supplies, particularly railroad materials.

Thus far only $175,000,000 has been advanced to the Russian government by the United States, and this has been used to meet maturing obligations incurred by the old government of the Tzar in this country, and not for new contracts. It is known that Russia desires a credit of one billion dollars in this country. That is what Mr. Kerensky means by "material support," and it can be safely predicted that Russia will get all or most of this real guaranty of the friendship of the United States.

The Wilson administration has come to a thorough understanding since the return of the Root mission, that the salvation of the Russian democracy depends not upon words of sympathy and moral support from the other democracies of the world, but upon actual assistance, which means money. Naturally this government wanted to know whether it would be aiding the old government of the Tzar or the new government by advancing this money. This Mr. Root was asked to find out. His report insures the loan in the near future; for he has informed President Wilson that upon the United States rests a great part of the responsibility for the failure or success of the new republic.

"MOUNTAIN MADNESS"

By Anna Alice Chapin

Martin Hale had been born in the mountains of a long race of mountain people. Something of the hills' strength and quiet, some of their dignity and aloofness, had gone to his making. Like all mountain-bred folk he had strange eyes; they seemed focused on horizons, infinitely wider than those of people of the valleys: they looked always a trifle absent and abstracted, as though seeing visions and dreaming dreams.

He had lived all his life among the hills where he was born. His father was a type by no means uncommon in the Virginias: a man of good and sound stock, but a stock run wild. With no education himself old Hale had seen no reason why his son should have any. Martin's secret mastery of reading and writing, had when discovered by his father, been the cause of their first stormy quarrel. First, but far from last. The two had wrangled intermittently for the length of the eldest man's life, and the bitterness of his early youth had inevitably increased Martin's innate reserve. He had gone on with his reading, and had contrived to give himself a measure of education, but although his father had left him with enough money, he had never availed himself of the possibility of going away to see the world of men. As a boy he had dreamed of faring forth to dare and do, but as a man he shrank from it. He found himself with each year growing more a part of his native ranges, and now indeed it seemed to him that he could scarcely breathe any air but that of Liberty Ridge.

But his love for the refined and cultivated things of life and civilization remained. It was the same instinct which had made him turn to books and fight for them. Mountaineer though he was, he would always be essentially a man to whom the delicate, the rare, the fine, the balanced and restrained, would speak in a special music of their own.

This impromptu tea-party was an epoch-making affair for Hale. He was too shy to look at Enid very often but he was acutely conscious of her all the time. And he liked Jack Radnor at once.

An instant freemasonry sprang up between the two young men. Each recognized in the other something big and vital and male, something which they could mutually respect. Jack Radnor in spite of his superficial conventionality, was very democratic at heart. There was not a trace of snobbishness in him, and the young mountaineer had enough acumen to sense the fact and to accept the Valley man as an equal and as a possible friend.

It was "Radnor" and "Hale" within twenty minutes and immediately they plunged deep in man's talk of riding and shooting and fishing, while Enid made friends with the Toll-Keeper and his daughter.

The old man was easy enough to get on with but the dark lovely girl was as shy as some sensitive wild creature of her own mountains, and disposed, it seemed, to regard Miss Forsythe, if not precisely as an enemy at least as an intruder.

Now, though Jack Radnor liked old Mason and young Hale, and admired Polly who had never looked more beautiful than she did now as she moved with her quiet lynx-like step about the room—he still felt annoyed with Enid. She had pointedly ignored his existence since they had met the mountain couple and though in many ways Radnor was a simple soul, he did not like it. Also once in a while he really preferred to have his own way. So did Enid.

It is odd that temperamental persons can almost never understand each other. He who is addicted to moods and impulses is as a rule the last to comprehend the moods and the impulses of others. So, when Enid, acting on an impetuous and entirely insincere instinct, said, "How lovely! Of course, I shall stay for tea!" Jack was furious.

"Don't you think that your mother will be anxious?" he remarked as formally and coolly as he could—for he deeply desired to shake her.

Enid adored her mother and if Jack had not admonished her in that superior and chilly way, she would doubtless have expressed contrition, anxiety and a wish to relieve the maternal mind as swiftly as possible. As it was, she hastily killed a pang which was beginning to rend her conscience, and turned a perverse back upon her fiance.

"I am sure that mother will know that I am quite able to take care of myself!" she said, even more icily than he had spoken.

It was impossible to mistake the inference. So far as taking care of her went, Jack Radnor was as completely dismissed, not to say eliminated, as though she had rubbed him off the slate.

He went white with anger this time and said frigidly:

"In that case and since you don't need me, I shall explore the neighborhood. Hale will have a cigarette with me outside."

He could not have stayed in the same room with her another moment without becoming violent.

The young man went out with him and both girls followed them with their eyes—with what a conflict and complexity of thoughts and emotions no mere writer could record.

The cigarettes lighted, Jack remarked casually:

"By the bye, just whereabouts is —Gray Crag?"

CHAPTER V.
Girls.

To mount a hill is to lift with you something lighter and brighter than yourself or than any meaner burden. You lift the world, you raise the horizon, you give a signal for the distance to stand up. . . . The distances unfold unlooked for wings. . . .

—Alice Meynell.

A bit later Martin Hale came back into the room of the Toll-gate House, with the shadow of a grin upon his handsome face. The golden-haired lady had asked him to go to Gray Crag for the superlatively lovely mountain laurel, but it was the other fellow who had hazarded that enterprise for her after all. And who was he to stop Jack Radnor from risking his neck for a whim of his sweetheart's if he wanted to? They were both men, and they played a man's game.

"Where is Mr. Radnor?" asked Enid Forsythe, before she had time to think. Then she flushed and bit her lips.

"Oh, round somewhere," said Hale, with another slight grin.

Polly had one of her quiet, almost uncanny inspirations.

"I reckon he's gone to Gray Crag for that laurel," she drawled.

Enid stared from one to the other of them. Martin Hale nodded slowly.

"Gray Crag," she repeated. "Where — But of course, I remember— But you said it was awfully hard to climb!"

"Nastiest bit hereabouts," agreed old Mason, cheerfully.

Enid half rose to her feet.

"But—but it must be dangerous!" she exclaimed.

"Sure!" nodded Martin Hale. "Leastways, for one that's not used to it."

Enid controlled herself, but she found to her horror that her lips were quivering.

"He—he'll never be able to do it!" she said. "Of course, he'll give it up, and turn back, when he finds——"

"Not he!" said Martin Hale. "He'll do it all right."

He liked Jack Radnor.

"He's all right?" said Mason to Hale, with marked emphasis.

"Sure! But there'll be trouble tonight, take it from me."

"I'm afraid so!" said the Toll Keeper. Then, as though dismissing something, he turned to Enid.

"Don't you worry, missy," he said.

"I'm not worying!" she said sharply, and crimsoned resentfully.

Then dimly conscious that her very denial had in a sense convicted her, she flushed more deeply than before, and, turning to her young hostess, said, "Won't you let me brush my hair, please? It must be shockingly messy!"

Polly led the way to her own room without a word, but a sort of wonder was in Martin Hale's eyes. Did this slim little gold-haired goddess really think that she needed a brush —or anything else for that matter— to make her more dainty, more adorable than she was. Never had Hale seen such fineness and delicacy; such trimness and perfection of finish. If only Polly would keep her hair tidy, like that, and take pains with her clothes, and—his vague discontent trailed off uncertainly. Even he realized that Polly could never be a second Enid. They were types as different as the poles. Hale with his curious poet's soul yearned at present toward the refinements of life rather than the elementals. To him, though he hesitated at admitting as much to himself, Polly seemed overblown; not quite coarse (she had too much natural sweetness and dignity for that) but certainly too primitive. Enid to this man of the mountains stood for those fragile, idealistic things that one may dream of without daring to think of touching.

Masks! Is there anyone who does not wear them, and wear them to their own undoing at that. Polly, had he only known it, was far closer to the girl of his ideals—the spiritual, aloof thing that he had made a mental picture of,—than Enid. Enid was as much more of a savage primitive woman, for all her well-cut clothes, and her dainty ways, as Radnor was more of a savage, primitive man than this tanned young mountaineer. Right at their hand, you perceive, just what each wanted to be had for the asking—and none of the four knew it!

Polly Mason's bedroom was shabby, but it showed a distinct effort toward beauty. Clearly this girl, who had admitted during their talk that she only visited the Valley for semi-annual shopping expeditions, had an artist's soul in her, evinced in a dozen pretty tricks of arrangement, and light, and decoration.

All around the room was a dado or frieze of something so new and exquisite that Enid exclaimed involuntarily at sight of it. Subconsciously, she had been hunting for something of Polly's (beside the girl herself) that she could admire wholeheartedly. Well, she had found it!

A foot or so below the ceiling ran the frieze, and it was made all of leaves — beautiful silhouettes of leaves on a silvery background, truly lovely, indescribably decorative. Enid's inexperienced eyes picked out maples, rose-red, brownish-green oak-leaves, and many others, all in their natural and inimitable colours.

"And that?" she questioned sofely, pointing with her riding crop to a delicate five-leaved outline. "Woodbine, isn't it?"

"We all call it Virginia Creeper," replied Polly Mason. "You see, two of the leaves are red; I got it in the fall."

Enid looked again more closely.

"Why, they're all real!" she exclaimed in wonder.

Polly laughed.

"'Course they're real," she said. "You don't suppose we can afford to buy picture-things, Dad and I, do you?"

She explained the process: that of picking the most perfect leaf specimens possible, pressing them carefully, and mounting them on squares of birch bark.

"Mart cuts the bark," she said, "and sees that it's even. Then we glaze it —cover it with varnish, and—and—it looks right pretty, don't you think?"

"I think it's too lovely for words!" Enid replied with sincerity. "But how do you keep the proportion—the

She sought for words that would be comprehensible for the other. But Polly understood her easily enough, and found words for her, too.

"You mean—how do I know what leaves to put next each other?" she suggested, with simplicity. "Which won't spoil the others?"

Enid nodded.

"It—it's so right!" she said. "Your taste must be very perfect and true!"

"I've always liked that sort of thing," said the mountain girl indifferently. "Here's a brush and comb, if you-all want to fix your hair."

Enid began to pull out hairpins, and her vividly golden locks fell in shining waves about her shoulders. Busied with their arrangement, she did not notice the look in Polly's eyes as she stared at the bright ripples. Then a question, very slowly drawled, fell on her ears:

"Do you dye it often?"

She turned and stared, with the hair-brush in her hand.

"Heavens, no!" she gasped. "I don't dye it at all. Why on earth should you think that " in Summer means clogged liver and sluggish brain; too little food means flabby muscles and starved nerves. The man on the job must keep his brain clear and his muscles responsive. The way to do this is to eat Shredded Wheat Biscuit, the food that contains everything in the whole wheat grain prepared in a digestible form, including the outer bran coat which is so useful in keeping the alimentary canal clean and healthy. Two or three of these crisp, little brown loaves of whole wheat with milk make a nourishing, strengthening meal. Ready-cooked and ready-to-serve.

Too Much Food

We Can Help You Stimulate Business

A little stimulation in Midsummer may put you back in the running again, and even yet, if you concentrate your efforts, use liberally the means that have made others prosper in your line of business you can succeed as they did.

Some Merchants Say:—

"As Soon as Business Picks Up I'll Advertise"

This is not consistent. The farmer does not wait until harvest time to sow his seed—and, remember this, that if you ever reach the point in business where you believe you can get along without advertising, somebody else will own your business. ¶ It isn't the age of a house that counts most. It's the efficient, up-to-date, daily publicity that brings its goods before the buyers that spells SUCCESS.

If it's ADVERTISING—let us talk it over with you. Our service is at your disposal at any time.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

LEGALLY DEAD

By JOHN Y. LARNED

I once asked my friend Jenkins, a crimi lawyer, if there were not peculiar secrets locked up in the breast of a man of his profession, whereupon he told me the following story:

"If I hadn't been a criminal lawyer I think I should have been a detective. Criminals never interested me especially, and I never had much sympathy with them. But here and there comes up a person about whom circumstances reveal what is hard to break through. You have heard the fable of the lion in the net released by the gnawing of a mouse. Well, in such cases it is fascinating to be the mouse.

"Not that I'm going to tell you a story about getting off a person accused of crime by one of those ingenious methods we read of in detective stories. I'm going to give you a case where a man whom I believed to be guilty was condemned for murder, and I discovered that he was innocent too shortly before his death day to warrant my reopening the case in a legal way.

"A murder was committed. The murderer not only fled, but left articles by which he was known. He made good his flight and was not heard from in three years; then he or a man who was his double deliberately walked into the town where the murder had been committed. Being met on the street by one of those who had been long looking for him, he was greeted with the words:

"'For heaven's sake, Collins, what did you come back here for?'

"'Collins! That's not my name!'

"No reply was made to this. A pair of handcuffs was slipped on the stranger's wrists, and he was lodged in jail.

"I was the man who drew up the case against Nathan Collins for the state.

"The accused was an Englishman and claimed that his name was Langdon. He admitted that he had been wild and had been disowned by his family. But when his attorney asked him to call upon his family for identification he said that he would take his chances of proving it without their assistance, adding that he had been away from them so long that he doubted if they would all swear that he was their kinsman.

"I had no difficulty in securing his conviction, and he was as much surprised at it as I would have been had he been acquitted. I was somewhat staggered at his first remark after his conviction. It was:

"'Well, here's a pretty kettle of fish!'

"That didn't sound like a guilty man. It seemed to me rather the remark of one who had got into a bad scrape and had begun to realize his position.

"It seems singular to me looking back at the case, that no further effort was made to prove that he was what he claimed to be. He said that it would be useless to apply to his family, for they would expect anything of him, even murder. Another reason was that he had a cousin who would be heir to his father's estate at his father's death were it not for the black sheep of the family. At any rate nothing was done to save him. The truth is no one was interested in him, and he seemed to have been stunned by his position.

"The night before the morning appointed for the execution Jim Wilkins, the condemned man's attorney, came to me with a letter postmarked Manchester, England, and addressed to Sir Charles Langdon. It had been sent to the British consul general. How he came to forward it we did not know. Jim and I looked at each other with eyes wide open.

"'I wonder if a mistake has been made!' said Jim nervously.

"'It's possible,' I replied.

"Well, we took the letter to Langdon, who as soon as he looked at it said: 'Dad's gone and Ralph's gone, and that rascal George must be knocked out or that letter would never have got to me.'

"He opened the letter, read it and showed it to us. It was an announcement that by the death of his father and brother he had succeeded to the title and estate.

"Here was proof of a man's identity who was to be executed within a few hours. Jim and I called up the governor by 'phone, but couldn't get him. What was to be done? The sheriff was on hand, and we called him in for consultation. Rather than execute an innocent man, he agreed that if we would stop the mouths of the necessary witnesses to the execution with money he would execute a dummy and turn the live body of the prisoner over to us. Sir Charles said he was rich. So Jim and I advanced the funds. There were only five persons to grease, and they all knew the reason why they were greased.

"Sir Charles Langdon went to England, legally dead in America, and I believe became a steady country gentleman and much respected."

After the finishing of the story I asked my friend, the lawyer, if that experience did not make him more cautious in prosecuting criminals. His reply was that a state attorney is employed to convict and a prisoner's counsel is employed to acquit. The trial is a legal battle as between two generals, who are not expected to inquire into the justice of the cause they serve. The victory is usually with the heavy artillery, or the preponderating evidence, and is determined by the jury. The lawyers have nothing to do but fight.

Her Ability.

"Are you able to keep your servants any length of time?"

"Let me see. I've had my husband six years."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

An Ancient Infernal Machine.

In the Diary of Samuel Pepys, under date of March 14, 1662, he says: "Home to dinner. In the afternoon came the German Dr. Knuffler, to discourse with us about his engine to blow up ships. We doubted not the matter of fact, it being tried in Cromwell's time, but the safety of carrying them in ships; but he do tell us that when he comes to tell the king his secret, for none but the kings, successively, and their heirs must know it, it will appear to be of no danger at all. We concluded nothing, but shall discourse with the Duke of York tomorrow about it."

Ananias.

The name Ananias is in disrepute because of the liar of that name mentioned in the fifth chapter of the Acts of the Apostles. Two others of the name are mentioned in the Scriptures. One of these was a high priest in A. D. 48 who was afterward assassinated; the other was a Jewish disciple at Damascus. Tradition makes him to have been bishop of Damascus and to have died by martyrdom.

Marriage in Argentina.

In the Argentine republic if a man engaged to marry hesitates beyond a reasonable time in leading his fiancee to the altar he is heavily fined, and if a resident of the republic should fail to marry he is taxed until he reaches the age of eighty.

The Giraffe's Neck.

"Why does the giraffe have such a long neck?" asks the teacher.

"Because its head is so far away from its body," hopefully answers the boy.

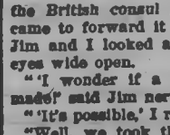
HUSBAND OBJECTS TO OPERATION

Wife Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Des Moines, Iowa.—"Four years ago I was very sick and my life was nearly spent. The doctors stated that I would never get well without an operation and that without it I would not live one year. My husband objected to any operation and got me some of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I took it and commenced to get better and am now well, am stout and able to do my own housework. I can recommend the Vegetable Compound to any woman who is sick and run down as a wonderful strength and health restorer. My husband says I would have been in my grave ere this if it had not been for your Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. BLANCHE JEFFERSON, 703 Lyon St., Des Moines, Iowa.



Before submitting to a surgical operation it is wise to try to build up the female system and cure its derangements with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound; it has saved many women from surgical operations.

Moss Roses.

The original moss rose was a "sport" or child of the Provence. It seems to me there is nothing lovelier in the whole flower kingdom than a spray of moss rose buds, yet how seldom do we see them nowadays! It is difficult to improve upon the old pink moss for beauty, but just as fine are the other pink sorts, Salet, crested moss, Zenobia and Comtesse de Murinais. And the white sorts, with shapely buds gleaming from their bright green garment, seem loveliest of all. These are white bath, Blanche Moreau and perpetual moss, which blooms in bewitching clusters and is well mossed. There are also crimson sorts, but these are not so lovely. The best of these is crimson globe.

Moss roses have one drawback, their liability to mildew, but with generous treatment and a very little trouble they may be protected from this affliction. They should be planted absolutely free from shade and never against a wall, that all the winds of heaven may sweep around them, and let their roots be set in deep, well drained, rich soil.

Irrigation.

In many cases the yield of potatoes per acre has been doubled by irrigation. In all cases the yield has been very materially greater as a result of irrigation, even in so called humid districts. America leads the world in agriculture, and in irrigation by pumping its leadership is unquestioned even by those who insist that America is behind Europe in "intensive farming." By the sophistical methods of comparing our average yield of grain per acre with that in Europe it has been frequently attempted to prove that America has much to learn in agriculture from Europe. But the fact is that not the yield per acre, but the cost per bushel, should be the final criterion of efficiency in grain production. Judged by that criterion, America has led every nation on earth ever since McCormick developed his first harvester.—Engineering and Contracting.

World's Railway Mileage.

The mileage of American railroads aggregates 270,000 and forms 40 per cent of the railways of the entire world. Russia comes next, with 50,000 miles. The other countries and their respective mileages, in order, are: Germany, 40,000; India, 35,000; France, 32,000; Canada, 30,000; Austria-Hungary, 29,000; Great Britain, 23,000; Argentina, 21,000; Australia, 20,000; Mexico, 16,000; Brazil, 16,000; Italy, 11,000; British South Africa, 11,000; Spain, 10,000; Sweden, 9,000; Japan (including Korea), 7,600; China, 6,000; Belgium, 6,000; Chile, 4,000.

Of the world's railways outside the United States slightly more than one-half are government owned or controlled. Of the telegraphs outside this country approximately two-thirds are government owned and operated.

Compass of the Submarines.

A submarine uses the common magnetic compass to some extent. It is not very reliable, because it cannot be placed where it will be uninfluenced by the metal in the hull and machinery. Submarines rely chiefly on the gyroscope compass. This instrument, invented only a few years ago, points true north. It is uninfluenced by magnetic conditions. The presence of iron or steel does not disturb it. Its principle is: A wheel suspended so that it is free to turn in any direction tends to spin in the same direction in which the earth turns. Its axis therefore will take a north and south direction.

D'Orsay and His Tailor.

"D'Orsay, the Complete Dandy," as Teignmouth Shore calls him in his biography, was fully aware of the value of his patronage to the tailors. When clothes arrived for him, in the most mysterious manner banknotes had found their way into the pockets. Once when this accident had not happened D'Orsay bade his valet return the garments with the message that "the lining of the pockets had been forgotten."

Leave Well Alone.

Captain—"Have you changed the guard yet?"

The Newchum Junior—"No, sir; the old guard was doing the job so well, sir, I thought I'd let 'em stay on, sir."

Not Yet, But Soon.

"Waiter, bring me forty dollars' worth of ham and eggs."

"We don't serve half-portions."

Hair Often Ruined By Careless Washing

If you want to keep your hair looking its best, be careful what you wash it with. Don't use prepared shampoos or anything else, that contains too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and ruins it.

The best thing for steady use is just ordinary mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and greaseless), and is better than anything else you can use.

One or two teaspoonfuls will cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves the scalp soft, and the hair fine and silky, bright, lustrous, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at any pharmacy, it's very cheap, and a few ounces will supply every member of the family for months.

IT'S COMING

EXAMINER AND MERCHANTS

Great DOLLAR DAY
MONEY SAVING EVENT
Will soon be here

GRATIFIED by the enthusiasm of the people over the previous Dollar Days in Peterboro, and urged by the people from outside who were unable to attend the last one owing to bad roads, the Examiner is again co-operating with the Merchants in featuring a Mid-summer Dollar Day.

WEDNESDAY, AUG. 22

The date selected should be the most suitable of all the summer season, for a record crowd to attend from outside points. There's everything to come for, and only regrets if you don't. There's a company of hustling merchants preparing a feast unequalled in the history of the city. In any line of goods you want, you will find your Dollar has a buying power you would have thought impossible. As Dollar Day selling is just for one day, the merchants in order to add zest to the excitement, make their offerings look reckless, but it is because they have entered into the spirit of the thing, and they are bound to do their part at considerable loss.

Estimate the NUMBER of these Blanks that will be filled in and Dropped into the Ballot Box at the Examiner Office by 7 p. m. on DOLLAR DAY.

As a guide in estimating the probable number of blanks that will be used, the three previous Dollar Day results may be studied. On the first one, March 12, 1914, with good weather and roads, there were 16,000 blanks dropped into the box at the Examiner Office. On the next Dollar Day, in 1915, with bad weather and impassable roads, the result showed only 10,807 estimate blanks put in the box. On the last summer Dollar Day, held in August, 1916, when holiday season affected the crowd, there were 7,054 blanks dropped in the box. With these figures as a guide an intelligent estimate can be made if the weather and season are taken into consideration.

The Dollar Day crowd is the happiest gathering that meets in Peterboro in the year.

You can recognize all the stores where Dollar Specials are being given by the Red Lettered Pennants in the windows.

RAILWAY RATES Parties of Ten coming from any one point to Peterboro on Wednesday, August 22nd, Dollar Day, can secure a rate of FARE and ONE-THIRD by making application to the Local Agent.

An Ill-fated Band.

The following is a translation of the text of the proclamation that was posted by the German authorities in Belgium, announcing the execution of the English nurse, Miss Edith Cavell. It is published in The World's Work, with several other reproductions of German posters that reveal their methods in Belgium:

"The Tribunal of the Imperial German Council of War sitting in Brussels has pronounced the following sentences:

"Condemned to death for conspiring together to commit treason:

Edith Cavell, teacher, of Brussels.

Phillippe Bancq, architect, of Brussels.

Jeanne de Belleville, of Montignies.

Louise Thuilies, professor, at Lille.

Louis Severin, chemist, of Brussels.

Albert Libies, lawyer, of Mons.

"For the same offense the following have been condemned to fifteen years' hard labor.

Herman Capiau, engineer, of Wasmes.

Ada Bodart, of Brussels.

Georges Derveau, chemist, of Pataruges.

Mary de Croy, of Belligules.

"At the same sitting, the War Council condemned seventeen others charged with treason against the imperial armies to sentences of penal servitude and imprisonment varying from two to eight years.

"The sentences passed on Bancq and Edith Cavell have already been fully executed.

"The Governor-General of Brussels brings these facts to the knowledge of the public that they may serve as a warning.

"As an echo! What do you mean by that?"

"She never fails to return one's call."

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Keep the Sink Clean.

Grease in the sink is a very prolific cause of disease. It cannot but accumulate from dishes and wiping, and when small bits of vegetable matter adhere to it a shelter is given to mischievous bacteria. Besides, grease will clog the drain and become a fixture and an inconvenience. The surest and simplest cleansing agent is a strong solution of washing soda and boiling water. The sink should first be scrubbed with seapsuds and the hot solution then dashed down the drain. This cleaning should be done at least once a week.

Trouble Ends After Twelve Long Years

Is Stronger and Healthier Since Taking Tanlac Than in Years

"I tell you, for three weeks before I started on Tanlac, I was so played out, I couldn't hit a lick of work, and you may believe me or not, but before I finished my first bottle I was back on the job feeling like a new man," said W. E. Fairbrass, in an interview a few days ago. Mr. Fairbrass, or "Bill" as he is familiarly known to his co-workers at the shops of McKenzie and Mann, where he is employed.

"My stomach had been troubling me for twelve years," he continued, "my appetite went back on me and I had gotten to where I could hardly eat a thing. What little I did eat disagreed with me and I was miserable nearly all the time with indigestion. I most always had a sickening, nauseated feeling right after my meals and many a time I couldn't retain anything I had eaten. I had a painful gnawing sensation in the pit of my stomach and felt like my food had lodged there and formed a hard lump. Sometimes the gas would bloat me up until I felt like I would burst, and in spite of all I could do I kept getting worse. Many a time I have come home from my work so exhausted and sick that I couldn't eat a bite of supper. I was so nervous and restless I couldn't get any sound sleep and would get up in the mornings worn completely out. I never felt like doing anything, in fact, I felt half dead all the time and what little strength I had was getting away from me rapidly.

"Finally I just had to surrender to my troubles and the day I took my first dose of Tanlac I had been away from my work for three solid weeks. All the boys down at the shop had been begging me to try Tanlac so I got my wife to go down to the drug store and buy me a bottle, and I have never gotten more for my money in my life. I believe the very first dose made me feel better and before I finished my first bottle I started back to work, carrying a little bottle of Tanlac in my dinner pail every day so I wouldn't miss a dose. I kept on working and improving rapidly and since taking my third bottle I'm thankful to say I don't feel a touch of either stomach trouble or indigestion. I never had a better appetite and never got more enjoyment out of eating than I do now. I'm simply feeling a thousand times stronger and better and my wife says she hasn't seen me looking so well in years. I have taken a good many different kinds of medicine in my life but Tanlac got them all beat and I can certainly recommend it to everybody.

New York Stock Exchange.

The record high price for a seat on the New York Stock Exchange was $95,000 in 1905 and again in 1909. In 1910 the highest price paid was $75,000 the lowest $60,000. In 1915 the highest price was $74,000 and the lowest $38,000. In 1914 the highest price was $55,000; in 1913, $53,000; in 1912, $74,000; in 1911, $73,000; in 1910, $94,000, and the same price in 1909. The lowest price in the last twenty-five years was $14,000, paid in 1898.

Soil of the Farm.

Cato recommended that the soil of a farm be good and fertile; also that near it there be plenty of laborers and that it be not far from a large town; moreover, that it have sufficient means of transporting its produce either by water or land. This advice, although 2,000 years old, still holds good.

Fish and Brain.

The saying that fish is the best brain food comes of an old long tongue wind-bag years ago saying, "Thought is impossible without phosphorus." So a Swiss chemist, knowing that fish contained phosphorus, put two and two together and brought forth a saying that will never die.

JAPANESE WOMEN PROGRESS.

Have Invaded Many Occupations Formerly Exclusive to Men.

Women of Japan do not spend all their time and talents arranging flowers and embroidering beautiful kimonos, however much those of us who have never visited "The Flowery Kingdom" may think of those two occupations as employing the greater part of their days. The Japanese woman of these present times is marching straight ahead, keeping step as far as possible with her sisters of western lands. She, too, is finding her way into fields which have hitherto been supposed to be open to men only. A Japanese paper interested in the question recently estimated that the women of the country are engaged in no less than 64 occupations, which not so long ago were considered as belonging exclusively to men.

For example, Japanese women have gone into railroad work. They are occupying posts as cashiers, bookkeepers, and ticket sellers. The Imperial Railway Bureau is credited with employing some 4,000 of them in such positions. The Imperial Arsenal, too, employs a number of women, but there the work is extremely hard. The banks are finding their services valuable, although they have not yet reached the point of paying them a good wage. Still they furnish their women employes with work ing clothes and lunches, in addition to their salaries. Two such institutions, the Bank of Japan and the Hypothec Bank employ approximately 125 each. These women also share in the semiannual bonuses which are common features of the industrial and mercantile life of the country. Many women are employed in the telephone companies. Many more earn good wages by typewriting. In fact, the typists are said to have about the best positions of all. The salaries paid to actresses do not compare favorably with those to be had by feminine members of the profession in western countries.

Women have found their way into professional fields as well; they have become journalists, novelists, musicians, artists, and teachers. Also they have become professors of the art of flower arrangement and ceremonies peculiar to their land. The school teachers are especially honored. In fact, they have to fill out their not munificent salaries with the respect and social recognition which is lavished upon them.

The leader in the education of women in Japan is Miss Umeko Tsuda, a graduate of Bryn Mawr College, who was one of the first five girls sent by the Government of her country to the United States to study. She is now principal of what is considered to be the best school for girls in all Japan. The courses of study there she models after the curriculum of her American alma mater, with both required courses and electives. Six hours a week are devoted to the study of English subjects, three hours to the study of the English language, the other three to English literature.

Miss Tsuda founded her school some 16 years ago and, during that time, 224 pupils have been graduated from it. So high has been the standing maintained, that the Department of Education of the Empire grants them licenses to teach in its schools, without the formality of examinations. No other school is thus honored, so it is said. Over 80 of the graduates of this institution are now occupying posts as teachers in high schools and colleges of the land.

One Japanese woman is so interested in affairs of state that she sometimes takes a seat in the gallery when the Diet is in session and practically always, when her husband, who is the Prime Minister of the nation, speaks. Not many of her countrywomen have yet adopted that custom, however.

A South American Doll.

A prettily quaint description of a South-American girl and her doll is given in a book, "The Purple Land," by W. H. Hudson. It was during his wanderings near Monte Video that he came across a tiny native, and he said to her—

"'And what do you do all day long—talk and play?'

"'I talk to my doll; I take it on the pony when I go with the sheep.

"'Is your doll very pretty, Anita?

"No answer.

"'Will you let me see your doll, Anita? I know I shall like your doll because I like you!'

"She gave me an anxious look. Evidently doll was a very precious being and had not met with proper appreciation. After a little nervous fidgeting she left me and crept out of the room; then presently she came back, apparently trying to screen something from the vulgar gaze in her scanty little dress. It was her wonderful doll—the dear companion of her rambles and rides. With fear and trembling she allowed me to take it into my hands. It was, or consisted of, the fore-foot of a sheep cut off at the knee; on the top of the knee part a little wooden ball wrapped in a white rag represented the head, and it was dressed in a piece of red flannel — a satyr-like doll with one hairy leg and a cloven foot. I praised its pleasing countenance, its pretty gown and dainty boots, and all I said sounded very precious to Anita, filling her with emotions of the liveliest pleasure."

Long Lived Icelanders.

It would be interesting to know if any part of the world beats Iceland in the average length of life of its inhabitants. On an average the people of that island live to the age of 61.8 years, which is very nearly double the mean duration of human life as it was computed a generation ago.

Safety First For Investors.

A conservative policy would prompt all buyers of securities to invest at least a portion of their capital in sound bonds. Many investors have a preference exclusively for stocks because the latter may render a higher yield or may fluctuate more widely, thus offering larger chances for speculative profit. Dividend paying shares of the seasoned sort are not to be belittled, and they will perhaps always form the major portion of the average investor's purchases. There is reasonable safety in them. But firmer "cornerstones of fortune" are found in the better class bonds. These are not necessarily gilt edged, but they are well secured. In times of prosperity the issuing corporations have no difficulty in meeting interest charges. In times of depression dividends on stocks may be suspended, but the enterprise must pay interest on its bonds or submit to foreclosure. And in such event the bondholder rarely suffers loss. Their high degree of stability and safety commends good bonds as an indispensable part of any well established estate.

Save Your Eyesight.

"A great many men who are well enough informed on other topics do not know the first principles of how to conserve their eyesight," Dr. Eugene L. Fisk is quoted in World's Work. "They may be conscious of eye strain and yet unconsciously go right on doing many things to increase that strain, things such as these—reading a newspaper on a jiggly street car, working with a light directly behind them or directly in their faces, reading or working in too bright a glare or in a dim or flickering illumination. They do not realize that they might well limit their allowance of moving pictures. They do not know the harm in too brilliant a desk light. They buy worthless patent nostrums for the eye and have a positive dread about adopting glasses. The price they pay for all this is often extremely dear. It ranges from constant physical discomfort to loss of sight."

Lungs of the Whale.

Concerning the breathing apparatus of the whale an eminent naturalist says: "The windpipe does not communicate with the mouth. A hole is, as it were, bored right through the back of the head. Engineers would do well to copy the action of the valve of the whale's blow hole. A more perfect piece of structure it is impossible to imagine. Day and night, asleep or awake, the whale works his breathing apparatus in such a manner that not a drop of water ever gets down into the lungs. Again, the whale must of necessity stay a much longer period under water than seals. This alone might possibly drown him, inasmuch as the lungs cannot have access to fresh air. We find that this difficulty has been anticipated and obviated by a peculiar reservoir in the venous system, which reservoir is situated at the back of the lungs."

Germs in a Sneeze.

Dr. Edward Martin of Philadelphia in a recent lecture declared that in a single cough or sneeze an influenza victim released 20,000,000 disease germs into the atmosphere of an ordinary room. Of these germs a well person might inhale 20,000 in a single breath.

Feminine Supremacy.

Dr. Elizabeth Baer of Philadelphia says the era of the supremacy of woman in business and affairs is approaching. She argues that even now superior ability when exhibited by a woman in any department is promptly recognized and rewarded.

Responsibility.

What an empty thing life would be without responsibility! The shut in who is in life without the responsibilities of life provides responsibilities for others. His burden becomes lighter when he is made to feel that to another it is an incentive.

Usually the Case.

The husband may be boss of his own house, but his wife usually conceals the fact from his knowledge until he forgets about it.

A Pessimist.

A pessimist is a person who tells you that what appears to be a silver lining in your cloud is only a low grade of tin foil.

A Poor Recommendation.

"He means well," she said.

"Say no more," he replied. "I know now exactly what sort of fool he is."

Lindsay Engineer Was Rewarded

UNSOLICITED REWARD.

Engineer "Bob." Wallace, of Lindsay, was a very much surprised man the other day when a farmer living near Cresswell approached him and handed over a crisp $10 bill. It appears that a few mornings earlier as Engineer Wallace was rounding a curve near Manilla station, on his way to Whitby, he noticed a number of horses on the track, and although the rails were wet and slippery he managed to bring the train to a halt without doing bodily damage to any of the animals. In giving the popular engineer the ten spot the farmer stated that he had saved his several hundred dollars as the horses were all registered and of the best stock. They had managed to break out of a field and wandered on to the track.

HOME DEFENCE

The safeguarding of your home and all it means to you is not a matter of armies and ships alone. The comfort and happiness of your family are exposed to the attacks of enemies much nearer to them than the marauding Huns of Central Europe.

What will become of your home and your wife and your children, if you be suddenly stricken down as thousands of others have been?

Will there be any bulwark of defence to keep the home and the family from destruction?

You can most easily provide such a line of defence by means of a life assurance policy. Home Defence is its purpose and it fulfils that purpose as nothing else can.

British Launch Successful Attack on Lens

The Allies Are Turning Over Latest Peace Feelers

The British-Canadian Troops Captured First Line German Trenches

Allies Are Closing in Tighter on the Famous Coal City--Advance is Still Progressing--Strong German Attacks Repulsed--French Advance in Belgium.

OFFICIAL REPORTS

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, August 15.—Capturing the first line German trenches on the outskirts of Lens British and Canadian troops were again closing in tighter on the famous coal city to-day. An assault which extended from northwestern outskirts of the town to Bois Hugo northeast o fLoos, was launched early this morning. The Canadians swept into the first line trenches of the enemy and were still progressing satisfactorily, when Field Marshal Haig filed his report. At the same time British and French forces resumed their attack on German lines in Flanders. British troops made gains northwest of Bixschoote, while the French made considerable advance west of Dixmude east of Cite Stemilies. A strong German counter-attack was thrown against the British, but was completely crushed.

A strong British attack which quickly carried the first line of German trenches was launched early to-day in the Lens region. At the time Field Marshal Haig filed his report to the War Office the attack was still progressing satisfactorily. The Allies also gained further ground in Flanders northeast of Bixschoote, the British Commander reported.

PARIS, August 15.—The French advanced considerably west of Dixmude in Belgium, the War Office announced to-day.

On the road between Hurtebise and Craonne German artillery heavily bombarded French first lines, the statement says. On Calaners Plateau an enemy raid was repulsed. Artillery fighting was active on both banks of the Meuse throughout the night. On the left bank, west of Hill 304, the French threw back a German attack.

Potatoes Holding Firmly Until Later Crops Reach Market

No Importations This Summer From the United States and Local Product is the Sole Offering.

Until the effect of the bulk of the potato crop is felt, the market is likely to maintain the firmness shown in the present price of $3 to $3.50 a bag. Local consumers are using their own potatoes or those grown by home market gardeners. No supplies are coming from the United States because of prevailing high prices, a fact that evidently means that Ontario will use its own product for ten months of the year. Mr. W. J. Oke pointed out this morning that usually potatoes from the south are received during the summer months, and practically up to the time the farm stocks were turned into the market. This summer, however, the demand is necessarily being met by home production. Up to the present this has been only from the earlier varieties. Hence, until the back yard and vacant lot gardens, and the field crops grown by the farmers are turned into the scales they are likely to remain at the even balance of $ a bag.

Mr. Oke has marketed about five per cent. of his own crop in North Monaghan. He used Bordeaux and poison and added fertiliser, but even with these attentions his crop will not be a large one. He classes it as fair. In the near future the vacant lot crops that fringe the south end of the city, including the C.G.E. company's community effort, should be pouring on to the market. The high price will prove attractive as soon as the crop is marketable, and with that arrival prices are expected to tumble. However, there is but little indication in the present situation that potatoes are going to be cheap during the coming months. There is an underlying sentiment that is entirely bullish, although a temporary recession is expected.

General Committee Issues Results of Negotiations

The General Committee of the Commercial Telegraphers' Union of America, C.P.R. System Division No. 1, has issued the result of its negotiations with the company on revision of terms. The main provisions given are as follows:

"A revised wage scale, including the Morkrums, and the right to legislate for all telegraph employees; the establishing of an eight and one-half hour day and seven-hour night on all tricks starting at or later than 6 p.m., with a ten-hour day, including one hour for lunch at one-man offices; a minimum increase of five dollars per month for each Morse telegrapher; a re-arrangement of percentages as follows: Vancouver, Calgary, Moose Jaw, Winnipeg, each 30 per cent. at $105; 20 per cent. at $100; 30 per cent. at $95, and 10 per cent. optional. Toronto and Montreal, each 30 per cent. at $95; 20 per cent. at $90; 20 per cent. at $85, and 20 per cent. optional. For the telegraphers now receiving top salary at these points, an increase of five dollars per month over the fixed top has been granted, that is, up to one hundred and ten dollars per month in the west, and one hundred dollars per month in the east. A $60 minimum for Morkrum operators, $65 after six months and $70 after one year's service. Vacations will now be granted to all who have been in the service three years or more instead of four years under the old rule.

Unique Accident In Wheat Field

OWEN SOUND, Aug. 15.—Myrtle Irena, the three-year-old daughter of Hugh Graham, a well-known Derby farmer, residing near the village of Kilsythe, had one leg cut completely off below the knee and the main bone of the other cut through when caught by the binder her father was operating in a wheat field yesterday afternoon. Mr. Graham had just made one round of the field and did not know that the child was in the grain, as it was taller than she was, and he did not know of her presence until she screamed. Doctors hurried from Owen Sound and Tara to dress the injured limbs.

ALLIES WILL NEED 160,000,000 BUSHELS

Britain and her Allies need 160,000,000 bushels of wheat more than there is available for export from the two countries to whom they look for supplies—Canada and the United States—according to a statement by Hon. W. J. Hanna, Canada's Food Controller, and this is calculated on the decreased scale of consumption already practiced in Great Britain. To make up this shortage, the people of Canada and the United States are organizing to substitute other foods and reduce consumption of flour foods by one-sixth. Household scientists say it can be done without loss of health or comfort.

The Military Authorities Seize Arms and Munitions

Special to The Examiner:

DUBLIN, Aug. 15.—Military authorities raided the headquarters of Col. Moore's Irish volunteers to-day, seizing 120 rifles and 1,300 blank cartridges. No arrests were made.

BASIS OF A DURABLE PEACE

Special to the Examiner:

AMSTERDAM, Aug. 15.—Maximilian Hardon's suppressed "Zunkuft" re-appeared to-day and advised the restoration of Alsace to France and Trieste to Italy if a durable peace is to be secured, the German diplomats stated.

Peterboro' Business College

Fall Term Begins Sept. 4th, Not August 14th

Through an unfortunate typographical error, the date of the opening of the fall term of the Peterborough Business College has been incorrectly printed as August 14th, instead of September 4th. It is learned that this error has led to considerable inconvenience to a number of new applicants who came to the city yesterday and to-day, to enter as students for the term, and were, of course, obliged to return home again to await the regular opening on September 4th. Mr. McKone, the principal of the College, having been out of the city for several weeks, was not aware of the error of date until this morning, and epresses regret at the unfortunate mistake.

Sand Literature Found By Russians

Nineteen Boxes Opened in Japan Reveal Strange Reading Matter.

YOKOHAMA, August 15.—Nineteen boxes brought here by Russians from the United States which were destined for Russia were found when opened to be filled sand instead of Socialistic literature as the immigrants had supposed. The Russians declared they were taking the literature home for the enlightenment of their fellow-citizens, and they alleged that the American police had substituted sand for the pamphlets during the journey across the American continent.

There is a steady stream through Japan of Russian workers returning to their fatherland from the United States. They are forwarded in batches of fifty to Harbin, where they are turned over to the Russian authorities. About 1,500 have passed through Yokohama since the Russian revolution.

Agricultural Knowledge

An entirely new catalogue is ready for circulation of the publications issued in the last few years by the Dominion Department of Agriculture. There are 317 listed, of which 31 are devoted to the dairy, butter-making, cheese making, cold storage, grains, grasses, vegetables flax and tobacco; 37 to insect and plant diseases; 51 to live stock and everything appertaining thereto; 19 to apples and fruits, generally; 24 to gardening, fruit, flower and vegetable, home and school; 33 to poultry, raising, keeping, housing, feeding and marketing, candling, preservation, production and shipping eggs, and 42 to miscellaneous subjects, seasonable hints, cold storage, bees, honey production, soil fertility, maple sugar production, manures and fertilizers, farm machinery, forestry, and the War Book of 1915 and 1916, The Agricultural Gazette, The Agricultural Instruction Act and so on. The catalogue will be sent without charge on application being made to the Publication Branch, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

Opinion Tends Toward Prompt Rejection Of Pope's Peace Proposal

The Offer Will Stir Pacific Sentiment and Cause the Thinking World to Pause in Reflection--Close Connection Between the Austrian Court and the Vatican is Matter of History.

THE AMERICAN VIEW

(By Carl Groat, United Press Staff Correspondent.)

Special to The Examiner:

WASHINGTON, August 15.—President Wilson is awaiting the voice of the world opinion before deciding his course on the Pope's peace offer, and London despatches intimate great interest in America's attitude. There has been no attempt to minimize the importance of the peace move coming as it does from a source outside the realm of diplomacy, at a time when the world feels revulsion at the thought of another winter campaign, and when all treasuries but American are at a low ebb, it must be reckoned with. This Government either directly or indirectly will reply to the Pope. Officials think generally the world should know where the United States and her Allies stand, especially if the offer is rejected. All other allied opinion with the exception of Russia tends toward a prompt rejection of the proposal. But authorities here realize that coming from the Pope, the offer carries a weight which German feelers have lacked. The offer will stir pacific sentiment and cause a thinking world to pause in reflection. The hint is launched that Germany may have chosen the Vatican as a means of surrendering gracefully without incurring disaster and possible revolution at home. In any event be the offer accepted or rejected it will serve to plant peace seeds in all nations as nothing else has done in recent months. The State Department said recently the world would harken thoughtfully to any bona-fide peace offering. The Pope, it is believed, has maximum and minimum Teuton terms.

PRESS COMMENT IN ENGLAND.

LONDON, August 15.—The Press comment of to-day on the peace offer does not show the resentment that appeared when German peace feelers came. It is pointed out, however, that immediate peace negotiations are of supreme importance to Germany. The desire for peace in Austria even more than in Germany is well known. The close connection between the Austrian Court and the Vatican is a matter of history, hence the first conclusion that the Pope's proposals are of German inspirations. Germany, it is believed here to-day, may be expected to be the first to reply to the Pope's message. Whether allied nations reply directly depends on the nature of the communication.

SERGT. J. MARTIN KILLED IN ACTION HAD FINE RECORD

Killed in action on July 20th is the last entry opposite the name of Peter J. Martin in the Canadian War Records. And his is an enviable and glorious record. He was the son of Mr. John Martin, 215 Bethune street the flagbearer of the Temple Corps of the Salvation Army. A British reservist he responded to the summons to rejoin his regiment in England and was injured at Langemarck, where he went into action with the British regiments that hurried to assist the Canadians. In that engagement he was injured and during his convalescence, the period of his reserve expired. He chose to return to Canada and was home but a short time when he enlisted with the 93rd Battalion. He went overseas as a Sergeant, but reverted to the ranks when the battalion was broken up. Later, he was promoted to Corporal and at the time of his death was acting Sergeant, having regained all his stripes on the field.

Three months ago he won the Distinguished Conduct Medal. In a letter his parents received yesterday morning, he stated that he was retaining the ribbon, but was forwarding the medal to them. It was a cheery letter and had created a feeling of safety that rendered all the more difficult Adjt. McElhiney's duty of easing the shock of the official telegram, which was received last night.

Only a month ago, Sergt. Martin had met at the front his brother, whom neither he nor his parents had heard from in nine years. The reunion naturally brought great joy to Mr. and Mrs. Martin, but they had scarcely recovered the one son, when they have lost forever the other.

During the preliminary training of the 93rd Battalion, the experience Sergt. Martin gained at the front proved invaluable to him as an instructor of Col. Johnston's recruits.

REV. FATHER MEAGHER'S LAWN SOCIAL

Will be held at Riverside Park Grove, Lakefield, opposite the G.T.R. station, on Thursday afternon and evening, August 16th. Supper will be served from 4 p.m. until 8 p.m., and the ladies of the parish promise a fine repast. Music and other attractions will be provided. A special welcome will be extended to all Peterbrough people.

CANADIANS SWEEP FORWARD TO DEPTH OF NEARLY A MILE

No Negligence Shown By The C.P.R. Trainmen

Enquiry Into Death of J. F. Aiken At Burketon Resumed This Afternoon

The enquiry into the death of John F. Aiken of Toronto at Burketon, on Aug. 6th, was resumed before a jury this afternoon, with Coroner Greer presiding.

It was brought out that the deceased mistakenly understood that passengers would have fifteen minutes for lunch at the Junction, but the train, which was a special, remained only the usual six minutes. It was also shown that the Conductor gave ample warning before signalling the engineer to open the throttle.

Frank Wright of Toronto, examined by Crown Attorney Hatton, said he had spent Toronto Civic Holiday at Bobcaygeon and was returning with Aiken.

At Burketon they went into the restaurant for lunch. While they were eating the Conductor called out "All Aboard."

"I looked around," said Wright, "and saw the train moving. I said to Aiken 'Come on, the train has started.' I looked around and saw him coming through the restaurant door. I caught the train, but I did not see him afterwards. I went through the train several times, but couldn't find him. I concluded that he had missed the train. I didn't know anything about the accident until the next day.

Conductor Hubbel.

"The train left Lindsay a little late, although it left Bobcaygeon on time," stated Samuel Hubbel, conductor of the special. "It arrived at Burketon Junction about 27 minutes late." I was in the agent's office when passengers went into the restaurant."

"Did you stay as long as usual at Burketon?

"I don't know. That was the first trip I had on that run, so I don't know what the usual time was."

Witness said the train remained five minutes.

"Several persons asked me if they would have time for lunch and I told them we would be only a minute at Burketon.

"I saw a few passengers in the refreshment room, about ten or fifteen. I called 'All aboard' three times before I went to the engine with the orders, and, coming back, I called again."

"That was four times altogether," Mr. Hatton queried.

"Yes. I had 2 trainman stationed at the refreshment room, and he gave me a signal that all the passengers were out of the room. He raised his hand, and by that I understood that the restaurant was clear of passengers. I then gave the last call, 'All aboard,' and the train began to move shortly after."

"Did you see the crowd running when the train started?"

"No. I was at the west-end of the platform I caught the second coach. I didn't see anyone try to get on the train when it was moving.

"I am positive I didn't tell anybody that the train would stop there fifteen minutes."

The Capture of Hill 70 Ranks in Importance With the Biggest Military Operations of the Year

A TYPICAL BRITISH "PUSH"

(By William Philips Simms, United Press Staff Correspondent.)

With the British Armies in the Field, Aug. 15.—Positions over a thousand yard front and to a depth of nearly a mile were stormed and captured by the Canadians early to-day in a new assault on the German defences of Lens.

As a result of the objects attained by to-day's attack, the famous coal city is now nothing more than a death trap for Germans. If they continue to hold it, their pride will cost them dearly in lives and blood. Hill 70 was captured in the first rush of the Canadians. In addition, Hazelwood, Cite St. Laurent, Cite Ste. Mile and part of Cite St. Elizabeth, and a portion of Hugo wood were quickly taken. A number of other important mining centres and positions about Lens were next captured. It was during dawn, more beautiful than a painter's dream, that Field Marshall Haig struck again at the German line. This time the blow was felt against the approaches of the coal city, instead of in Flanders. Everything was carried before the force of the irresistible push. The objectives fixed for the day were taken in the first rush, and then came the work of consolidating positions. Several hundred prisoners already counted. The attack which swept the Canadians forward until they held the last positions dominating the approaches to Lens was tpical of a British "push."

There was the usual hush before the battle. After a night of artillery engagements a death-like silence fell. Then came the drum fire, the roar of guns, the screeching of shells and the flare of rockets behind the German lines in rapid signalling. The sun was just rising. The British barrage was under way, a curtain of steel was falling between the Canadian trenches and the enemy. Then the Canadians swept over their parapets. They followed their curtain of steel and flame across the open ground. German rockets, carrying their "S.O.S." signals began bursting more rapidly, but from the first everything went well with the British. With their bombing, their bayonetting and other work complete, they looked down upon Lens, complete masters of its gateways.

Cite St. Laurent, mentioned by Simms as captured by the Canadians, is only about a mile north of the main section of Lens, between the coal city and Loos. Other points captured by the Canadians are in this same region.

Charged at 4.25 a.m.

Hill 70 is to Lens and the Loos salient what Messines is to Ypres and in some ways an even more enviable position than the Messines Ridge. Hill 70 was bombarded with guns of all calibres which worked havoc among German defences on its crest. The Germans undoubtedly were aware of an attack was impending and prepared for it as fully as possible. It was just four twenty-five when the British guns dropped a protecting barrage before the Canadian trenches and the troops leaped over the parapet for the charge. Details of fighting are not yet available, but troops swept forward with invincible precision which has characterised latest work of the great British fighting machine.

Details of Fighting.

LONDON, August 15.—The British guns had been pounding for days Hill 70. The infantry attack began at 4:25 o'clock this morning. The capture of Hill 70 ranks in importance with the biggest military operations of this year. It was the last dominating positions in this section which remained in the hands of the Germans, and from it a wide territory can be controlled. The Germans undoubtedly prepared for the attack as fully as possible, for there is no question that they were aware it was impending. Their nervous shelling of the communicating roads back of the British positions here for many days gave full evidence that they knew sooner or later they must defend their claims. So it was a case of the better side winning. It was just twenty-five past four when the British guns dropped a protecting barrage before the Canadian trenches and the troops leaped over the parapet for the charge. Details of the fighting are not yet available, but the troops swept forward with the invincible precision which has characterized the latest work of the Great British fighting machine.

CLOSING IN.

The despatches tell us that the little black republic of Liberia, with a population of two millions, has declared war against Germany. The fact that some parts of the population are cannibals suggests that the Kaiser might make a mouthful for some sable Liberian—if pushed by extreme hunger. It is also stated that China, with four hundred millions population, has declared war against Germany. The Central Powers are becoming speedily isolated; the doom is closing in; a great portion of the civilized and semi-civilized world being against them. Germany and her confederation are now fighting nineteen actual belligerents. With China, the Argentine and Liberia, the number is increased to twenty-two, while larger and smaller states — Panama, Brazil, Bolivia, Honduras, Guatemala, Costa Rica, and Uruguay have severed diplomatic relations. This means that of the fifty-six nations of the world about twenty-five are opposed to Germany and her confederates are now fighting—population of the Central Powers—Germany, Austria, Bulgaria and Turkey—numbers 157 millions; while the combined population of the six largest and most powerful of the opponents numbers 856 millions. The odds in numbers and resources, not to speak of the righteousness of the cause, are tremendously against Germany and her confederates—to an extent that makes humanly certain the defeat of Germany and her insanely insatiate ambitions, and the destruction of her military predominance, which has for half a century kept Europe in turmoil. There may be much hard fighting to be done; but the collapse will be hastened, when the strength of the United States in military and material resources is thrown into the scale, and when regenerated Russia "comes back," as there is every indication of her doing. The way of the Entente Allies is steadily and irresistibly forward, and the breaking point of Germany and her allies is coming closer every day.

Hanna serves as Food Controller without pay, but the government refuses economy by giving swingeing high salaries to his assistants.

SHIRKING RESPONSIBILITY.

A few days ago a local contemporary met the Examiner's criticism of Sir Robert Borden on account of his failure to pass legislation forbidding the import of liquor into prohibition provinces, by the statement that the provinces possessed he power to take equivalent action. This statement was not true; if it were, what was the necessity of the Dominion Parliament passing special legislation on Friday to give the provinces the power to take a round-about course to exclude liquor fro mthe provinces. This way of doing the thing is a sort of sneaking way; the responsibility is thrown upon the provinces of passing legislation that is carrying legislative autocracy to the extreme. The Ontario legislature got considerable criticism for passing prohibition itself, subject to popular approval in 1916, and the doubt of this popular approval will be increased if the power to pass intensive sumptuary legislation, granted by act of parliament, is used. The chief object of passing the prohibition act in Ontario was to "banish the bar." That object was not attained before importation of strong drink was permitted. The Dominion Government only had the power to apply this prohibition, which it could have done by special enactment, or, in view of a condition of war, by order in council. This the Government refused to do, and, after waiting for a year the government, instead, shifts its responsibility by turning over its duty to the provinces, by giving the power to pass a drastic rider to the prohibition act which savours of the blue laws in its extreme interference with personal liberty. The manly way would have been for the Dominion Government to have passed legislation concurrent with Ontario prohibition, forbidding the importation of liquor into the province. The people would have accepted such legislation as a logical accompaniment of provincial prohibition and unpleasant legislation would not have been forced upon the provincial government, with the result of further delay and the necessity of greatly complicating the difficulty of enforcement. It would have been just as easy for the Borden government to pass an act prohibiting import of liquor into prohibition provinces, as to pass an act shouldering the responsibility upon the provinces.

The whole world that amounts to anything will soon be in arms against Germany.

THE FOREST FOREVER.

One cannot wonder at the lively interest taken by the Conservation Commission and the Forestry Association when it is remembered how important, in the national interests, are the protection and perpetuation of our forest growths. A statement of the Forestry Branch, Ottawa, shows that the world's supply of pulp depends upon the Canadian output. The total consumption of Canadian pulpwood has steadily increased from 3,931,653 cords in 1908 to 13,104,458 in 1916, the remarkable increase being that of four millions in the later year over the preceding year. In 1916 Canadian plup mills consumed in pulp manufacture 1,765,912 cords, of a value of $13,104,916, while nearly 7 millions' worth was exported, making the total product a value of nearly twenty millions—$19,971,197.

It is probable that most of the nearly seven million dollars' worth of pulp wood exported, was cut on private lands, owned by United States interests; and that is an undesirable feature of ouh pulp situation. That cannot be easily prevented at present; but there is need of a government policy that will ultimately lead to the prevention of the export of pulp wood in the raw state and provide for the manufacture in Canada of all our pulpwood to the ultimate condition—paper. Such a policy would add very largely to the value of our pulp wood and represent a large amount of money spent at home in labour, transportation and supplies, a sum that would constantly grow, as depletion of pulp lands in other countries led to increased demand for Canadian pulp or paper products, with increase in price. The increase per cord of pulpwood over 1915 was 71 cents.

The fact that Canada holds the whip hand in the matter of pulp wood should lead to more energetic government effort to promote economical cutting, and, by selection of timber, preserve growing pulp wood trees to develop rapidly and, in the aggregate, immensely, by natural growth, instead of permitting the cutting of small trees. With proper care in cutting, with preservation of growing trees, with more adequate protection from fires, the Canadian stand of pulp forest can be made virtually permanent.

Reforestation—seeding and planting of burnt-over and wastefully cut-over areas—is something that might well engage practical attention. We have in Canada the greatest nickel deposits in the world, but in time these can, and will, be exhausted; and there is no means of reproducing such deposits. But with our forest and pulpwood areas there is possibility of providing that they shall never be exhausted—by careful cutting, by reproduction and preservation from the wasting ravages of forest fires, but remain productive forests forever.

It is claimed that the non-partisan commission government gives the city betterf service, at less expense, than any other form of government.

Success Of Ennismore's Continuation School

Passed Eleven Candidates This Year--One With Honours

The people of the township, the school authorities and the teachers, have great reason to regard with satisfaction the evidence of the efficiency of Ennismore Continuation School, presented by the results of the Examinations. Eleven candidates from the school, passed—one, Mr. Leaky, with honours; four of the eleven passed the matriculation examinations and seven the Normal School entrance examinations.

The teacher, Miss Clara Young, Principal and Miss Beasie McNamara, deserve credit for this successful work. Thus another proof is provided of the fact, that women are competent to take, in many things, their place on equal terms with mankind, who has, heretofore, been regarded as having something like a monopoly of positions of responsibility, requiring unusual intellectual and administrative ability.

Boys' Training Is Being Studied By Australians

PLANS TO CONTROL APPRENTICESHIP OUTLINED ON GENEROUS LINES.

SYDNEY, N. S. W.—The director of education, in the State of New South Wales, Australia, has suggested a course of industrial training that will be taken up all over Australia, if successful in the parent state. The principal features of the scheme are as follows:

The control of apprenticeship to be placed in the hands of a body constituted for that purpose, and charged with an almost paternal oversight of the apprentice in all the various aspects of his training.

Hitherto the supply of skilled men, either as employees or as overseers, has been left largely to chance. The State has done little of set purpose to create an army of men skilled and trained in various industrial directions. There has been no organised effort to direct the potential capacity of our youth, to make it available for skilled service in industries.

The proposal aims at the organising of the capacity of the boys to meet the requirements of the expanding industries of the State, and at the same time give to the boys themselves a chance to make the most of whatever capacity they possess. It is proposed to secure these results by the education of boys for occupations. A very large percentage of the boys who have continued their education after they have left the primary schools have entered occupations that demand special skill or special knowledge. This has followed from the fact that the specialized knowledge has created an interest in the work in the minds of the boys, and has enabled them to realize their own possibilities.

TRAINING COMMISSION

It is proposed that an industrial training commission shall be appointed. The administration and governing body would be a party to all indentures of apprentices, and would be a body to determine rates of wages, length of apprenticeship in specialized trades, apprentices' appeals with regard to conditions of work, employers' complaints against apprentices, transfer of apprentices to other employers, nature of employment to secure variety of practice in the trade, obligations of employers to apprentices and vice versa, attendance at trades and instruction, and regulation of working hours for the purpose; extension of apprenticeship in special cases, consultation with wage boards in matters in which interests of apprenticeship infringe on adult labour questions, etc.

The principle of limitation of number of apprentices in ratio to the number of adult workmen is to be recognized, and as a general principle the right of the worker to adult wage on reaching adult age is to be recognized. As a general rule, apprenticeship is to be commenced at such age as will admit of trade competency being acquired by the age of 21. Any advanced day school education that partly prepares a boy for a skilled trade is to be taken into account towards shortening the period of apprenticeship. In certain specified trades requiring skill gained from experience as well as theoretical knowledge, apprenticeship is to be compulsory. Attendance at a technical or trades school is to be a condition of such apprenticeship.

The working hours of an apprentice is to be limited in such a way that he may attend for trade school education for at least six out of 8 ordinary working hours, but the hours so taken is to be regulated after consultation with representatives of employers interested to provide for such distribution of them as will lead to the least dislocation of shop operations.

Local farm.

"I am sure many farmers need men and would apply for them if they knew they could get them so readily," said Mr. G. A. Gillespie this morning. Thus far he has not called on many of the listed volunteers for the harvesting of the crops but has been depending upon "floaters." many of them experienced in farm work. Some of these appear to be insincere in their applications at Mr. Gillespie's office. They might be termed elusive. When arrangements are made for their transportation, they fail to report. It is rather difficult to back them into the harness and in too many cases, apparently second thoughts have diminished their desires for country labour.

From farmers it is claimed that the labour situation is fairly satisfactory, and if a man is without help the deficiency is due to his own neglect.

Mr. Gillespie is receiving from the central committee for the Organization of Resources transportation blanks and is about to offer to headquarters fifty or sixty men for work outside of Peterborough.

What Every Disabled Soldier Should Know

THAT there is no such word as "impossible" in his dictionary.
THAT his natural ambition to earn a good living can be fulfilled.
THAT he can either get rid of his disability or acquire a new ability to offset it.
THAT the whole object of doctors, nurses, and instructors, is to help him in doing that very thing.
THAT he must HELP THEM TO HELP HIM.
THAT he will have the most careful and effectual treatment known to science.
THAT interesting and useful OCCUPATION form a most valuable part of the treatment in Convalescent Hospitals and Sanatoriums.
THAT if he cannot carry out his first duty by rejoining his comrades at the front, and if there is no light duty for him with the Canadian forces overseas, he is taken home to Canada, a soon as his condition and the shipping facilities make this possible.
THAT his strength and earning capacity will be restored there to the highest degree possible, through the Military Hospitals Commission.
THAT if he requires an artificial LIMB or kindred appliance it will be supplied FREE.
THAT every man disabled by service will receive a PENSION or Gratuity in proportion to his disability.
THAT his pension cannot be reduced by his undertaking work or perfecting himself in some form bf industry.
THAT his pay and allowances continue till he is cured or till his pension begins.
THAT an extra three months' pay, field pay, and separation allowance when there are dependents receiving such allowance, will be paid to all men returned from overseas and honourably discharged after at least six months' service,—with certain exceptions, such as members of the Permanent Forces and Federal or Provincial Civil Service who can step right back into their old positions.
THAT if his disability prevents him from returning to his old work he will receive FREE TRAINING for a new accupation.
THAT full consideration is given to his own capacity and desires when a new occupation has to be chosen.
THAT his own will-power and determination will enable him to succeed, both in the training and in the occupation afterwards.
THAT his MAINTENANCE and that of his family will be paid for during the training he may receive after discharge, and for a month longer.
THAT neither his treatment nor his training will cost him a cent.
THAT his home Province has a special Commission to assist him in FINDING EMPLOYMENT on discharge.
THAT hundreds of towns and villages have committees, associations, and clubs, to welcome him on arrival, and to help in securing a position for him.
THAT the Dominion and Provincial Governments, the Municipal authorities, and all sorts of employers, give the returned soldier PREFERENCE in filling vacant positions.
THAT the returned soldier wishing to TAKE UP LAND and farm it, will be helped to do so, under Federal and other settlement schemes.
THAT the Military Hospitals Commission exists to carry out his restoration and training in Canada.
That the Board of Pension Commissioners exists to distribute the pensions provided by his country for him and his dependents.
THAT the Military Hospitals Commission and the Board of Pension Commissioners are in the position of TRUSTEES, APPOINTED FOR HIS BENEFIT, and representing the whole people of Canada.
THAT, therefore, he should write direct to the Commission or the Board if he needs advice or help.
Canadians are unanimously resolved that every returned soldier shall have a full opportunity to succeed. When that opportunity is put within his reach, his success will depend on his own good sense in seizing and using it.

FREE FIGHT STAGED IN GIANT GAME

Stengel and Fletcher Come to Blows, While the Tteams Break Even.

NEW YORK, August 14. — New York and Brooklyn divided another double-header here to-day, the Giants winning the first game, 5 to 4, and Brooklyn taking the second, 3 to 1. The second game was marred by a first fight between Stengel and Fletcher in the sixth inning, in which other players joined. Both principals were ordered off the field by Umpire Harrison. A feature of the double-header was six home runs, four of which came in the first game. In the second Marquad, a Giant cast-off, pitched a grand game for Brooklyn. Daubert won the game with a home run with Olson on base in the sixth. The scores:

First game—		R.	H.	E.
Brooklyn	011001010	4	9	1
New York	20100002*	5	11	1

Batteries—Coombs and Krueger. Schupp and Gibson.

Second game—		R.	H.	E.
Brooklyn	000102000	3	5	1
New York	000000001	1	5	1

Batteries — Marquard and M. Wheat; Tesreau Anderson, and Rariden.

At Boston—Kelly's single, Konetchy's triple and Fitzpatrick's single off Rixey with none out scored two runs in the last of the ten to-day, enabling Boston to defeat Philadelphia 2 to 1. Ragan held Philadelphia to three hits. He was given sensational support by Maranville.

The score:		R.	H.	E.
Philadelphia	000000001	1	3	0
Boston	000000002	2	10	2

Batteries—Rixey and Killifer; Ragan and Tragesser.

At Chicago—Jackson's daring base running in the twelfth inning and the weakening of Douglas gave Pittsburg the final game of the series, 2 to 0. The game was a pitching duel between Cooper and Douglas, but the latter could not stand the strain.

The score:		R.	H.	E.
Pittsburg	000000000002	2	9	1
Chicago	000000000000	0	9	0

Batteries—Cooper and W. Wagner; Douglas and Dilhoefer.

Sergeant Thorpe Winner In Several Events

Well Known Peterboro' Soldier is Still Winning Important Events

Special to The Examiner:

Witley Camp, Surrey.

July 31—(By Mail).— On July 21st Sergeant C. A. Thorpe won the one mile open race at Guildford, Surrey, in 4 mins. 40 secs., winning comfortably.

On Saturday last, July 28, at Woking, Surrey, starting from next to scratch in a mile and a half handicap race, he finished second. The winner started from the 120 yd. mark and Sergt. Thorpe just failed to catch him, finishing about 10 yards behind him. At the same meeting Sergt Thorpe ran for the 5th Divisional relay team (4 men), the team winning their heat and finishing second in the final against 17 other teams. Sgt Thorpe is running again at Stamford Bridge, on Aug. 6th, and is also in the Canadian championships (open to Canadians in British Isles) on Aug 11th.

In the relay race at Woking, Sergt Thorpe was running against Hector Phillips, Canadian half mile champion and Ernie Owens, English International mile champion, and other good men

BALLOT BOXES ORDERED.

Ten Thousand are Now Being Made in Toronto.

TORONTO, Aug. 14.—Ten thousand steel ballot boxes have been ordered by the Federal Government from Soren Brothers, 549 King street west, for use in the coming election. The order calls for delivery October 1st. The cost of these receptacles is much higher than it was in 1911, as they are of all-metal constructin.

ONLY MEETS HALF NEED

Minority Report Calls for Double Original Estimate of U. S. War Tax Measure.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 15.—Conscription of wealth to pay for the war and the exemption of the earnings of the nation's workers are urged in a report to the Senate to-day by three members of the Finance Committee, who disagree with the revenue raising methods proposed in the pending $2,006,970,000 war tax bill.

The report, signed by Senators Lafollette, Gore, and Thomas, of Colorado, asserts that the sum the committee bill proposes to raise is only half enough to meet Governmental needs for the present fiscal year. The report says that to take care of loans to the allies and interest on bond issues this country must raise more than $13,000,000,000 this year.

Berlin Expects Attacks

Special to The Examiner:

BERLIN, Aug. 15.—Another great offensive by the Entente Allies on the Western front is expected by Berlin newspapers. The Tageblatt says: Doubtless offensive plans on a great scale exist on the French side and simultaneously we must reckon with a resumption of the English attack in Flanders. Strong fire playing incessantly on three local points on the Aisne, at Verdun, and in Flanders announces that these attacks can speedily be expected.

First Comment On Peace Issue From Germany

BERLIN, via London, August 15.—A refusal of Entente Powers to grant passports to the Stockholm Socialist conference shows that England and America are determined upon Germany's destruction, the "Vorwaerts" asserts to-day.

This reveals who are the real obstacles to peace, the "Vorwaerts" declares. The "Vorwaerts" refers to the action of the Entente nations as "brutal destruction of the Stockholm peace work."

This is the first comment out of Germany on peace since the issuance of the Pope's peace appeal. While comment is on another subject, it nevertheless reveals again the German attitude on the general proposition of peace.

'Great War Must Go On"

Special to The Examiner:

WASHINGTON, Aug. 15.—The great war must go on until Germany is willing to talk reparation, restoration and guarantees. The United States government stands with the other allies in a determination to fight until their objectives are secured. The Pope's peace appeal has made no change in the war aims of the country. The State Department announced this afternoon.

S. A. Girl Guides Had Fine Outing

The 25 Girl Guide of the Salvation Army who spent two weeks at Jubilee Point and had the time of their lives returned to the city last night on the Geneva. The Boy Scouts will go down this week and enjoy a good holiday at the lovely spot, when both features of lake and river with swimming, fishing are all to be enjoyed.

The Temple Band's visit to Fenelon Falls last week-end eclipsed all previous efforts, both by the band and the citizens. The crowds were simply immense and so was the financial and spiritual results.

LIVE STOCK MARKET

Special to The Examiner:

TORONTO, Aug. 15.—Live stock receipts fair, trade steady. Prices: lambs, $14 to $14.50; hogs, fed and watered, $18, off cars, $18.75; f.o.b., $17; others unchanged.

Warsaw Items Of Interest

WARSAW, Aug. 15.—An address on "Canning Fruits and Vegetables" was given to the ladies of the community on Monday, Aug. 13th, by Miss Powell, a delegate sent out by the Women's Institute of Ontario. The meeting was opened by singing "The Maple Leaf," after which Mrs. Arthur Edwards, the President of the local branch of the Institute, introduced Miss Powell. After a short address on "The Object of Canning" a practical demonstration of the canning of vegetables, fruits and meats was given, during which many points old and new, were touched upon. A hearty vote of thank was tendered Miss Powell on behalf of the ladies.

On Tuesday, Aug. 21, a joint meeting of the Red Cross workers and the Women's Institute will be held in the Red Cross room, when the regular business of the institute will be taken up.

EVERYDAY READING

On April 6th, 1917, a meeting was being held in a Mission House in London, England. The chairman of that meeting said he remembered, that fifty or forty years ago, if you said anyconcerning Israel were nearly all spiritualised when they were not applied in a literal sense at all—though Israel is distinctly spoken of. He said, when God speaks of Israel He means Israel. When God speaks of Zion He means Zion. He said, I dare say thirty of forty years ago, if you said anything about the return of Israel to their own land, to ordinary men, they would have smiled and thought it incredible; and it was certainly an exceedingly improbable thing, looking at it from man's point of view, that Palestine should be repeopled by the Jewish nation. A distinguished literary man speaks of it as a possibility, and it has certainly come within political possibility, that even before the war is over, or at any rate when it is over the land will be put in possession of its ancient proprietors—the land that God promised by covenant to His servant Abraham. Just here we would relate quite a romance of God's providence: A Russian Jew found himself harassed at every step under the old regime. He emigrated to England quite a few years ago, and soon became prominent in chemical research. Early in the history of this terrible war, England found herself in a dangerous crisis, owing to the lack of certain substances in the manufacture of naval munitions. Then this Russian Jew presented himself, offering certain discoveries, which he had made, which would amply supply the need. There were interviews with the then Minister of Munitions (Mr. Lloyd George), and other Ministers of State, and his experiments having been tested by experts, were found to be all that he claimed for them. He was then asked by representatives of the British government how much he wanted for his discoveries, and his reply was that he wanted no reward in money, but the promise that if, and when, the Allies are victorious, they would help the Zionists toward the realization of their national aspirations in relation to Palestine, which promise, as I understand, was freely given. Who shall say that these are not days of miracles, or that there is not a power that ordaineth the steps of man? VICTOR.

ASKS ALIMONY FROM WIFE

Former Newspaper Man Thinks She Has Right to Support Him Since He is Ill.

QUEBEC, Aug. 14.—The seldom recorded fact of a man claiming alimony from his wife was seen to-day in the Superior Court here, when John O'Flaherty, a former newspaper reporter, filed a claim for an annuol pension of $480 from his wife, Mrs. Kathlyn Cullen. He claims he is sick, unable to work, so expects his wife to support him.

KERENSKY EXPECTS DEATH

Anxious to Liberate Russia Before the End Comes.

LONDON, Aug. 14.—Russian circles in Switzerland learn from Petrograd that Premier Kerensky, in talking with personal friends, recently, concerning his health, said: "I have not long to live. Disease has numbered my days. I must hasten the work of liberating Russia and do the greatest good I can before I depart. Peace now would make us future vassals of the Kaiser."

I AM WAR

I am a pestilence
Sweeping the world—
Hate is the root of me,
Death is the fruit of me,
Swift is my stroke;
Blood is the sign of me,
Steel is the twine of me;
Thus shall ye know me:
I am the death of Life,
I am the life of Death,
I am War!

MARKET SCALES INSPECTED AND FOUND WANTING

LINDSAY, Aug. 14.—The market scales were inspected by the mayor during the week, who condemned it at once and ordered that the mechanism be sent to Toronto for repairs.

The machine for weighing was out of balance to the extent of 15 lbs. more or less, when the inspector made an examination of its internal economy.

A member of the Council said it kicked up once before when Mickey Brown's brindle steer made a buck leap and jumped on to it with the result that the steer increased his weight by 200 pounds, at least he was that much less when weighed in Montreal, it was stated by the purchaser.

Mayor Kylie, with the chairman of town property, were instructed to have a concrete foundation put under the scales, which will take a few days' time.

Playgrounds Are Open Daily

Remember that the playgrounds are open from 9 to 12 and 2 to 5. Every boy and girl is welcome to enjoy the privileges of the swings, games, sand boxes and industrial work. The girls of all ages, are provided with materials free of charge, for basket weaving and sewing.

The parents are cordially invited to come and familiarize themselves with the work carried on at the playgrounds.

Free Lemonade To Be Served At Playgrounds

To-morrow (Thursday) afternoon, will be a big one for the youngsters at both King Edward and Central schools playgrounds. Free lemonade will be served to everybody from 2.30 on, as long as the supply lasts.

Come and get your share, as all boys and girls are welcome.

DIED SUDDENLY IN BERRY PATCH

LINDSAY, Aug. 15.— Death came with great suddenness on Monday afternoon to Olive Ruth Weldon, third daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. F. Weldon, of Cambray. The little child, accompanied by her brother, and sister, was berry picking at Long Beach near Cameron when she was seized with heart failure and expired suddenly.

Little Olive Ruth Weldon was a winsome child, a great favourite of all. She was in good spirits and excellent health when leaving for Long Beach, and the news of her sudden demise was a great shock to her parents and other relatives who will have the sincere sympathy of all. Besides her parents there is left to mourn her loss seven brothers and sisters, Merle, Jean, Carl, Ray, Aileen, Ona, Dorothy.

The funeral took place on Wednesday from the family residence, Cambray, at 2.00 o'clock. Interment at Eden cemetery.

VISITORS PATRONIZE THE PLAYGROUNDS

Chief Howard's two nephews from London, Ont., were among the visiting youngsters at the playgrounds on Tuesday and Wednesday.

Several visiting boys and girls from other towns have spent some of their play time at the playgrounds this summer.

STARVATION IS NEXT.

Germany Now Has Two Meatless Weeks a Month.

LONDON, Aug. 14.—The Vossische Zeitung of Berlin, is quoted in an Exchange Telegraph despatch from Amsterdam to the effect that meatless weeks have been decided upon in Saxony, and are now to be extended to the whole German Empire. According to this report there will be two meatless weeks a month, beginning with September.

German Seaplanes and Torpedo Boat Reported to Have Violated Dutch Neutrality.

The Hague, Aug. 15.—An official statement issued by the Netherlands Naval Department confirms the report that German seaplanes and a torpedo boat violated Dutch neutrality on Aug. 7. The German torpedo boat, according to the announcement, was within territorial waters off the mouth of the River Scheldt.

Girl Arrested For Giving Liquor To American Soldier

Toronto Woman First to be Apprehended for this in Detroit.

DETROIT, Mich., Aug. 15.—Rose Graham, 25, was arrested here by the cleanup squad, on a charge of furnishing liquor to James Conley, a private of the 31st Regiment.

The girl came from Toronto recently, and is the first woman arrested for furnishing liquor to a soldier. The offence is a federal one, and the Government will deal with the case.

SINN FEINERS ARRESTED.

J. J. Walsh, Freed After Rebellion, in Toils Again.

DUBLIN, Aug. 14.—J. J. Walsh, a prominent member of the Sinn Fein party, whose death sentence for participation in the recent rebellion, was commuted to ten years penal servitude, and who was lately granted amnesty, was arrested here yesterday in connection with the formation of Sinn Fein Clubs in the south of Ireland.

Courts martial recently have sentenced three Sinn Feiners from the County Clare, and four from the County Galway to imprisonment varying from two years to three months for offences against the anti-drilling order.

"LOVELY MARY" IS LIFE SAVER IN "PERIWINKLE"

Mary Miles Minter in Title Role of American-Mutal Star Production is Decided Hit—At the Empire To-night

The Empire Theatre has arranged to furnish to-night and to-morrow another feature picture which is receiving much commendation.

Mary Miles Minter's latest American-Mutual production, "Periwinkle" in which this popular child star appears in boots, oilskins and a sou'wester, is a most appealing of picture dramas directed by James Kirkwood.

"Periwinkle" is a coastguard story, "pretty little Periwinkle," as the men christen this baby girl cast up by the sea, becoming the pet and pride of the whole coast, her rough but big-hearted sponsors, most of whom are life-savers, watching with jealous eyes the efforts of Dick Langdon, a shipwrecked millionaire, to win her away from them.

The play is splendidly staged and "Lovely Mary" is at her best in it. The scenic photograhpy is unusually fine and the interior settings are on the usual elaborate scale adopted for Minter productions.

Included in the cast are such well known screen artists as George Fisher, who plays opposite Miss Minter; George Periolat, Anne Schaefer, Clarence Burton and George Ahearn.

The action of "Periwinkle" is fast and there are no dull spots in it. The story was written by William Farquhar Payson and adapted for the screen by Julian Louis Lamothe.

Director Kirkwood regards "Periwinkle" as certain to prove one of Miss Minter's greatest successes.

Empire Theatre to-day and to-morrow. Three changes weekly.

Park Street Baptist Church Choir Picnic

About Thirty People Journeyed to Hiawatha—An Enjoyable Outing

Monday, August 13th, 1917, will be remembered by the choir as one of the most enjoyable holidays ever spent together. Hiawatha was the place selected for the picnic. At 9 a.m. two bus loads, about 30 people left the church on the outward journey.

The panoramic view of God's wonderful bounty, in a continuous chain of fields of wheat, oats, etc., ripe unto harvest, and the farmer's wives and helpers on the various homesteads, busily gamering the golden grain was indeed, alone well worth the outing. Perhaps to "City Eyes," unaccustomed to such news, the scenery was more noticeable, but nature seemed to be at its zenith of loveliness.

Precisely at 12 noon the party arrived at the village and after such an invigorating journey, first thoughts were of "eats." Luncheon was prepared whilst the horses were having attention after their faithful service. After the repast and general rest, during which ime ice cream was served, walking, boating and games were enjoyed. The Chief, very willingly, gave permission to use the driving sheds of the church in which to rest the horses and also the use of the park for games. The delightful, cool breese from the lake moderated the temperature of an otherwise hot day.

Special interest was taken in visiting "the store" of which Mrs. Lukes is the genial proprietress and everyone was pleased with her smiling face and courteous manner. Soon after 4 o'clock an early supper was enjoyed and at 5 p.m. prompt, the return journey was started. All arrived safely back at the church at 8 p.m., everyone being enthusiastic over the splendid success of the day.

The whole programme was carried through faithfully and reflected credit on all concerned.

The "Doxology" and "God Save the King" fittingly closed the day's proceedings.

W. K. KELLOGG IS SUCCESSFUL

According to the report of the Battle Creek Enquirer, a judgment of considerable interest to the Canadian public, and particularly the Canadian grocers, has just been given out in the Circuit Court of Michigan.

The Kellogg Toasted Corn Flake Co., of Battle Creek, Mich., have been sustained by the court in their sole right to use the name "Kellogg" in connection with cereal foods.

The court further decided that as the Kellogg Toasted Corn Flake Co., of Battle Creek, had, by their extensive national advertising, made the name Kellogg in connection with cereal foods (particularly corn flakes) famous throughout the world, that neither Dr. J. H. Kellogg nor any subsidiary company acting under his instructions could use or give permission to others to use the name "Kellogg."

When Mr. W. S. Ware, the manager of the W. K. Kellogg Cereal Co., who are the selling agents in Canada for the Kellogg Toasted Corn Flake Co., was asked whether the Toronto company would take advantage of this decision and change the name of their corn flakes, which are now being sold under the name of "Dominion," to "Kellogg," he said he did not know. For the present at least, the name "Dominion" will be continued.

10,000 Men Actual Need To Harvest Crops Of Ontario

The following statement has been issued by the Organization of Resources Committee, Toronto:

As there seems to be some misapprehension owing to the apparently conflicting reports in the press with regard to the need for men labour, is seems desirable to make a clear statement of the case.

As has been frequently stated, the crowding together of haying, the hoeing of root crops, and harvesting, created the acute situation. It can easily be seen that this condition, which was wholly dependent upon the weather, could not have been foreseen, and in consequence, it brought with it conditions which had to be dealt with at once, or loss would occur in one of other of the crops.

Conservative Estimate.

The Resources Committee, from information which it had received from its branch committees, its field secretaries, and from the Department of Agriculture and the labour bureaus, was completely convinced that 10,000 was a conservative estimate. Nothing that has arisen since making the estimate justifies the committee to change it. The fact is, that while many men have offered their services, these have, with few exceptions, been placed with farmers, and where men have not been placed it has been due, not to the falling off of the demand, but rather to the extreme complexity of the problem of placing a great number of men in a short time over a very large area with individual farmers.

At the present time, the number of men offering is not keeping pace with the daily increasing demand, and we believe that the demand for the next week is likely to increase still more.

While the manufacturers and other employers who have responded have helped the committee to meet the situation as it was a week ago, it should be definitely understood that the harvest is not yet in and the situation announced by the committee ten days ago has not yet been met.

Additional News Of Lieut. Stratton

Ald. A. H. Stratton received the following additional news from the War Office in reference to the wounding of Lieut. J. R. (Reggie) Stratton. The message stated that he was admitted to No. 3 General Hospital, Letreport, on Aug. 14, with gunshot wounds in the face, right hand and right thigh.

DE WILLOUGHBY PLEADS GUILTY

BOSTON, Mass., Aug. 14.—Percy S. De Willoughby, who, posing as a wounded British officer, obtained entrance into exclusive social circles, and secured money on cheques which proved worthless, pleaded guilty to forgery and larceny in the Superior Court to-day. Sentence deferred.

VERY FEW CELEBRATED.

Berlin Band Could Not Arouse Enthusiasm.

LONDON, Aug. 14.—It is reported in an Exchange Telegraph despatch from Amsterdam that in response to a command of Emperor William the famous band of Yobleck trumpeters played yesterday in the tower of the Berlin town hall in celebration of the victories in Galicia. The newspapers say the attendance was small, and that the concert probably will be the last of the kind during the war.

THIS BROCKVILLE MAN IS TAKING A LONG DRIVE

A Ridgetown (Ont.) despatch says: "On Saturday a middle aged stranger drove a middle aged or rather older grey horse into town. After buying a new backband for his quadruped, he fell into conversation with the merchant, and explained his presence. He said his name was James Hallet and he was driving from his home in Brockville to visit his two brothers in Detroit, whom he had not seen in some twenty years. Mr. Hallet is stopping a few days with Mr. Loucks of Howard Rd., a friend he met when coming across the ocean many years ago. He said he left Brockville six weeks ago and has come along leisurely through a beautiful country."

Verdict In Lindsay Arsenal Accident

LINDSAY, Aug. 15.—At the adjourned inquest held at the Ross Memorial Hospital, after hearing the evidence of Mr. Gordon Stinson, the following verdict was returned:

We, the jurors empanelled to enquire into the death of Wm. Brown, who was fatally injured at the Dominion Arsenal, Lindsay, on July 23rd last, find that he came to his death through an explosion due to negligence on the part of himself and disobedience of orders as issued by his foreman; and we recommend that the foreman of that department in future, abides by the orders that he issues to those subordinate to him.

EXCURSION WAS WELL ATTENDED

The machinists' moonlight excursion, held last evening, was attended by about three hundred people. Tuckett's Orchestra supplied the music, while the Peterborough Business Girls' Club had charge of the booth. The trip was made on the steamer Stoney Lake.

The Inspectors held a similiar excursion on the steamer Geneva.

The weather was warm and an enjoyable time was spent.

SEND 20,000 MORE MEN,

Brig.-Gen. Mann Will Command New U. S. Overseas Army.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 14.—The commanding officer of the division of the First National Guard, numbering about 20,000, about to be sent to France, will be Brig-Gen. W. A. Mann of the regular army, now chief of the division of militia affairs of the War Department.

Nominations of more than 200 new major-generals and brigadier-generals who will hold commands in the new army were sent to the Senate to-day by President Wilson. They include all the National Guard general officers.

TRUMPETS DREW NO CROWD

Famous Band Played in Berlin at Kaiser's Order to Celebrate Galician Victory.

LONDON, Aug. 15.—It is reported in an Exchange Telegraph despatch from Amsterdam that, in response to a command of Emperor William, the famous band of Yobleck Trumpeters played yesterday in the tower of the Berlin town hall in celebration of the victories in Galicia. The newspapers say the attendance was small, and that the concert probably will be the last of the kind during the war.

The CRESSMAN Company Limited

Will Publish The Milk Tests In Local Press

Matter Came to a Head at Last Night's Meeting of the Board of Health—Nurses' Salaries Raised

GENERAL BUSINESS

The time-worn discussion on the advisability of publishing the milk test in the newspapers to spin on the milkmen to deliver milk of a higher standard came to a head last night at the meeting of the Board of Health when Mr. Stapleton, Sanitary Inspector presented his report of 28tests for July. These tests, while none were below standard, showed a wide difference, varying from 3 to 5. The lists will be published as they are made.

MATRONS SALARY RAISED

The salary of Miss Hattie Reid, matron of the Isolation Hospital will be raised from July 1st, $100 per annum. Miss Spiers the nurse at the hospital will receive an increase of $5 a month.

NEWSPAPERS UNSANITARY

Mr. Stapleton reported that newspapers are being used in wrapping bread by some dealers and thought the public should be warned this practice is unsanitary.

NO DELEGATE FOR CONGRESS

Dr. Amys presented a letter received from the Canadian Public Health Association asking for a delegate from Peterborough to attend the 6th Annual Congress. No delegate was appointed.

TESTING LABRATORY.

The Water Commissioners will be asked to hand over the key to the room in the city buildings which they have vacated, and a testing labratory installed. Necessary apparatus will be secured by the officials.

WILL KEEP PIG.

A communication from A. Blodgett, asking permission to keep a pig was read. Ald. Saunders and Ald. Duncan thought that in the present food crisis where room and proper conditions are available a man should be allowed this privilege.

GARBAGE COMPLAINTS.

The Sanitary Inspector reported a number of complaints in the failure of the garbage men to collect ashes and garbage. This may be explained in some cases by the fact the garbage is not out in time for collection.

Dependents Are Stranded in England

The London Chronicle publishes the following:

There are about 40,000 dependants of Canadian Soldiers stranded in this country at the present time—wives and children who either followed their menfolk aoross to be as near them as possible while they were on active service, or came over to see them in hospital after they had been wounded.

They are not stranded in the ordinary sense of the word, for no cases of want have been reported. But it seems impossible for the bulk of them to return to Canada now or for some time to come, owing to lack of passenger accommodation, and it is stated that even were the war to end soon fully eighteen months must elapse before tonnage could be spared to transport so large a body of people.

The position of some of these Canadian visitors is pathetic. There are many whose menfolk are actually back in Canada themselves, wounded and discharged from the army. Others have lost those whom they followed to this country, and are anxious to return to their homes and relatives. Recently the Admiralty have been able to find room for a few women and children on returning transports, and it is hoped to continue this assistance.

RAISE $100,000 FUND.

KINGSTON, Ont., Aug. 14.—The executive of Queen's University Summer School has a plan under consideration to raise endowment of $100,000 for the purpose of adding four more classes to the curriculum of the school, to make refund of $10 to each registered student, and so spend $1,00 annually in advertising, and to be able to divide $1,000 in railway refunds to students.

St. Alban's Third Annual Sunday School Picnic

More Than a Hundred Juvenile and Adult Members Took Part

More than a hundred juvenile and adult members of St. Albans' Mission, Brownton, spent a most enjoyable day on Civic Holiday at Mr. C. A. G. Spence's residence on Dunlop street, the occasion being the third annual Sunday School picnic. Swimming and bathing were indulged in, and an admirable programme of sports was run off in the afternoon under the direction of Mr. Whiteside, Superintendent of the Sunday School, when no less than forty-five prizes were competed for. The profits accruing from the candy and ice cream booth, which Mr. Burns provided for the occasion, were generously donated by him to the Sunday School Library, which is now being formed.

Press Comment On August Crop Report

"Farmer Has Done His Duty."

Wheeling Register: "The favourable report shows distinctly that the farmer has done his duty toward his country and that the wheat shortage—although it is not a real shortage, for it exceeds the yield of 1916, but is so called because it does not come up to early expectations based upon the acreage planted—was no fault of his."

"Government Can Proceed."

Indianapolis News: "With a fairly reliable crop estimate and the food bill now assured the government can proceed with the work of so distributing the supply of grains and potatoes as to make sure that no one shall suffer. It is easy to imagine what unrestricted speculation would soon lead to. There is no danger of this, but there is danger that the public will not grasp the full significance of the necessity of economy in the kitchen.'

"Nothing Short of a Disaster."

Springfield Republican: "A total yield of 653,000,000 bushels of wheat now forecast is but about 13,000,000 bushels more than last year's short crop, and it compares meagrely with the record wheat crop of 1,025,000,000 bushels in 1915. Before last year we had had no wheat harvest under 730,000,000 bushels since 1911. In view of the world's present demand for wheat this year's supply is nothing short of a disaster, and the food administration at Washington will have a difficult situation to meet in making the short crop go around."

"Shows What America Can Do."

New York Globe: "The crop report shows what America can do if put to it toward measuring up to the task of feeding the world. The orderly registration of ten million young men on June 5 was a most impressive demonstration of American power. The proceedings in connection with putting selective conscription into effect was further evidence to the same effect. But more impressive of sheer power is what has been done in the fields since the shortage of the winter wheat crop, reported in the spring gave alarm."

"Enough for Domestic Needs."

Norfolk Virginian-Pilot: "With proper conservation and avoidance of waste the food products of our farms this year should suffice to take care of domestic needs at comparatively reasonable prices and leave a comfortable surplus for export to meet the demands of our Allies on the other side of the Atlantic."

"Yielded Overwhelming Results."

Philadelphia Public Ledger: "Even an amateur with a small grasp on agricultural affairs cannot but have seen that much larger areas were under cultivation this year than ever before. So most of us have been prepared for the reports of bumper crops. In the face of stupendous figures there is no question that the early call to the nation to rise to its opportunity and mobilize its garden and farm resources and possibilities has yielded overwhelming results all along the line."

Only Guessed At Number Of Men Needed

There Was Uncertainty as to Number of Men Required For Farms When Appeal Made

TORONTO, Aug. 15.—"When we estimated that 10,000 men were needed to harvest the crop we were making a stab in the dark," said Mr. A. M. Miller, assistant secretary of the Ontario Organization of Resources Committee when asked if 10,000 men could be used on the farms if they were supplied.

There were applications in for 2,00 men three weeks ago, he said. "At that time the farmers did not believe that we could get the men and they were not counting on securing them. Dr. Creelman and Dr. Riddell, both members of the Resources Committee, estimated that we would need 10,000 men, but now the Department of Agriculture comes along and says we couldn't use them if we got them."

C. F. Bailey, Deputy Minister of Agriculture, said that although there might be need for 10,000 men, it was not likely that the number could be secured at the wages the farmers were willing to give.

"At the present time the farmers are doing pretty well," said Mr. Bailey, "and if the present effort to secure men that is being put forth by the local communities continues, the crops will be harvested all right."

PUSH GERMAN TROOPS ACROSS STEENBEKE RIVER

British Front in France and Belgium, Aug. 15.—British forces yesterday attacked the German positions on a small section of the Belgian front and pushed the German posts back across the Steenbeke River east of the Ypres-Thourout Railway. The British re-established their line on the eastern side of the river.

Dutch Paper Is Suspended

AMSTERDAM, Aug. 15—The Eindhoven Dagblad received notice on Friday from the military authorities that its publication would be forbidden from August 13 to August 20 inclusive, in consequence of the publication of a leading article entitled,, "How Long Yet" The notice says: "With an eye to the strict neutrality observed by Holland during the whole war, I consider it inadmissable to bestow on one belligerent party names, as is done by you in your journal on July 30."

The following is a translation of part of the incriminating article: "The executioner has done his work. News reached us at mid-day that a number of fishing-boats have again been sunk by the German navy. What will be the fate of the remaining 60 to 80 boats still out? How long yet shall the fighter for a free sea violate our rights and hamper us in our freedom? Hundreds of German children every week are charitably received by Holland and thus snatched from death by famine. As a reward the navy lets loose in impotent fury, on poor fisher folk. Is it not high time we should punish these scandalous and cowardly deeds and revenge ourselves even if it be not exactly with the sword? Thousands of war prisoners will shortly be brought to our territory to still further increase our poverty. Meanwhile we are robbed of the means of obtaining the principal food of the people. When will the Government proceed to make an end, once for all, to this violation of rights?"

While the Eindhoven Dagblad is thus deprived of freedom by Dutch military authorities the German submarine U-30 is liberated by the Dutch Government.

NIAGARA BABY FARMER, HAS SERVED ALMOST 8 YEARS

Mrs. Turner, who has served almost eight years in Portsmouth penitentiary, is to be liberated shortly, according to information received recently.

Mrs. Turner, it will be remembered, is the woman who was sent down from Niagara after being found guilty of having run a baby-farm at Niagara. One of the babies was thrown over the gorge and its lifeless body was found some time after in the branches of a tree at the bottom of the cliff. The crime attracted wide attention and after a sensational chase and trial, it was brought home to Mrs. Turner. Since her incarceration her conduct has been exemplary and she has a good record on the prison books.

LIEUT. FRED. HOBBS STARTS A PAPER

Son of Mr. C. E. Hubbs of This City Is Interned in Murren, Switzerland

The newspaper instinct breaks out wherever a member of the fraternity is to be found. It is said that Lieut. F. S. Hobbs, formerlp publisher of the Hastings (Ont.) Star, and at one time with the Examiner, has commenced the publication of a small magazine, called B. I. M., in Murren, Switzerland, where he is interned. At the outbreak of the war Lieut. Hobbs went overseas with the 4th C.M.R. Later, after taking a machine-gun course, he transferred to the 5th C.M.R. At the battle of Zillebeke, Lieut. Hobbs was seriously wounded in the leg and taken prisoner.

BILLIARD LICENSE HOLDERS PROTEST

Mr. d.. R. Knight appeared before the council in the interests of the local billiard license holders. It was felt by his clients that sufficient billiard licenses had been issued, as the present licensees found it difficult at times to keep their tables going. The main object, however, in appearing before the council, was to protest against granting a license to a Peterborouh party (Mr. Yeates) who intended installling quite a number of tables here.

Chairman Duck, of the Police Committee, was instructed to notify the Peterboro' party not to go on with his contemplated improvements as no license would be issued for more than two tables.—Lindsay Post.

Fishermen Are Asked To Assist In Food Supply

Special to The Examiner:

TORONTO, August 15. — Fifteen hundred licensed Ontario fishermen engaged in commercial fishing, will be asked to co-operate with Hon. W. J. Hanna, Food Controller, in a big scheme to urovide the people of Ontario with a constant supply of fresh water fish up to the consuming possibilities of Ontario's population. Furthermore, they will be requested to exercise unusual care in the preservation of Ontario fisheries as a nominal asset.

OBITUARY

MRS. L. V. O'CONNOR.

The many friends of Mrs. L. V. O'Connor were awe stricken when the sad information reached town to-day that she had passed away in the Toronto hospital this morning at 2 o'clock. The deceased had been in delicate health for some time and her demise, though sudden, was not wholly unexpected. She is survived by her husband and one little son less than a year old: also two sisters, Mrs. Ferguson and Mrs. Maguire, of Toronto.—Lindsay Watder.

Another Aviator Meets Death

Special to The Examiner:

Informal Answer To Peace Proposal

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Aug. 15.—We are fighting for one thing:—"Victory of democracy over aggression," declared Premier Lloyd George in an address to-day.

His utterance was regarded as especially significant in view of the peace proposals from the Pope.

The Premier was discussing the programme of the Labour party when reference to the aims of the Allies was made, but a reiteration of the Allied basis of victory at this time was greeted as the Government's informal answer to the Pope.

MY WORD

Bally Bad Taste to Air Their Differences—and in the Times, Too.

LONDON—London society is considerably interested in the break between Lord and Lady Dalmeny. In fact, it is more than interested; it is conventionally shocked.

Quarrels are bad enough, but the Dalmenys have done more than simply quarrel; they have gone so far as to air their differences in the advertising columns of the Times.

The trouble started with an insertion in the paper of an advertisement by Lord Dalmeny to the effect that he would no longer be responsible for debts contracted by his wife. Lady Dalmeny responded with an advertisement setting forth her debts in detail, an aggregate of $33.03.

"Since my marriage, in 1909, Dalmeny never made any payment on my account beyond a certain fixed personal allowance never exceeding $5,000 a year, and an allowance for household expenses never exceeding $5,000 a year."

Lady Dalmeny, who is a daughter of Lord Henry Grosvenor, was but 17 when she was married.

CENTS AND PENNIES.

Among the many reforms brought appreciably nearer by the war is the revision of the British coinage system. The old country coinage is admittedly the most complicated in the world, and as a consequence British trade in foreign countries has suffered by reason of the inability of other countries to master its intricacies.

A bill is being promoted to change all this. The Decimal association supported by the chamber of commerce, urge that the unit should be the florin instead of the soverign The florin would contain one hundred cents, and so the shilling would become a fifty-cent piece, and the six pence twenty-five cents. There would have to be a one-cent piece just a trifle less valuable than the present farthing.

The five-shilling piece would be swept away altogether. On the other hand, two new nickel coins are suggested. One of these would be a ten cent piece (equivalent to two-pence half-penny at present) the other a five-cent piece (equivalent to a penny-farthing).

Behind the suggestion is the closely allied one that the metric system of weights and measures should be introduced.

FOOD WASTE.

Hon. W. J. Hanna, Canadian Food Controller, calculates that food wasted in the garbage pails of Canada each year through carelessness and lack of kitchen economy amounts to $56,000,000 per year, or about $7.00 per head of population.

It does not pay to keep old hens in the flock at any time. An actual loss results from keeping them at present feed prices. All fowls over two years old, unless of special value for breeding, should be marketed.

HAD PLENTY OF TIME.

Mr. J. T. Walker, stated that he was a passenger on the Bobcaygeon train. It remained about six minutes at Burketon. He saw from twelve to fifteen persons in the lunch room, and heard the trainman call "all aboard" at the lunch room door. About a minute and one-half elapsed before the train began to move.

"When I heard the trainman call, I walked to the coach and got aboard. The others could easily have done as I did, had they moved when the call was given.'

AGENT'S STATEMENT.

H. Douglas, C.P.R. agent at Burketon, said he entered the arrival and departure of all trains. On the night of August 6th, passenger extra 2067 arrived at 9.55 p.m. and departed at 10.01. This was the special to Burketon. It remained about the usual time.

Witness first saw Aiken slip and fall on a piece of tin in the lunch room. He ran to the train and tried to get on the second coach. Four or five other men were getting on, Aiken ran east to the next coach.

"I saw him catch at the handles and I thought he got on, until I heard some one say he was on the ground."

OTHER WITNESSES.

Adam Sharp, Wilfred Sanderson, John P. Byers and James Currin, residents in the Burketon district saw Aiken miss the coach handles and fall beneath the wheels. Sanderson heard the official "all aboard" warning."

The jury had not returned a verdict at four o'clock.

THE JURY.

The jury is made up as follows: George Evans (foreman), R. Wilson, A. E. Fowler, R. Routley, W. D. Campbell, E. Reid, R. Sturgeon, E. V. Warne, O. Lech, W. H. Meredith, P. J. Scollard and J. Picard.

Score Of Bands At The "Big Fair"

Innes, the Bandman, to Head Unusually Good Musical Programme.

"Innes, the Band Man," who will head the musical programme this year at the Canadian National Exhibition, with his famous band of soloists, is an Englishman, a graudate of the London Conservatory of Music, and the Band of the Life Guards. Later he went to Paris, where he attracted the attention of the late Pat Gilmour, the greatest of all American leaders. He accompanied Gilmour to America, and has proved a worthy successor to the old master. Innes' band was acclaimed the finest of the many fine bands heard at the Panama Pacific Exposition. He it was, also, who planned and carried to success the remarkable series of festivals which made the Alaska Yukon Exposition notable among all other exhibitions for its musical programmes. Innes will give two free concerts daily, and, in addition, there will be concerts by a score of other bands day and night.

JOSH DEVORE, MILKMAN

Old Giant Ball Player Rushing the Cans on a Milk Route.

Josh Devore, at one time a near idol at the Polo Grounds, when a member of the Giants' team and cavorting about in right field, has at last given up the game and is now running a milk route in Chillicothe, Ohio.

While playing the national game Josh was a charmer for world's series money, getting into the cash division twice with the Giants and once with the Bostons. Never a great player, he was, however, a favourite with the bleacher contingent and had a warm corner in the hearts of most of them.

Devore knew enough to save some of his money and has now invested in a ready-made milk business, serving the lacteal fluid to his customers without too much water in it, in order to hold trade and provide the wherewithal which will come to him no longer from the world's series gate.

Weekly Report On Farm Conditions

Most of the Fall Wheat is in the Barn—Apples Will Be a Poor Crop

Most tof tre fall wheat has been cut and housed, but some is yet in the shook. In yield per acre it will be about an average crop, although the returns pe racre vary greatly even in the same localities. The total acreage, of course, as previously explained, is smaller than usual.

Spring wheat will be above its average in yield and in the length of straw, with probably an increased acreage as well.

Rye has a similar record to that of fall wheat.

Barley never showed to better advantage, taking quantity and quality of both grain and straw into consideration. A fair portion of the crop already has been harvested.

Oat fields, as a rule, have been a revelation of growth. Some of the yields reported run as high as 70 and 80 bushels to the acre, while 50 and 60 are common. The straw is of unusual length, but only a little rust is so far reported. The heads as a rule are well filled, but occasional complaints of smut are made. The only fear expressed regarding oats is the possibility of rains "lodging" the crop before cutting, owing to the rather rank growth of straw. Cuting has begunn in some quarters.

Peas are a most promising crop at present appearance.

Reports regarding beans run all the way from poor to promising.

Hay has turned out to be an excellent crop being well above the average in yield ,and most of the cut being of good quality. Coils may yet be seen in some fields, the grain crops having overtaken the mower.

Apples ,which did not set heavily, dropped considerably during the summer, and will be a poor yield generally. Pears and plums have done somewhat better. Peaches will be fair, relatively. Raspberry growers did well this year where pickers were available.

Live Stock —All classes of live stock are reported to be in good health. Very few sales, generally speaking, are being made. Good draft horses ar bringing from $175 to $200; gneral purpose from $125 to $180. In Grey County nine carloads of cattle, chiefly butchers' animals, left a local station one day last week. At a sale in Halton County grade Holstein cows sold as high as $153. Milk production is decreasing owing to the grass failing, but the flow is yet well up to the average for the time of year.

Labour.— With harvesting about half through, a keen demand for farm labourers is still on. During the past week there has been an improved response from the towns and cities to calls from the farm. Fortunately good harvest weather has helped in the clearing off of the ripening crops. Farmers are exchanging work more largely than ever, and their wives and daughters are helping with the rush in the fields. More milking machines are being installed in the dairy districts, and larger field implements are being purchased. Regarding the use of improved machinery, one representative stated that he is "snowed under" by requests for the use of the tractor to get the land ready for the new fall wheat.

The Government Can Stave Off An Election For Several Months

Officially Parliament Dies Oct. 7, But Technically They Can Continue—Financial Year Expires in March—After Then Government Must Seek Gov.-Gen.'s Consent For Financial Aid.

A DIFFICULT PROBLEM

OTTAWA, August 16.—How long can the present Government carry on? That is a question which is being discussed by constitutionalists and near-constitutionalists in the corridors of Parliament. No doubt the Government has already solved the question to its own satisfaction.

The legal term of the twelfth Parliament of Canada expires on October 7 next. At midnight on that date, if legislators are sitting, then "bauble" must be removed from the table. The members must take their hats and depart. There is no longer a Parliament or representatives of the people. They have died a natural death. It is provided that a greater period than twelve months shall not elapse between one session of Parliament and another. In other words, after the expiry of the Parliament, provision must be made within twelve months for the formation and assembling of another.

Could Still Carry On.

This of course presumes an election within the interval. After the expiry of the present session of Parliament, the present Government could technically carry on for a time only limited by the time necessary to hold an election and call a Parliament within twelve months from October 7 next. Thirty days' notice must be given of nomination day. Under the new Soldiers' Franchise Act, a month is to elapse between nomination day and polling day. That makes two months.

Technically therefore the Government could carry on until about August of next year. The Administration remains the Administration until a new Government is formed and new advisors of the Crown selected. But the Administration cannot carry on without money. And the financial year of the Dominion expires on March 1, 1918. After that there are no funds to carry on the business of government, and recourse must be had to Governor-General's warrant. These are naturally granted, excepting for salaries, etc., and for matters of emergency. In other words, the Government finds itself stoney broke at the end of March and must depend upon the charity of the Governor-General for pocket money. That is all it can get. It can't get money for capital expenditures or for war.

Difficult To Tell.

It is, of course, difficult to say to what lengths a Government can go under the provisions of the War Measures Act. The terms of that measure are very wide. The Governor-in-Council may do almost anything which in his mind appears necessary for the well-being, peace and harmony of the nation.

He might decide that Governor-General warrants would be issued to any extent. He might even decide that loans for war could be floated. But it is very doubtful whether such loans would meet with any degree of success. It is doubtful if anyone would take the bonds. For they would not be backed by Parliament, which, after all, is the people. In fact, the situation might arise of a new Parliament even refusing to sanction Governor-Generals' warrants if issuel in too great profusion.

The situation appears to boil itself down to this. There must be a new Parliament to vote money by April next. Next months are required for holding of election. It would, therefore, appear that the situation and the issuance of election writs must come not later than January next, and even that is cutting the time fairly short.

The Tupper Government in 1896 made a record. The House prorogued in the midst of business and without money being voted on April 28. Parliament dissolved on April 24, just one day before the expiry of its term. But the election was not held until June, and Parliament did not meet again until August. Employees of departments, however, went two months without salary.

A tennis racquet frame that can be converted into a camp stool has been invented.

Soldier Gowdy A Wild Pitcher

"Hank" Gowdy, former star catcher with the Boston Nationals, is convinced that he never will shine as a pitcher.

Gowdy, who sacrificed a salary of $8,000 to enlist in the Ohio national guard, tried his skill as a pitcher in a recent game between soldier teams from the military camp. One of his fast ones struck Capt. Van Gieson, an opposing batter, on the wrist, breaking a small blood vessel.

Another fast one, which the catcher failed to stop, hit a mascot dog in the head, killing it instantly.

"I'm through," Gowdy said, "if I keep on pitching I might kill off the entire command."

Grain Markets Continue Quiet

There Appears To Be No Wheat Available—The Cattle Market

Grain markets continue quiet, with cash prices practically unchanged, but no business doing for the reason that there appears to be no wheat available. In the option market trading is almost entirely eliminated, while the Chicago board has already taken action with a view to discontinuing transactions in wheat for future deliveries entirely after August 25. It is probable other grain boards will take similar action, the idea being to co-operate with the Food Commissioners in preventing speculaion and gambling in foodstuffs.

To Quickly Remove Ugly Hairs From Face

(Beauty Notes)

Beauty-destroying hairs are soon banished from the skin with the aid of a delatone paste, made by mixing some water with a little plain powdered delatone. This is spread upon the hairy surface for 2 or 3 minutes, then rubbed off and the skin washed to remove the remaining delatone. This simple treatment banishes every trace of hair and leaves the skin without a blemish. Caution should be used to be certain that it is delatone you buy.

Final Meeting Of Trewern Patrons

Factory Was Destroyed by a Boiler Explosion Some Weeks Ago

At the final meeting of the Trewern patrons, held on Tuesday evening, Aug. 14, Mr. G. W. Mann was appointed chairman. After making some remarks about the sadness of the meeting on account of the sad demise of Mr. Chittick, the following report was read:

The total amount of money received for April and May cheese, $5,641.88. For June cheese, incluring interest on deposits, $4,430.49.

Vote of Thanks.

Moved by Mr. T. T. Milburn, seconded by Mr. J. C. McConkey, that a vote of thanks be tendered Mr Rush for the prompt and thorough settlement he gave the patrons of the Trewern fatcory.

Moved by Mr. H. Stubbs, seconded by Mr. Clare Chittick, that Mr. G. A. Cillespie be tendered a vote of thanks for his kindness in handling the damaged cheese and forwarding the money to the secretary.

Moved by Mr J. R. Darling, seconded by Mr. W. A. Rosborough, that a vote of thanks be tendered Mr. Fowler for the use of his building for storing cheese.

Moved by Mr. A. B. Mann, seconded by Mr. S. Adams, that a vote of thanks be tendered Mrs. Chittick for the thorough and capable manner in which she performed the secretary work of the factory.

Moved by Mr. H. McConkey, seconded by Mr. T. Milburn, that a hearty vote of thanks be given Mr. G. W. Mann, the worthy salesman and treasurer of Trewern factory for the past ten years.

The meeting then adjourned.

"MOUNTAIN MADNESS"

By Anna Alice Chapin

"I didn't know the Lord ever made anyone with hair that colour," said Polly, calmly. "I thought they had to do it themselves. I know I'd be willing to! Look at my hair!"

She pulled forward a ruffled dark stress, and glowered at it; then she turned her splendid eyes upon Enid's.

They stared at each other in a rather hostile fashion for almost a minute; then, suddenly, they both laughed, and so became friends.

The law of equation is a queer thing; hard men married to saccharine wives find their outlook broadening and softening in proportion as the ladies become more and more restricted and adamantine in their ideas. Because the society girl and Polly of Four Trail Crossing were so unlike, an uncanny sympathy sprang up between them. The men in whom they were interested figured largely of course, — men always do, — but, to their mutual astonishment, the girls themselves liked each other, independently of any male element.

"You're the loveliest thing I ever saw in all my life!" Enid said to Polly, with an honesty that robbed the remark of insolence.

Polly laughed outright at that, and showed her white teeth.

"So are you!" she cried.

Then they laughed together, and all at once some mask which each of them had felt bound to wear dropped, and they stared at each other, with the laughter, warm and sympathetic, on their lips.

"Listen to me!" said Enid impetuously, throwing aside the brush. She looked like an adorable little girl when her hair was down. "He—Mr. Hale—said something just now about —trouble. Is he—are any of you in trouble, truly?"

Polly hesitated, but the other girl's golden eyes were so clear and candid that she made an impulsive movement nearer her.

"You know," Enid went on eagerly. "I do want to help—somehow—if I can!"

Polly hardly knew how to answer her; how to put the situation. She did not express herself readily anyway, she had few woman-friends, and training of years had made her secretive concerning mountain matters. But something sweet and sincere and girlish in this "young lady from the valley" broke down a great barried in a very speedy fashion, and, answering Enid's quick, sympathetic outreaching of hands but putting hers into them, she said, rather huskily:

"We're all in bad,—Dad, and—and Mart,—and the bunch. The others—the rest of our folks have gotten a heap more daring lately—more rotten, Dad and Mart say; and—You won't tell?"

"Tell!" Enid's voice rang with a fiery scorn. She flung her arm about the other's shoulder. "Go on—please!"

With her face hidden, and speaking almost as though it were against her will yet pressing closer to that slender protecting arm, Polly tried to explain:

"There are a lot of things that Dad and Mart won't do. They—they're not strong for the law, either of 'em, but they believe in fair play and decency. But some of the others get—sort of crazy; and they—we all have to stand together. See?"

In truth, Enid was beginning to see.

"You mean," she said slowly, "that your father and Martin Hale have to stick to this gang they are in with even when things are done that they don't approve of, and wouldn't do themselves?"

Polly nodded.

"It's pretty hard on them," she said. "They can't give any of the lot away, but——"

"But," interrupted Enid vehemently, "why don't they break away from them? They can do that, surely!"

Polly looked at her, smiled quietly, and shook her dark head.

"I reckon you all don't know much about the mountains," she said. "Tisn't healthy to back out once you're in—not among us it isn't!"

"They're not afraid!" Enid startled as if stung.

And over Polly's warm brown face spread a deep flush of resentment and pride in one.

"I reckon there's not much this side of hell they're afraid of, either of 'em!" she said, withdrawing. "But—there's someone in the Valley that has hold on 'em. I don't rightly know who it is, but they can't afford to get into trouble either way, because he could get back at 'em too hard."

"But even so," broke Enid hotly, from the depths of her inexperience, "they're men, and can face it! There is no real reason——"

"There's—me," said Polly.

The resentment had died out of her voice and face. She stood before Enid a little limply, strangely humble in her admission of being, in some psychological fashion, a burden. She seemed almost to have shrunk in physical stature in a single moment.

Enid stared at her, realizing the situation which demanded the "false truth" of males for the protection of the women they loved best. Then she held out her arms, with her face breaking into lovable, beautiful little lines of understanding and sympathy.

"Oh, you poor darling!" she murmured, and her voice shook.

Polly went into her arms without a word.

Somehow, without many words, things got cleared up and explained in a marvelous fashion then. With Enid's bright gold hair falling over Polly's dark head, with their two voices mixing and sobbing and breaking off, the thing became extraordinarily plain, without any accurate exposition of the facts in the case. Words are, after all, the least useful of all means of human expression.

As it turned out from Polly's eloquent, if incoherent, whispers and her still more eloquent hesitation, it was not that any individual of the 'gang' had designs upon her. It was only that Polly had learned a simple, rather terrible truth that in the wild places of the world a woman is always a factor tremendous for good or evil—usually the latter.

"Are any of them in love with you then?" asked Enid—adding quickly, "I mean——"

She stopped, but Polly flushed as though she interpreted what she did not say.

"Tisn't that," she said, very low. "But Dad says—when men like that are round he'd sooner lock me up than the toll-takings."

She dropped, shamed and serious, in saying this. But Enid, looking at her, experienced an odd sensation. She found it difficult to analyze it at first, and it appalled her when she realized with a shock that she almost envied Polly she was so much desired.

CHAPTER VI
ENID OF THE GOLDEN EYES

. . . One whose tedious toil
Had watched for years in forlorn hermitage,
Who had not from mid-life to utmost age
Eased in one accent his o'er-burdened soul,
Even to the trees. . . . .
—John Keats.

Martin Hale and old Mason smoked in the living-room of the Toll-gate House. The winds that were never still at the Crossing talked insistently at the doors and windows—interpolating, interrupting, interpreting as winds will. The younger man was restless, more than once he rose from his seat by the fire and went to stare out into the cloudy dusk; more than once he glanced at the closed door of Polly's room behind which the two girls still talked inaudibly.

The older man was thinking of the past, the younger of the future,—no! Not of the future. It was the present that Martin Hale thought of.

. . . And oddly enough, the thoughts of both of them centered on Enid, the lovely little lady from the Valley. To the Toll Keeper she stood symbolic of all that he had once had—and lost.

Polly's mother had been a shy, silent creature of the hills; it was not of her that he was thinking. She had been beautiful in a wildwood style, but neither clever nor of vivid personalities. Polly had inherited her physical loveliness but little else. It was Richard Mason's own keen mind and vibrant vitality which made the girl so splendidly appaling and alive. Mason soured and embittered by early wrongs, had turned savagely to the opposites of everything which before had gone to make up life for him. A man of violent extremes in all things, he plunged into primitive existence as fiercely, as whole-heartedly as, in his first youth, he had plunged into the subtler atmosphere of civilization. He was determined that the future should be as widely different as possible from the past.

Because he had been in his day something of an exquisite in a wholesome way, he took a perverse pleasure in adopting the rough clothes and rougher manners of the mountaineers, because he had once been impulsive and gregarious, he now elected to live almost entirely alone, consorting only with men as habitually unsocial as himself. Because the girl he had loved had been the quintessence of daintiness and breeding, a charming, polished young creature who was the veritable flower of his Great World, he chose for his wife the inarticulate, shy woman of the hills who was Polly's mother.

And as he sat there smoking he was thinking of that other girl. She was smiling at him across a great gulf of years, but even from so great a distance the smile came beautifully familiar. It was a smile which was an old friend. . . .

Martin Hale took another restless turn up and down the room, he had let his pipe go out. The Toll Keeper watched him without seeming to do so for a space, at last he laid his pipe down on the arm of his chair and spoke in the quiet way that never jars upon the most ragged nerves nor the most capricious moods:

"Funny, isn't it, how all at once a little thing'll set you all off your track?"

Hale started and stood in his uneasy pacing. The older man continued meditatively, as though to himself.

"There's me, for instance. Live shut up in these hills—funny thing to say 'shut up' in the hills, eh, boy? But I reckon you could feel shut up in God Almighty's house of mansions if you weren't—well, let's say acclimated some! But anyhow I've been here, rooted at Four Trail Crossing for a quarter of a century and never a qjlt in all that time to get me out of the rut that was leading straight to the grave.

He paused, picked up the pipe and puffed.

"Well?" said Martin Hale, rather gruffly.

"Eh?" Mason had apparently forgotten what he had been speaking of.

"What has—jolted you?"

"That little girl there." The Toll Keeper jerked his head sideways towards the closed door.

"You mean, Miss——"

"Yes, her. She's like a little piece out of my young days come to life after all this time—after all this time!"

He gazed into the fire with the veil of dreams showing before his face.

"She's very beautiful," said the young man, and it seemed as though he spoke with difficulty.

"Eh? Oh, yes—beautiful. She's more than that. She's just all the sweetness and the foolishness and the lovingness and the unreasonableness of girls tied up in one dear little woman. Our Polly's worth ten of her, I reckon, but that yellow-haired lassie is going to make more trouble and more joy than ever Polly will. . . I loved a girl once that was the copy of her. The same gold hair and gold eyes and the same pretty way with her that said: 'Do it for me because no one can have so much right to it as I, and it's mighty nice of me to let you do it!' Yes, just such another."

Old Mason laughed rather tenderly. Hale and he were not of the kind given to exchanging confidence, but in a moment the young man said bluntly, yet without impertinence.

"What happened?"

"Happened? Oh, my best friend lied about me and kicked me out of her running. That's why I came up here to the hills. I married Polly's mother, and—and—I've never seen the Valley since—I've even stopped thinking of it much until—until tonight. That girl set me—thinking—"

"And the other girl—the one you loved—married the other chap, I suppose?"

The old man's face hardened grimly.

"No. That she didn't. She married, but not him. I've yet my score to settle with him. I don't know where she is now. But after all these years she seems to-night to stand almost at my elbow. An old fool I am, to be sure!"

The door of Polly's room opened quickly and Enid Forsythe came out. Her face was pale and eager; her golden eyes burned like stars.

THOUGHT CHILD WAS DYING

"Cholera Infantum"

DR. FOWLER'S

Extract of Wild Strawberry

Cured Her

Mothers should look well after their children during the hot summer months, as this is the time of the year this trouble is most prevalent. It begins with a profuse diarrhoea, the stomach becomes irritated, vomiting and purging set in, and the child rapidly loses flesh, and becomes weak, prostrated and languid.

Mrs. B. A. Cirwell, Rossway, N.S., writes: "I can recommend, most highly, Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry. A friend of mine whose little daughter was ill with cholera infantum was given up by the doctors. The little one's mother asked me to come in and see the child. I told her I had a bottle of Dr. Fowler's" and asked her if she would try it. When the bottle was half used the child was well. This cure was a miraculous one, for I thought the child was dying at the time."

There is nothing can take the place of Dr. Fowler's.

There is nothing just as good.

Do not accept a substitute, and thus endanger your life.

ASHAMED OF THE PIMPLES

PIMPLES and skin eruptions always seem to come where they are the most noticeable, and consequently most embarrassing to the person so unfortunate as to have them.

The most satisfactory treatment for pimples and skin eruptions is Dr. Chase's Ointment, applied at night after bathing the skin in warm water. Instead of clogging the pores, as do powders, Dr. Chase's Ointment cleanses them and promotes the healthy action of the pores of the skin.

By its antiseptic action this ointment destroys poisonous germs, and thereby prevents the development of eczema. There are scores of ways in which Dr. Chase's Ointment is useful in every home.

PIMPLES AND BLACKHEADS.

Miss Carrie Altwater, Bittern Lake, Alta., writes:—"I was entirely cured of pimples and blackheads some months ago by using Dr. Chase's Ointment. As I have also found this ointment a splendid treatment for sunburn and chapped hands, I would not be without it in the house. It is the best I ever used."

HARVESTERS! LOOK!

36,000 farm labourers are wanted in the Provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, for the harvesting of the crop.

The Canadian Northern Railway will operate the first excursion trains for the West, leaving Toronto Union Depot at 9 a.m. and 10 p.m. August 21st, and 10 p.m. August 30th, and running through solid to Winnipeg.

The equipment will consist of electric lighted colonist cars, lunch counter cars, and, in addition, the railway will continue their last year's innovation of keeping a special car for the accommodation of single women and families, and of placing it in the train where the occupants will be separated from the other passengers.

The territory served by the Canadian Northern Lines offers the widest choice of employment with high wages, but regardless of where you may locate, remember we give the best service to Winnipeg, where you will re-purchase to final destination, no matter on what Line it may be.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A Romance of Moosehead Lake

By F. A. MITCHEL

Moosehead lake is situated in the northern part of Maine. The other Maine lakes farther south have for some time been overrun with city people during the summer season, but Moosehead, being farther away, still retains much of its wildness.

There once lived a trapper on Moosehead lake, a widower with a daughter who was his housekeeper and companion. Gertrude Fleming was the only comfort of the old man's life She grew up in the wilderness, but her mother was a refined woman and had kept her child from that uncouthness common among backwoods people. Her father was aware that some young man might pass that way and pluck his wild flower, leaving him in solitude.

Gertrude occasionally accompanied her father in his hunting and trapping expeditions She would take a gun with her, and several of the heads of animals that decorated their cabin had been brought down by her. Besides she was more fond of the lake than the wilderness and in her canoe would ride its waves like a duck. She dressed much like an Indian girl—that is, in gaudy colors, with her hair hanging down her back.

Arthur Brewer, a New York boy, was one of the first city men to discover the hunting grounds adjacent to Moosehead lake. He was a handsome youngster and a thorough sportsman One October day—he always took his outings in the hunting season—he was standing on one of the arms of the lake wishing for some way to get across when a vision of loveliness shot out from beyond a point of land. It was Gertrude Fleming in her canoe About her shoulders and fastened under her chin was a many colored blanket, a circlet of wampum bound her temples and held the feather of a bird she had shot herself, while the arms that swung the paddle were adorned with bracelets made from the antlers of a beast of the forest.

"Hello!"

The girl stopped paddling and looked about her.

"Will you put me across here?"

Without a word Gertrude recommenced to paddle, turning her course toward the man on the shore. On reaching it their eyes met, the man's expressing admiration for this human feminine contrast with the desolate region, the girl unconsciously revealing through her eyes that she had been suddenly caught by the engaging smile with which she was greeted.

Brewer got into the canoe, and Gertrude pulled him across to the spot he wished to reach. She told him that she lived near by and that her father had gone into the woods for skins. Brewer had put up a tent at the point on which they landed, and there he made his headquarters, though he frequently slept in the open. He had game in his larder, but no vegetables. Gertrude cultivated a little kitchen garden and had left from her summer stores carrots, potatoes and other vegetables designed for winter use. She offered to supply him if he would come for them.

There was a great difference between this daughter of the forest and the young girls to whom Brewer had been accustomed. Perhaps it was this difference, this novelty, that aroused his interest. There is no doubt that the picturesqueness, the unity of a single woman in a wilderness, contributed to his enslavement. At any rate, he realized at once that his passion was irresistible. Possibly similar causes affected Gertrude. They met near the beginning of the day, and at its end each was conscious of the unbreakable bond that had suddenly united them.

When Fleming returned that evening he saw by the flush in his daughter's cheek that he had lost her. His only expression of the pain the discovery gave him was a suppressed groan.

At Fleming's invitation Brewer took his meals for the remainder of his outing in the cabin. There was no effort made to conceal the situation. All recognized, though mutely, that two kindred spirits had met. Before Brewer's return to the city he asked Gertrude if she would go with him.

His words produced a sudden realization of the fact that she stood between a love on the one hand and her father and the life to which she had been reared and loved on the other. She gave no answer. Brewer did not urge her. He waited till it was time for him to go, then said:

"Will you come with me?"

Gertrude was standing between her lover and her father. The latter spoke no word. She looked first at her lover, then at her father. Suddenly she came to her choice. Running to her father, she threw herself into his arms.

Brewer, who had taken up his belongings, threw them on the ground.

"If you will not go with me," he said, "I will stay with you."

Brewer and his wife lived in the cabin with Fleming till the latter died; then the couple made a trip to New York. Brewer's father, who had disinherited him on account of his marriage, relented and furnished the funds for a comfortable residence that his son built on the site of the cabin.

The couple usually spend their winters in the city and the summers in their country home. But it was not till after the hunting season that they left the lake and the woods.

TALE OF THE TURTLE.

Where This Stupid Animal Poses as a Student of Astronomy.

For an animal that is rated so low in the scale of intelligence as the turtle it is really amazing to note the keen sense of intuition they display.

There is a tradition among the natives of Venezuela that turtles will not begin to lay their eggs until the Southern Cross, which is the characteristic object of the firmament in the southern hemisphere, is completely formed—that is, not until the four stars which form the cross have moved on through the heavens and have reached a position perpendicular to the horizon.

It is even reported by a member of one exploring expedition in Venezuela that at midnight, when the turtles were being watched by the naturalists, the great mass of creatures went back into the waters without laying, leaving but a few of their companions behind them to act as sentinels.

At half past 2 in the morning, at the moment when the Southern Cross seemed exactly perpendicular to the horizon, a great motion was perceived on the shore of the river, and the turtles came out in battalions. They scattered rapidly in all directions, dug holes in the sand, deposited their eggs and then covered up the places, taking great pains to leave the surface smooth and flat as they had found it.—Argonaut.

Saved Himself.

As to the most embarrassing moment in his life, U. R. Treat related it to the club in this way:

"I had taken Gladys Harcourt to a swell cafe after the opera, and as we were both hungry I ordered without stint, while the score mounted up. When the check fell beside my plate I was astounded on discovery that I had lost my purse, doubtless at the hands of a pickpocket. The assiduous and expectant waiter stood by. I was a stranger in this city, and of course knew no one in the restaurant. Already the waiter was beckoning to some one, perhaps an officer. I was sure to be arrested. Gladys, unaware of my dilemma, was drawing on her gloves. A great clock boomed the hour. I was saved, for at the twelfth stroke I awoke."

The Egg and the Shell.

Eggshells are made chiefly of carbonate of lime, and the yolk is half water, half oil and albumen, while the white of an egg, as it is called, consists of water chiefly with albumen and a little phosphorus and sulphur. The yolk always floats at the top of the white, so to be as near as possible to the hen when she sits upon it to hatch it, while two cords attached to the yolk, one at each end, prevent it from actually touching the shell.

The Allegory.

A fine illustration of the allegory may be seen in Paul's epistle to the Galatians iv, 14, where the apostle gives an allegorical interpretation to the historical narration of Hagar and Sarah, drawing from it a deeper sense than is conveyed by the immediate representation.

Transferred.

"I hope you liked the pie, Henry," ventured a young wife, casting an anxious glance at her husband soon after dinner. "I bestowed great pains on the crust."

"I thought you did, my dear," he said, "for I've got the pains now."

Matched.

Towne—Met Gabbie and Perkins at a smoker last night and introduced them to each other. Browne—Oh, say, it's a shame to introduce a bore like Gabbie to anybody. Towne—It's evident you don't know Perkins or you'd see the humor of it.

Patriotic.

Warden—Have you ever been in any European jail? Prisoner—No! My motto has been to see America first.—Star of Hope.

Slow Game.

Madge—Was George fooling while you were playing golf? Marjorie—Gracious, I hope not! Why, I accepted him.

Snapping Down the Rugs.

The press button system with which we are familiar in gloves and garments has been applied by a European inventor for fixing carpets, tapestry hangings and the like, says the Scientific American. For instance, a small spring socket is inserted flush with the floor, and the carpet carries a corresponding projection, so that all that is needed to lay a carpet or rug is to push the buttons into the sockets.

Again, the projections are mounted along a stout tape band and the sockets on another, quite like the usual pressure button. One tape is sewed to the rug, and another can be tacked down upon an already laid carpet, so that the rug can be laid or removed instantly.

Hangings can be put on the walls in the same way. Curtains or portieres can also be mounted, and all such material can be at once removed for cleaning. In case of fire valuable hangings can be saved.

IT'S COMING

EXAMINER AND MERCHANTS

Great DOLLAR DAY
MONEY SAVING EVENT
Will soon be here

GRATIFIED by the enthusiasm of the people over the previous Dollar Days in Peterboro, and urged by the people from outside who were unable to attend the last one owing to bad roads, the Examiner is again co-operating with the Merchants in featuring a Mid-summer Dollar Day.

WEDNESDAY, AUG. 22

The date selected should be the most suitable of all the summer season, for a record crowd to attend from outside points. There's everything to come for, and only regrets if you don't. There's a company of hustling merchants preparing a feast unequalled in the history of the city. In any line of goods you want, you will find your Dollar has a buying power you would have thought impossible. As Dollar Day selling is just for one day, the merchants in order to add zest to the excitement, make their offerings look reckless, but it is because they have entered into the spirit of the thing, and they are bound to do their part at considerable loss.

Estimate the NUMBER of these Blanks that will be filled in and Dropped into the Ballot Box at the Examiner Office by 7 p. m. on DOLLAR DAY.

As a guide in estimating the probable number of blanks that will be used, the three previous Dollar Day results may be studied. On the first one, March 12, 1914, with good weather and roads, there were 16,000 blanks dropped into the box at the Examiner Office. On the next Dollar Day, in 1915, with bad weather and impassable roads, the result showed only 10,807 estimate blanks put in the box. On the last summer Dollar Day, held in August, 1916, when holiday season affected the crowd, there were 7,054 blanks dropped in the box. With these figures as a guide an intelligent estimate can be made if the weather and season are taken into consideration.

The Dollar Day crowd is the happiest gathering that meets in Peterboro in the year.

You can recognize all the stores where Dollar Specials are being given by the Red Lettered Pennants in the windows.

RAILWAY RATES Parties of Ten coming from any one point to Peterboro on Wednesday, August 22nd, Dollar Day, can secure a rate of FARE and ONE-THIRD by making application to the Local Agent.

Of course, you can buy cheaper teas, but
"SALADA"
is undoubtedly the most economical and what appears to be 'cheap' in price will prove to be extravagant in use. The fresh young leaves of "Salada" will yield you generous value for your money. B 115

HAVELOCK MAN BROKE A BONE IN HIS NECK

Mr. George Buchanan Fell From a Ladder while Painting His House —Death Occurred on Saturday—Havelock News

HAVELOCK, Aug. 15.—The death occurred on Saturday in Toronto hospital, of Mr. George Buchanan, Sr., of Havelock, following an operation. Some few weeks ago Mr. Buchanan, while painting his home, fell from the ladder, dislocating his shoulder, it was thought but after untold suffering, a thorough examination was made by Dr. Holdcroft, and it was discovered that a bone in the neck had been broken, and he advised Mr. Buchanan to go to Toronto, where an operation was performed, on Thursday. The patient came through all right, but on Saturday passed away. The news came as a great shock to the citizens of Havelock, as no one thought his injuries were so serious. Deceased had been a resident of Havelock for many years, having spent most of his life as Conductor on the C. P. R.. He retired some years ago and moved to Trent Bridge, where he lived until this summer, when he again decided to come back to Havelock, where he had purchased a home. The remains were brought to Havelock by C. P. R. local, Monday, the funeral taking place from his residence on Tuesday Services were held at the house at 2.30 o'clock in the afternoon conducted by Rev. Adams of the Methodist Church. and from thence to the Maple Grove cemetery for burial.

FEEDING THE MEN AT THE FRONT

Canada and the United States must cut down their normal wheat consumption by 160,000,000 bushels to meet the needs of Great Britain and the Allies. Hon. W. J. Hanna, Canadian Food Controller, estimates that to feed Great Britain, France, and the other Allies, and the men at the front, will require 1,105,000,000 bushels of wheat. This means at least 460,000,000 will have to be imported from Canada and the United States. There will be under normal consumption in these two countries only 300,000,000 bushels surplus for export, and so by special efforts of food conservation the people of the United States and Canada will have to make up a shortage of 160,000,000 bushels.

HASTINGS YOUTH HAD NARROW ESCAPE

Was Thrown Out of a Vehicle and Rendered Unconscious—He Will Recover

HASTINGS, Aug. 15.—Master Wilbert Simpson had a narrow escape last week when, in a runaway accident, he was thrown out of the vehicle and sustained a severe blow over the eye, rendering him unconscious for some time. He was rushed to the doctor's office, where the injury was attended to and the little fellow was taken to his home. He is recovering.

One day during the week the water tank in Mr. Charlie Plant's grounds became filled to overflowing, causing the scuffold on which it rested to give way, allowing the tank to tip over. Fortunately no one was in the immediate vicinity and a serious accident thereby averted. Mr. Plant's repairs will, however, be of a costly nature.

The I.O.D.E. met on Friday afternoon and discussed new items of interest.

Another aged resident has passed away in the person of Mrs. Lowry, mother of Mr. Ed. Lowry, of Hastings. Deceased had reached the advanced age of 87 years and was in her general good health up to the evening of her death. The funeral was held from her late residence on Tuesday morning, where a short service was held prior to the removal of the remains to G.T.R. station, whence they were taken to Moira for burial. The bereaved family have the sympathy of all their acquaintances.

We regret to report serious illness in the case of Mrs. Miller, senior.

BAD STORM AT KINMOUNT

Residence Struck by Lightning—News of Interest

KINMOUNT, Aug. 15.— Kinmount was visited last week by a most severe storm, wind, thunder, lightning, rain and hail. It lasted about three hours. During the storm the lightning entered the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Molyneaux by the chimney, tearing the side out of the chimney and entering a bedroom upstairs, doing considerable damage, then tore a hole in the ceiling and proceeded through the parlour and out at the front screen door, which it shattered. Mrs. Molyneaux was alone in the house and received a bad shock being for some time unable to held herself or to get some one to go for her husband. The lightning splintered a post enclosing the garden of Mr. Frank Crowe and struck a rock near the home of Mr. Kerr, where it split like a ball of fire. The main street was badly flooded and a washout about eight feet deep was caused on McKinley's hill. The spring creek which passes through the village, overflowed its banks and washed away everything before it. The water caused by the rain was running in torrents everywhere.

Personals.

Mr. Hopkins, senior, who has been ill of pneumonia, is recovering.

Mr. Roy Hopkins of Toronto, was home over the week end visiting his family.

Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Molyneaux and family from Toronto, came to spend the week end with their friends here.

COLD STORAGE FOOD STOCKS ACCUMULATE

Another O'Connor Report Shows Big Increase in Quantities of Butter, Eggs, Cheese and Beef Held in Cold Storage --Canada's Middlemen Have Over 156 Million Eggs in Their Warehouses.

FOODSTUFFS ON HAND

OTTAWA, August 16.—While Food Controller Hanna is proclaiming meatless and baconless days because of food scarcity, while a special Commission is investigating the huge profits of the packers' trust, and while prices for meats and dairy products handled by the cold-storage firms remain at top notch even in the normally low cost of living period of the year, accumulation of butter, eggs, cheese and meats by the cold-storage firms goes on apace.

Some significant figures were made public yesterday by Mr. W. F. O'Connor, Acting Commissioner on the cost of living. In his monthly statement as to the quantity of food held in cold-storage on August 1st, he says: "There is evidence of accumulation of butter, eggs, cheese and beef. The quantity of butter now in storage exceeds by forty per cent., the quantity of eggs by thirty-one per cent., the quantity of cheese by twenty-nine per cent., and the quantity of beef by fifty per cent., that reported as held on August 1st, 1916. The returns for 1917 cover a few more firms than those of 1916, but this fact merely detracts from the proportion of the increase in accumulation. It is stated that the accumulation is to respond to orders for the export trade. The quantity of pork held is normal as compared with the August 1st, 1916, figures. There is a forty per cent. decrease in the holdings of bacon as compared with August, 1916."

Foodstuffs on Hand.

Mr. OConnor's statement compiled from returns made by 96 per cent. of all cold-storage companies in Canada shows that the quantities on hand at the first of this month were: Eggs, 13,001,751 dozen; butter 12,250,124 pounds; cheese, 19,919,693 pounds; pork, 13,367,531 pounds; bacon, 6,062,983 pounds; ham, 2,301,799 pounds; smoked meats, 218,983 pounds; beef, 6,015,772 pounds; mutton and lamb, 604,101 pounds; pickled beef, 1,896,913 pounds; pickled pork, 19,549,533 pounds; fowl, all kinds, 3,468,854 pounds; fish, all kinds, 19,993,170 pounds.

Mr. O'Connor adds that ten per cent. should be added to these figures to represent the quantities held by firms whose reports have been delayed and to cover goods in transit within Canada.

Ontario has proportionately far the largest amount held in cold-storage. More than half of all the ham is held in Ontario. Abut three million pounds of bacon are held in Quebec and the same amount in Ontario. Two million pounds of beef are held in Ontario, one million pounds in Quebec, one and a half milion pounds in Manitoba, and one million pounds in Alberta. Eleven million pounds of pickled pork are held in Ontario, six million pounds in Alberta and one and a half million in British Columbia and the Yukon. About five and a half million pounds of butter are held in Quebec and four million pounds in Ontario. Fifteen million pounds of cheese are held in Quebec and three million pounds in Ontario.

Of the three million pounds of fowl held in cold-storage, over one million pounds are in Mantioba and nearly one million in Alberta. Ontario and Quebec hold about 400,000 pounds each. Of fish, Quebec Province holds three million pounds, British Columbia nine milljon pounds, Alberta one million pounds and the Maritime Provinces over one million pounds.

Peace Note Presented To-day

Allies Cannot For a Moment Entertain Any Proposal of An Armistice

WASHINGTON, Aug. 16.—The Pope's peace note to the warring Governments will be presented formally to the United States to-day. Until it has been received this Government, so it was said at the State Department would suspend opinion, judgment and action. But unless the communication of the Pontiff differs materially in its terms from the sum mary in the possession of President Wilson and Secretary of State Lansinging there is no likelihood that this latest effort to bring about an ending of the great war will have the outcome hoped for by the Pope.

It is difficult to enumerate the reasons advanced for unfavorable action by the United States and the allied Governments on the proposal of the Pope, they are so many and take such a wide range. But, boiled down, they may be said to embrace the feeling that the Pope has merely proposed an armistice, no definite terms for ending the war, and that as the allied nations have already made known their aims and plan of settlement in response to the urging of President Wilson last December, it is for Germany and not for any neutral interest to make the next move.

Chinese Move To Stop Plots

Official Explanation of the Declaration of State of War

WASHIGTON, Aug. 16.—China's official explanation of the declaration of a state of war with Germany and Austria-Hungary, in the form of a statement by the Foreign Office, was received last night at the Chinese Legation here. It said:

"In view of the many kinds of German intrigue seeking to create disorder in China, the Chinese Government found it impossible to wait for the convocation of Parliament before declaring the existence of a state of war with Germany, especially since the rupture of diplomatic relations with the Imperial German Government had been previously approved by parliament almost unanimously.

"Austria-Hungary has all along been acting in concert with the German Imperial Government. Moreover, the Austrians, like the Germans, have special settlements in China, which might easily be used by Germans, who speak the same language as Austrians, as a base of operation for further intrigues, thereby rendering the situation still more difficult for China to cope with."

"The Chinese Government, therefore, was unable to adopt a different attitude toward Austria-Hungary but was constrained, as an act of self-protection, simultaneously to accord her the same treatment as was accorded Germany."

FULL TEXT OF THE PEACE APPEAL IS FORWARDED

The Proposal Calls For the Restitution of All Occupied Territories and Freedom of the Seas--Each State Must Accept International Decisions According to Established Rules.

THE PRINCIPAL POINTS

LONDON, Aug. 16.— King George, through the British Foreign Office, has forwarded to other allies the request of Pope Benedict, the text of the peace appeal, including conditions which His Holiness declares to be concrete and practical. The following are the principal points in Pope Benedict's peace appeal:

Substitution of moral force of right for material force of arms, reciprocal diminuition of armaments, leaving only sufficient armament for the maintenance of public order. Substitution of arbitration for armies. Each state must accept the international decision according to established rules, and be subject to punishment if refusing to submit to arbitration or accept the decision. True liberty and freedom of the seas. Restitution of all occupied territories. The evacuation of Belgium, with a guarantee of her full political and economic independence.

It is hoped that in view of the advantages of a durable peace, with disarmament, the disputing countries will be willing to examine each question in a conciliatory spirit. The question of the Balkans, Poland and Armenia to be examined in the same spirit of equality and justice.

Field Marshall Haig Struck Another Blow This Morning

This Time the Attack Was in Belgium, North of Ypres---Canadians Still Hold Newly Won Positions Despite Strong German Counter Attacks During the Night---Progress Being Made At All Points---Stubborn Resistance

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Aug. 16.— Field Marshall Haig struck again to-day. This time the blow was in Belgium, north of Ypres. At 4.45 this morning the British and French attacked on a wide front. Heavy fighting was reported, but progress was being made at all points in spite of stubborn resistance by the enemy, British commanders stated. The attack was on a line runing to the east and north of Ypres, where bitter fighting took place in the first recent assault in Flanders. The Canadians today still hold the positions dominating Lens which were taken yesterday, despite strong German counter attacks during the night. Attempts of the Germans to regain Hill 70 and other important positions continued during the night, Haig reported, but all were repulsed.

In their counter attacks the enemy sustained heavy casualties. At least one entire enemy division was practically wiped out in the counter attacks by the Germans. The Fourth German Division was caught in the midts of deadly Canadian fire and was practically annihilated.

LONDON, Aug. 16th. Field Marshall Haig's troops captured Langemarck at noon to-day Premier Lloyd George announced in the House of Commons. Twelve hundred prisoners and five guns were captured.

FRENCH OFFICIAL STATEMENT REPORTS SUCCESSFUL ADVANCE

PARIS, Aug. 16.—The official statement to-day says: "After a violent and minute artillery preparation the French launched an attack at daybreak in conjunction with the British right," the War Office announced. "Our infantry, irresistible, rushed the enemy position on both sides of the Steenstrate-Dixmude road, and carried all objectives. Crossing the Steensback River the French progressed with the British to the right bank south of Ailles. We vigorously attacked on a kilometre front and carried a solid trench system. We easily threw back four German counter attacks, taking one hundred and twenty prisoners, including an officer."

Near Hurtebise the French advanced taking some prisoners," the statemen continued.

"Artillery was active on both banks of the Meuse. A successful raid was carried out at Louvjont. During the night and morning enemy engagements at Houlthulst Forest, Lichterwilde Station, Ailles and Hurtebise were bombarded by French aviators."

BAND CONCERT TO-MORROW NIGHT.

The Temple Band will give a concert in Victoria Park Friday night at 8.15.

THE BRITISH AND FRENCH ARMIES STILL PUSHING FORWARD

Special to the Examiner.

With the British Armies in the Field, by William Phillips Simms, Staff Correspondent.

The British swung another terrific blow against the Germans to-day, attacking on a front of six miles. The French struck simultaneously, and at the time of cabling the forces of both nations were pushing forward with relentless fury. From opposite Polygon Wood, four and a half miles north east of Ypres, to the junction with the French lines, six miles distant, the forces of Field Marshal Haig advanced after perfect preparation. The French, timing their thrust to strike with the British, had crossed the Steenbeck at the time of cablin, and were still pushing forward.

POSER PLEADS GUILTY.

BOSTON, Aug. 16.—Percy S. De-Willoughby, who, posing as a wounded British officer, obtained entrance into exclusive social circles of New York and Boston, and secured money on cheques which proved worthless, pleaded guilty to forgery and larceny in the Superior Court yesterday. He had previously pleaded not guilty. Sentence was deferred until Monday.

FIGHTING WAS VERY HEAVY THROUGHOUT NIGHT

(Special Cable by William Phillip Simms.)

With the British Armies Afield, Aug. 16.—The fighting in the region of Lens was extremely bloody during the night. The Canadians crushed the Germans like flies as they came back time and time again in counter attacks. One after another German divisions came on, until at nine o'clock last night ten counter assaults had been thrown back with bloody losses. The Fourth German Guards division was practically annihilated. Others had failed to shake the Canadian's hold on the approaches to Lens when the Fourth Guards were ordered out. The ranks of the Germans were shattered. The division was literally cut and blasted by the machine gun and artillery fire from the field of battle. What was left of the division withdrew. Field Marshall Haig is now keeping Crown Prince Rupprecht guessing with the attacks he has made in the last twenty-four hours. He has shifted about as would a boxer in the ring wearing down his opponent and worrying him, first by playing for the head, feigning and shifting to the body. The enemy is still desperately clinging to Lens, although the Canadians completely dominate the coal centre and every move of the Germans there costs them heavy.

BERLIN PRESS VERY CRITICAL OVER MESSAGE

COPENHAGEN, Aug. 16.—Publication of Emperor William's telegram to President Wilson in the memoirs of ex-Ambassador Gerard, and the lame and belated attempt at explanations calls forth criticism in the German press of what is termed the German Emperor's irresponsible conduct of the foreign affairs of the Empire.

Various Berlin newspapers comment on the system which permits the sovereign to pass upon such a proposal from a neutral power and to draft an important state document without consultation with a responsible minister.

The German press also sharply criticizes the action of the censor who prevented the publication of any reference to the Gerard disclosures for nearly a week after Entente and neutral newspapers had printed full particulars, and the inability of the new German Foreign Secretary, Dr. von Kuehlmann, to produce a firmer or more convincing refutation or explanation.

Berlin newspapers intimate that the question of ministerial responsibility or non-responsibility for Emperor Williams' autographed document will be raised in the Reichstag.

Rogers' Star Witness Gets His Reward

Prof. Brydone-Jack is Now Superintending Engineer in the West.

OTTAWA, Aug. 14.—Professor Brydone-Jack of Winnipeg, who was one of Hon. Robert Rogers' star witnesses for the defence in Justice Galt's investigation of the Manitoba agricultural buildings scandal, has received his reward. In the Commons yesterday afternoon Mr. Rogers informed Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux that Professor Brydone-Jack had been appointed to the new position of Superintending Engineer of the Public Works Department for Manitoba, Alberta and Saskatchewan. The salary is $3,000 per annum. The Civil Service Commissioners, said Mr. Rogers, had no jurisdiction over such an appointment.

SALES PLEASE DIRECTORS

Hudson Bay Co. Considers Policy Has Been Justified.

LONDON, Aug. 15—At the Hudson Bay meeting to-day Governor Kindersley said that only three times in the company's history had the land department sales been exceeded. The market for store sales was also extending. It was quite apparent that the back-to-the-land movement was rapidly developing in western Canada. This was only made possible through the wonderful railway expansion in the last fifteen years. No material increase could be looked for in suburban town lots. He could only hope that the unhealthy development of towns would not be repeated.

The directors resolved to institute a taxation reserve found in view of the heavy liability of the Company, and continued improvement shown in the sales. The policy of building large stores was fully justified. The company to-day generally stood in a thoroughly sound position.

"Public Demands War Cabinet" Says the Whig

Special to the Examiner.

KINGSTON, Aug. 16.—The British Whig (Liberal), in a front page editorial, calls upon Sir Robert Borden to resign on the ground that he is not equal to present emergencies. Public opinion demands a war cabinet at once, says the Whig, and some one should be found to undertake it.

"Such a man may not be visible," says the Whig, "but he may be convenient. Another Kerensky may be found when an honest and persistent search has been made for him.

Kingston Merchant Retires After 55 Years

Generals Hughes and Mewburn Visit Barriefield Camp.

KINGSTON, Aug. 16.—John McKelvey has retired after being in the hardware and plumbing business for the past fifty-five years here. He is one of Kingston's ex-Mayors.

The visit to Barriefield Camp of Generals John Hughes and Mewburn has given rise to rumours of more changes in the district staff. Only seventy men enlisted in the 3rd Division during the past two weeks, the lowest number on record since the war broke out.

SHIPPING LOSSES ARE LIGHTER THIS MONTH

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Aug. 16.—Submarine losses showed a shrinkage of 330,000 tons when total sinkings for April and July are compared. Lloyd George said: For April the losses were 550,000 tons; for July 320,000 tons the first half of August was even better, the Premier said.

The Food Situation In England

Better Now Than For Many Years —Big Move Retarded By Russia's Failure

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Aug. 15.—A pointed answer to the German hopes of starving out Britain through the submarine campaign was given by Premier Lloyd George, when he announced to-day that the food situation was now better than it has been in many years.

"The stock of wheat on hand is now 16 million bushels above that of last year," the Premier told the House of Commons. In discussing the military plans of the year, Lloyd George said it had been intended to make one big move this year, but the Russian claw of the nipper broke.

Interesting Letter From Lieut. New

Is Now With the 4th C. M. R. In France—Battlefield Sights.

The appended interesting letter has been received from Lieut. J. A. New, a former member of The Examiner staff, now in France with the 4th Canadian Mounted Rifles. Lieut. New writes as follows:

4th C.M.R., B.C.F.,
France, July 18, 1917.

"Now that the weather has improved again I wish you could visit some of the battle grounds where the churned up earth resembles an angry sea immobile. Already in some places the broken terrain is overgrown with weeds and rank grass through which the daisies push their heads as if to peer at the chaos around them, and the poppies shed their lurid reflection like blood splashes on the ground. Already too, in such places, the venturesome skylark has built his nest and flying skywards, blends his voice with the whistle of the shells heedless in the maelstrom of flying death. But although I have often heard the phase "Romance of War," this war is all drama, despite Buck Thomas. Wherr-r-r-bang-bang-crash — zip-zip-zip. One can't think of it all without associating it with the devil, especially when one feels satisfaction at the Boche getting it hotter than we. But this satisfaction is justified I hope.

It is with great satisfaction also that we read of the Russians again sharing the common burden. May it hasten the end, and make us all happy.

I am pretty well, but find it very very hard.

Yes! I have noticed in the papers that there is likely to be much excitement politically, and bitterly lament the fact that I cannot be there to take part. When next you write let me know a few details as to what the general feeling is. Of course we hear very little here.

With the very best wishes, af am,
Sincerely yours,
JACK.

Col. Creelman To Run As Soldiers' Candidate

War Veteran Will Oppose Sir Herbert Ames in St. Antoine, Montreal

MONTREAL, Aug. 16.—Lieut.-Col. J. J. Creelman, D.S.O., who has been at the front with the artillery since the outbreak of war, is back in the city. He has announced his intention of running for the House of Commons as a soldier candidate. He is likely to run in St. Antoine Division here, where Sir Herbert Ames is the representative now.

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

THURSDAY, AUG. 16, 1917

IN THE TOILS.

Are we in earnest in our food control measures? Bulletins estimate Saskatchewan's wheat crop this year at 90 millions, yet the government of Canada, with nine-tenths of the country under prohibition, last year permitted the conversion of 98 million pounds of grain into whiskey.

We are led to regard Mr. Hanna as an energetic and earnest man in his new and extremely responsible position. Yet we find him trifling with food conservation, for it is only trifling when he proscribes the use of wheat in the production of whiskey; for only less than a three-hundredth part of the 98 million pounds of grain used last year in making whiskey consisted of wheat. The liquor interests will therefore regard the blow of Mr. Hanna's prohibition of wheat for whiskey making as a mere "love tap." The Globe is justified in asserting that "either the food controller or the government bows down to the whiskey interests." If Food Controller Hanna is to keep step with his confrere, Mr. Hoover, of the United States, he will have to do better than that. He shuts off from the distillers a trifle of 27,000 pounds of wheat used in making whiskey, and practically permits the continued use of some 215 million pounds of foodstuffs—98 millions of grain, and the remainder molasses, sugar and rice—used in one year in Canada in making strong drink. Of all this waste, Mr. Hanna only touches the brim of the abyss of alcoholic food waste. Mr. Hanna may preach food economy and food sacrifice till he is black in the face, but so long as he shows a disposition to join with the government in truckling to the big interests, as the government has done since Canada began her gigantic offering of sacrifice in this war, he will only make a mockery of his duties. The government conscripts manhood, but refuses to make wealth pay its share of sacrifice; it kow-tows to the big interests by the force of prohibiting the use of a mere handful of the nearly hundred million pounds of grain that the liquor interests fatten on yearly through the devil's munition factories, the distilleries. The government is at present engaged in forcing through, in the interests of a group of Toronto financiers, a railway deal or steal, as the case may be. The big interests take precedence of Canada's duty in the war.

If Mr. Hanna doesn't watch out the (money) gobblers will get him.

IF GERMANY SHOULD—WIN.

If Germany should win this war, the whole world would be for her converted into a "Land of Cocaigne," where Germany could have everything she wants for the taking. That is, the whole warring world would have to pay indemnity and then tribute. The Germans, in case of success, could extort enough from other countries to keep their country going, and would only have to provide means to maintain her military machine, her engine of oppression, in good working order. It is a feeling now constantly growing in Germany that the country is ruined unless the Hun can exact heavy indemnities, and they would be exacted. German victory would mean the extinction of Great Britain as a sea power, and the way would be open for over-running Canada and the United States. This would be no dream if Germany won. Canada in helping win the war is fighting as much for herself as for Britain and Belgium and France; and that fact should stir us all to greater interest—those who can fight to enlist for fighting, and those who can otherwise help to combine their forces to give material help, as much needed as military assistance. This war against world domination at the hands of Germany enlists every citizen of every civilized country; for if Germany wins, not only will the world be exposed to the spirit of butchery and outrage that has blighted Belgium and Serbia, but every nation will be subjected to the extortionate "fines" that the Hun has from time to time imposed upon the countries where she has for the moment held contested sway. What then would she do if she conquered and had a free hand, unimpeded by the opposition of powerful armies which, thank heaven, are not only holding Germany in check, but steadily, ruthlessly, applying a crushing force.

Our soldiers in France must be fed and the blanks in the ranks, must be filled.

TOO MUCH POLITICS.

It is often said that we have too much politics in this country; but it is questionable if we have much of any politics. Politics is defined in any good dictionary as the science of government; that is true, but in regard to our national affairs, this science has become greatly deteriorated, if not vitiated, in application from the right, sound, economical, and effective principles of government.

In this country especially, politics, as an art, means divisions into party, and party government means, not so much, rivalry in making their respective principles and policies prevail—in doing the best thing for the country—as a rule the object is to do the best thing for the party; and that's where the trouble comes in.

If we could devise some way of substituting, in our national, provincial and, even, civic governments, patriotism for "politics," there would result a revolution—not only a revolt of the partizan elements, but a revoution in the conditions of our financial and all other interests.

It will not be disputed that if we had patriotic government of Canada, that is, government that puts the welfare of the people, their interests and the needs of the country first, with partizan profit second, or nowhere, Canada, in the matter of finances, could be governed; her affairs effectively administered, with half of the gigantic expenditure that is now riotously wasting the resources and imperilling the future of the country.

In the United States there is, perhaps, more open party politics in municipal and civic affairs. We do not have party politics so openly exploited as they do there; but the spirit is too often present and active. Party politics, in civic matters, in the the United States, leads, as it does everywhere else, to extravagant—to indirect vote-buying expenditure.

Dayton (Ohio) has municipal government by commission, instead of a party machine, as previously. The result of the work of the commission is summarized thus:

"It put the city on a business basis, and got one hundred cents in service for every dollar of the city's money spent. It did not build up a political machine at the expense of the people."

Government by commission, whose chief value or capacity for effectiveness, depneds upon the absence of partizanship, is simply municipal government on business principles. If the affairs of the average municipality in Canada were conducted on business principles—run as a business concern—run as are run our successful mercantile and manufacturing concerns—half the amount of expenditure made at present would yield better results. On the contrary, any of our thriving merchants or manufacturers who would manage their business as business is managed in the average urban municipality, they would go to the wall in a few weeks.

Business civic governmnet for Dayton has resulted in vastly improved service to the taxpayers, better value for their taxes, and a vast improvement in services that conduce to the popular welfare—one hundred per cent. of efficiency with greatly reduced expenditure."

There is no use in arguing the question of the relative merits of partizan and non-partizan government either in the way of national results or public benefits; but the difficulty is to eliminate the partizan spirit in public affairs.

We have party government in Canada "for keeps." We may not change that, but we should be able to prevent party government from degenerating into partizanship government.

At this time of national stress and national struggle we should be able to keep patriotism uppermost and partizanship under feet. We have reached a political deadlock, are floundering in a political morass. Can't we, in some way, get out of the slough—get out of the "horrible pit and miry clay" into which partizanship management, or mismanagement, of war interests has plunged us?

Is it not possible to agree upon a national leader who will gather around him a body of colleagues who will grasp the situation and give the country relief; who will lead the country to do the duty it has not yet done? If we can't agree on one leader, then we might agree on two—joint leadership—each nominally representative of the two great parties, and both representative of the national spirit?

We must do something definite. As things go there is political confusion; and if affairs are left to drift the outcome may be disaster. There must be in the two great parties of Canada enough patriotic spirit to make it possible for the impulses and ambition of patirotism to overcome the progressive paralysis of partizanship.

Nothing more disgracefully demonstrates the exceeding rottenness of rotten partizanship than the whitewashing of Hon. Robert Rogers and the "lickspittle testimonial" of seventy Conservative members of Parliament.

WINDOW BLINDS.

Called an Invention of the Evil One to Keep Out Sunlight.

"God said, 'Let there be light.' The devil whispered to men and blinds were invented." So writes Dr. F. Robbins of New York in an article entitled "Heliophobia, a Menace to the Community," published in the Medical Record.

According to a bulletin of the American Association For the Conservation of Vision, at least half the educated population of the United States is afflicted with defects of eyesight.

As a matter of fact, sunlight, so far from being injurious to the eyes is one of the most successful cures for trachoma, the commonest of eye diseases.

Dr. Robbins is amazed at the number of persons who find sunlight irritating and at the number who still cling to the old and long exploded notion that sunshine is bad for the eyes. He blames the persons in authority in our libraries, postoffices and railroad companies for persistently pulling down the blinds in their institutions and cars.

He urges those who are oppressed by sunlight to wear smoked glasses and not to deprive others of the beneficent brightness. Sunlight kills many noxious bacteria than all other germicides put together.

Women With Mustaches.

The Ainus, aboriginal race of Japan, live in the island of Yeddo, although the race has become so reduced that there are now not more than 16,000 or 17,000 of them left in the country. The most noticeable peculiarity about Ainu women is that they have tattooed upon their upper and lower lips what resembles a mustache. The women are not considered attractive, and their matrimonial prospects are quite injured without this decoration. The mustache is begun when the girl is quite a child. It is done gradually, a little each year, until it extends partly across the cheek, the material used being the soot from burning birch bark. The face is cut and the black rubbed in. Afterward it is washed in a solution of ash bark liquor to fix the color.

Shortstops and Errors.

"You can't be a good shortstop unless you make errors," says C. H. Claudy in the Woman's Home Companion.

"Think a minute and you will understand this apparently surprising statement. Many an error in the error column saves a score in the score column. Thus the ball you try for may be just too fast for you to catch. Yet you may get enough hands on it to knock it down. The runner is safe. But if you hadn't knocked it down he might be safe on second. Of course not all such knockdowns will be scored as errors. The point is you can't afford to give any thought to whether you are going to make an error or not."

Sleeping on Puffs.

The Japanese do not sleep on European beds, but on many thick, soft puffs piled one on top of each other upon the floor. For bed covering they use more of the same kinds of puffs. It is said that the Japanese emperor has twenty such puffs. One of those which cover him is made in the shape of a kimono and has a velvet collar. Probably he creeps inside of this if he feels cold in the night.

China and Its People.

About 95 per cent of the population of China is confined to one-third of the area of the country, with a density of 300 to the square mile. Five per cent of the population inhabits 65 per cent of the area, with a density of ten to the square mile.

Dainty Boxes.

In Sicily one frequently sees dainty little circular boxes, pale yellow in color, painted in heraldic designs and giving off the sweet smell of oranges. They are used for pins, small jewels or collar buttons and are, in fact, orange skins.

Doubts and Dont's.

Remember Talleyrand's advice. "If you are in doubt whether to write a letter or not—don't." The advice applies to many doubts in life besides that of letter writing.—Bulwer Lytton.

As long as you refrain from saying anything you keep the other fellow guessing.

THE MAN AND HIS JOB.

Every Worker Should Get a Chance to Exercise His Ability.

In the American Magazine Herman Schneider, dean of the school of engineering of the University of Cincinnati, who has devoted his life to a study of human ability and fitting the right job to the right man, says:

"There is a new psychology of work one of its most inspiring principles is that the man who makes a failure on one job is likely to make a success of the job of an opposite type, assuming, of course, that he fails in the face of real effort. This is the significance of failure: It points the way to an occupation which means success. Failure of a willing man is merely misplacement on his job. Failure at one job is not a calamity; it is an indication. Every failure is a guidepost to success.

"Fortunately some employers are beginning to understand this. When a man fails in one job they shift him to another of an opposite type. And if the worker is not lazy or dishonest he usually succeeds. No foreman should be allowed to discharge a man. He should merely report to a central office that the man is not successful on his particular kind of work. In another department he may break records. To fire a man who has failed at one job is poor business. The shifting of failures means the making of success."

Children.

Children are God's own creation. And it would be wise to follow his own direction about the growth of our children's mind toward freedom and light. The highest education is that which does not merely give us information, but makes our life in harmony with all existence.

Children are in love with life, and it is their first love. They are not born ascetics, fit to enter at once into the monastic discipline of acquiring knowledge. At first they must gather knowledge through their love of life, and then they will renounce their lives to gain knowledge, and then again they will come back to their fuller lives with ripened wisdom.—Rabindranath Tagore

Shore, of Red Sox Enlists in Navy

Becomes Enrolled as Class 4 Yeoman —Will be Assigned to Duty Later.

BOSTON, Aug. 16.— Ernest Shore, enrolled in the United States Naval Reserve as a Class 4 Yeomen to-day He will be assigned to duty later

Ernie Shore who pitched a perfect game this year, left the team to-day at Philadelphia for Boston with the announced intention of consulting with United States army officers. Manager Barry said that Shore had promised to report to him at Cleveland this week. Should he fail to do so, Barry said it would seriously affect his team's chances in the race for the American League penpant, as he was counting on Shore to win many games before the finish of the season.

SOCCER PAYS IN ENGLAND.

Everton Club Declares 5 Per Cent. Dividend After Season.

LONDON, Aug. 16.— Some remarkable figures are shown in a number of balance sheets issued by English soccer clubs as the result of last season's working. Everton, which lost $743 in 1915-16, turned in a profit of $7,361, which has resulted in the club paying a 5 per cent. dividend. Gate receipts for the season totaled $35,079, and, in addition to investing $12,500 in the war loan, the famous club carries forward $86,917.

Liverpool again did well, with a profit of $8,381, which compares with $6,146 in the previous season. No dividend is paid, but after purchasing $5,000 in the war loan, 29,676 is carried forward to next season. During the season $36,379 was taken at the turnstiles.

West Ham United, champions of the London Combination, finished with a progt of $3,140. Blackburn Rovers commemnced the season splendidly but fell away badly through many of its best players joining the colours, and lost $7,060 on the season's working, which brings the total loss since the outbreak of the war to $33,925. Preston North End also came out on the wrong side with a loss of $1,785.

Jews In London Face Race War

LONDON, Aug. 16.—There is a race war developing in East London that proimses to become as bitter as the feeling recently displayed in East St. Louis, Ill. The east side of the world's largest city is thickly populated with Russian Jews, who have refused either to join England's army or return to Petrograd for service there. They are in bad repute with the Londoners and the ill-feeling has lately taken a menacing turn.

Since the publication of the agreement entered into by the British and Russian governments the demands for a cleanup of the Russian Jews in London has grown tremendously. The Governments have decided that all Englishmen in Russia and all Russians in England shall have the choice of joining the army of their adopted country or returning to their native land. While the measure is aimed mostly at Russians in English territory it will also affect a goodly number of Britishers who have been sojourning in Eastern countries.

The Jews in England have nevertheless responded well to the call to arms and many decorations have been won by men of Hebraic origin. Yet the Russian Jews have continued their business in East London despite all efforts to put them into khaki. The people are beginning to threaten them. Men who formerly had small shops in that quarter but who have joined the army can hardly be expected to accept without protest the greediness with which the Jews pick up their former trade. Now that the authorities have the power to call up the shirkers they will have to act promptly to avoid demonstrations.

The issue has been put squarely to the Jews, but they are waiting until they are forced to make a decision.

The war has brought them abounding prosperity, but they don't intend to acknowledge their obligations to the community that has been kind to them.

A trip through the East End to-day is enough to convince anyone that the English are looking for speedy action. The Russian Jews can expect no further consideration from a Government that has been more than lenient with them, and judging from the sentiment now they know their days in England are numbered. It will either be khaki or a ticket to Petrograd.

Military Cross Hero

Capt. William Stewart MacTier, who was reported recently to have been awarded the Military Cross for gallantry in the firing line, is the son of Mr. A. D. MacTier, general manager of eastern lines of the Canadian Pacific Railway. Capt. MacTier went to the front with the first Canadian Contingent and has been twice wounded, the first time at Ypres, and lately at Vimy Ridge. At the outbreak of the war, Capt. MacTier was on the ocean returning from India, and immediately on landing joined the Thirteenth Battalion, under Lieut.-Col. (now Brigadier-General) Loomis, D.S.O. He went to the front with that unit and fought with it when it covered itself with glory at Ypres and Festubert. He was then wounded by shrapnel and returned to Montreal to convalesce. On returning to the front he was attached to Brigadier-General Loomis' staff, he having taken over the command of a brigade in the mean time. At the latter's serving in this capacity for a short time one of his feet gave out and an operation was necessary. On his return to the front on this occasion he was transferred to a Montreal Highland Battalion and promoted to his captaincy.

From England, as well as from this continent, come reports of dairy herds being reduced. When other men are going out of a stable line is usually a good time for wise men to stay in it.

OPENING THE BIBLE

When the President Takes the Oath of Office.

NO PLACE FIXED IN ADVANCE.

The Passage of Scripture Upon Which the Chief Executive Presses His Lips Is Entirely a Matter of Chance—The Bible After the Ceremony.

The president before he enters on the execution of his office takes an oath or affirmation that he "will faithfully execute the office of president of the United States and will, to the best of my ability, preserve, protect and defend the constitution of the United States," and this oath is usually sealed or confirmed by the kissing of the Bible.

The kissing of the Bible as part of the inaugural ceremony is perhaps following a very ancient custom. The Egyptians were required to kiss the rolls on which the commands of Joseph were written.

The custom requires that immediately after the president elect has taken the oath, with hand on the Bible, the clerk of the United States supreme court shall throw open the book, and the incoming chief magistrate shall implant a kiss on one of its open pages.

Doubting Thomases have always thought that there was no element of chance in this performance and that the passage of Scripture is always carefully selected in advance, and the book is held by the clerk of the court in position so that the incoming chief will kiss the passage that it is intended he shall kiss, but this supposition is entirely wrong.

James D. Maher, clerk of the supreme court, said that the opening of the book is entirely "haphazard" and that no man on earth has the slightest intimation in advance regarding the passage of Scripture that will be thus brought into notice.

Usually the Bible that is used in administering the oath is bought by the clerk of the supreme court and paid for out of his pocket and is a small Oxford edition costing $10 to $15. The late James H. McKinney, for many years clerk of the supreme court, once said, "You see, congress expends money only by appropriation, and if we were to wait for congress to appropriate the price of the book we might never get a Bible on time."

There have been exceptions, however, when the Bible came from other sources. For instance, when James A. Garfield was inaugurated March 4, 1881, he carried in his overcoat pocket to the capitol a well worn, leather bound volume which had been presented to him by his mother. The book was taken from the White House and in a few years found its way to the stall of a bookseller in San Francisco. How it got there has never been known, nor is it likely it ever will be. A few years ago it was offered for sale at a very high price.

Chester A. Arthur took the oath of office just after midnight at his home in New York city Sept. 20, 1881. The Bible used was one belonging to the then chief justice of the state of New York. It is cherished by the judge's family as an heirloom.

On March 4, 1885, when Grover Cleveland was inaugurated president for the first time, he, like Garfield, kissed the Holy Book which was given to him by his mother. It was a small volume, bound in red leather, and was presented to him many years before. The book is now in the possession of Mr. Cleveland's married sister at Toledo, O. The Bible upon which he took the oath in 1893, eight years later when he became president the second time, was one presented by his beautiful wife, and she became its possessor.

When Benjamin Harrison was made president March 4, 1889, the Bible used was one that his wife had given him on the day of their marriage in Oxford, O., where President Harrison spent his school days. The Harrison Bible is owned by Mrs. James R. McKee, the daughter of ex-President Harrison.

President McKinley used a Bible that had been presented to him by the negro bishops of the country. It was the biggest Bible ever seen at the clerk's office, and Clerk McKinney in relating the incident said: "The day before the inauguration one of the bishops called at my office with the Bible. It was a huge affair of the type known as family Bibles. It was in an ornate box lined with purple velvet and ornamented with gold. The box was fastened by lock and key. When I realized that it would be my lot to carry that huge Bible from the senate chamber clear out to the front of the capitol my knees grew weak and I could not refrain from asking the bishop jokingly where the wheelbarrow was that should go with it."

The invariable custom is that on the day following the inauguration the clerk of the court takes the Bible to the White House and presents it to the first lady of the land as a keepsake.

Re-enforced Concrete.

The ark in which Moses was placed in the bulrushes, we are told in the second chapter of Exodus, was an ark of bulrushes daubed with slime and with pitch. This is probably the first recorded instance of a re-enforced concrete structure.

In matters of conscience first thoughts are best; in matters of prudence last thoughts are best.

GIVE THE CHILD A TREE.

If Possible, Let Him Plant One and Own It All Himself.

Every child should own a tree. A tree is a symbol of life. It lives. It stands for everything that is noble. It is rooted in the soil and stretches itself toward heaven. It stands for patience, humility, persistence, beauty, courage and God.

The child should plant the tree himself and thereafter watch it grow year by year. He should put his hands on its rough bark and say: "This is my tree. I will stand by it and live up to it."

It is curious how blind we sometimes are to certain ideals because we cannot see and handle them. We need something to connect us with the invisible but none the less potent and formative world of aspiration and inspiration. What could be better than a tree?

There is something about the silent beauty of a tree than casts over us a spell of calmness and invincibility. The storms of life may sway us and break our branches; the grim and melancholy autumn may strip us of our brilliance, but the spring will come once more and clothe us in a new glory. So we go on fulfilling the majesty of the law.

If your child owns a tree the memory of its beneficent influence will cling to him through life.

A Reminiscence of the Past.

During the campaign in the Peninsula there was in the Torres Vedras affair a strip of vineyards running between the two lines which was looked upon as a sort of neutral ground, only, in contrast to what happens nowadays in "no man's land," writes the Paris correspondent of the Pall Mall Gazette, the men from both armies were in the habit of repairing there for drinks and relaxation, in the course of which opposing forces often came across one another, but each passed their own way after courteous salutes. One day a British party had drunk somewhat freely, and, happening upon a French sergeant of the Guard, insisted upon making him a prisoner. The man had the good fortune to come before the Duke of Wellington in person, and lost no time in acquainting him with his plight.

"All right," said the Duke good-naturedly, "of course you shall go, but you must have something to eat first!" and, turning to an orderly, he said: "Have this man taken to the kitchen and given a good meal." The Frenchman saluted, but made no attempt to express his thanks. Noticing his looks, the Duke said—

"Well, what more do you want?"

"General," replied the Frenchman, drawing himself up proudly, "a soldier of the Guard is never asked to eat in the kitchen!"

The Duke bent his brow a moment, as if resenting the man's aplomb; then, laughing, said—

"Maybe you're right. Come and dine with me!"

Change Needed.

Edith—"Haven't you and Jack been engaged long enough to get married?"

Ethel—"Too long. He hasn't a cent left."

A Left Handed Compliment.

"Ma," said little Harry, "I'll tell you what you ought to do."

"What, dear?" his mother asked.

"You ought to go over to live in some country where the people are Mohammedans."

"What on earth ever put such a thought as that into your dear head darling?"

"'Cause over there they think all fat women are beautiful."

"Harry, if you dare to open your mouth again this evening you will be sent to bed with nothing to eat"—Chicago Herald.

Osteopathy For American Troops

Adequate Supply of Qualified Practicioners is Being Arranged

COLUMBUS, O., August 15.—Profiting by the experience of the allied armies in Europe, American troops are not going to suffer from the lack of specialists in mechanical adjustment to repair the cripples and nervous wrecks produced by the thousands in this modern war. The American Asteopathic Association at its annual convention perfected arrangements for an adequate supply of osteopathic physicians and surgeons for the United States army and navy, and offered them to the Government. A bill has been introduced in Congress providing for this service, and osteopathic patients all over the country are writing the War Department insisting that their sons in the service be attended by practitioners of the school of practice to which they are accustomed. In Europe the old school physicians admit that they cannot handle the enormous amount of mechanical treatment necessary, and the British Parliament has been interpellated to know why osteopaths were not employed in the service.

The first announcement of a cure for the so-called "incurable" form of deafness, nerve deafness, was the most important event of the convention, aside from the war preparations. Dr. John Deason of Chicago, who for years was the director of the Osteopathic Research Institute, is the discoverer. He reported on 500 cases which had be enabsolutely differentiated from the curable forms of deafness. He claims that he gets results in 90 per cent. of these cases, which all authorities assert are absolutely incurable. The method includes osteopathic adjustment, irrigation of the nose with four gallons of warm antiseptic solution and the removal of all adhesions from the throat my osteopathic "finger surgery."

Fifty per cent. of the tonsils "slaughtered" by the surgery of the old schol specialists could be preserved to normal function by osteopathic treatment, according to Dr. C. A. Dodson of Little Rock, Ark., who read a paper in the ear, nose and throat section.

Blame for the shocking unfitness for military service of such an amazing percentage of American men was laid at the door of the public school system by Dr. J. A. Ryel of Hasbrouck Heights, N.J.

The universal belief that most disease is caused by bad teeth and tonsils and that it is cured exclusively by their removal, was upset by Dr. George J. Conley, a general surgeon of Kansas City, who insisted that these things did not cause disease until some locality was sufficiently lowered in resistance so that it could not defend itself. The principal thing which lowers this resistance is some sort of displacement or pressure interference which may be discovered by the osteopath and removed by osteopathic adjustment.

Less than 12 per cent. of the school children in America have normal vision, according to Dr. C. E. Abegglen, occulist, of Colfax, Wash., who said that boards of education commit a moral and social crime when they fail to have adequate annual examination of school children by competent specialists.

Exercise is the best preventative and the best cure for spinal curvature, asserted Dr. Andrew A. Gour, the Chicago specialist on physical culture. No treatment is adequate without it, he said.

Mental defectives are increasing at an alarming rate, reported Dr. Ira W. Drew, professor of diseases of children in Philadelphia College of Osteopathy. More than 800,000 are roaming the streets to-day, an unrestricted menace to the future welfare of the country, he says.

Certain rays of the sun have been found to cure all cases of skin cancer which have gone to the glandular involvement, reported Dr. J. O. Day of Louisville, Ky., who claims that after a lapse of ten years there has been no relapse in any of the cases in his series.

The "X-ray fakir" was denounced by Dr. Earl R. Hoskins as the very latest scientific fraud. Dr. Hoskins is chief of the clinical department of the A. T. Still Research Institute of Chicago. He says that this most valuable diagnostic method can be misused by imitators of osteopathy to show displacements of bones where none exist.

DEEP GLOOM IN HAMBURG

Great German Port Dead as Result of War and People are Grumbling.

"No other place in Germany has been hit so hard by the war as Hamburg," writes an English woman just returned from the big German port after many years' residence there, in a recent issue of The London Daily Mail. "No other community sighs so anxiously for peace. There is no more talk of 'victory'. 'Give us food, and then we'll hang out the flags,' is what they are saying to-day.

"To the thousands of English people who knew Hamburg in its gay, prosperous, well-fed days the Alster city would present a sad and sorry sight to-day. There is no sign whatever of its former prosperity. The harbour is dead. The vast business of export and shipping on which thousands of Hamburg families depended is at a standstill. They have had to make heavy drafts on savings and invested capital. The two great glories of the city's pride, the Esplanade and the Atlantic, are practically shut and bankrupt; they depend on the patronage of wealthy visitors, especially Americans and English. Cafe life ceased many months ago. You can get no coffee that is drinkable—the so-called 'substitutes' are vile and there has been no tea for a long time.

"The Hamburg goose was a once-famed national dish. A goose, when it can be had, now costs $25 or $30; in the old days a fine one cost $1.50 to $2.25. There is no lack of money; but money is worthless because only in rare instances can one buy anything with it. There were never so few fat men and women in Germany. 'Pot-bellies' have disappeared. Everybody in Hamburg is and looks underfed.

"Hamburg depended to an enormous extent on English trade and good-will for its prosperity; and though the Hamburgers at first prayed that Gott would strafe England, they are beginning now to think of the future. They hope England will forgive and forget, and help the port to regain some of its greatness. You will hear a good many Hamburgers say they know now that it was not England who made the war. They are beginning to blame 'Berlin'. The Kaiser is not nearly so popular on the Elbe as he once was. I do not think there would be much cheering for him to-day if he rode around the Alster with his friend, Herr Ballin. Hamburg soldiers are very bitter when they come home. You hear a good deal of talk, attributed to them, about 'freeing' Hamburg from the rest of Germany when the war is over. They want to be 'like England.'

"Yet, if Hamburg is a sample of the rest of Germany, I do not think that even such hardships as I have described are going to make the country stop fighting. They know things are going badly, but they have not yet abandoned faith that, somehow or other, they will win."

MUSIC IN THE HOME

BAND MUSIC A WAR NECESSITY.

Band music is as much a necessity of war as food and ammunition. That was completely proved by the history of our first overseas contingent. It was thought in the early days of the war that the men of to-day were so far above their grandfathers, so superior in practical good sense, so indifferent to the stimulus of glory, that no spirit-rousing device would be necessary. The first 100,000 went to France without bands. No more. In England as in Canada the need of militant music was discovered.

The best minds in the United States are beginning to understand that a grave error will be made if the regiments are concentrated and trained without bands. The Chicago Tribune declares that the stimulus of music must be applied to keep alive the consciousness of national service and national appreciation. The article continues: We have been neglecting the emotional side of the work to be done. It cannot be neglected and the work well done. If the men of the new army are herded to their training camps and if the public which they are to serve seems indifferent to the service they are about to give, the alienism of their effort and sacrifice to the public well-being will be impressed upon many of them. They must be played into camp, and played for in camp. They must be reminded in the first period when they are exchanging the accustomed scenes of home and work for the unaccustomed scenes of a military camp and the accustomed habits of life for the military habits that an appreciative people not only knows what they are doing but is watching them do it.

Popular indifference will be a wet blanket to the spirits of the men thus trying to adjust themselves to new conditions and new methods of life. Bands will quicken their pulse beats and stimulate their emotions. We must manage things better for emotional effect.

Perhaps even the writer in The Tribune may not be able to explain why the flare of a military band gives us all such a sensation of delight. It is the rhythm. Man is the only animal with a rhythmic sense. This desire for equal pulses is entirely spiritual and separates him completely from the lower forms of creation. The veriest savage is pleased by regular beats upon a drum. The highest animal cannot produce at will rhythmic movements or sounds. No music is more definitely rhythmical than that of a Band, therefore it is of itself exalting to the spirits. When the melody is one usually combined with patriotic words the effect is thrilling. We had forgotten the fact. War reminded us of it.

CLERGYMEN AND MUSIC.

Rev. M. B. Johnson, M.A., curate of Christ Church Cathedral, Montreal, has just passed successfully the second of three annual examinations to qualify himself for the degree of Bachelor of Music. Here is a new and satisfactory state of things. The influence of musical art on the religious spirit is so great that one often wonders why it is so generally neglected by clergymen. Too frequently the preacher's notions about music are so delightfully vague as to appear humorous. A New York organist tells of a clergyman who came to him and said "I would like the choir to sing the Big Anthem next Sunday morning." The organist was puzzled. Whether the Big one was a Te Deum, or some elaborate setting of a psalm he was utterly unable to say, particularly as the choir library contained some hundreds of anthems. He might have meant Shelleys Hark, Hark My Soul which takes some fourteen minutes to pass a given point. He might have had in mind Sullivan's Sing O Heavens which is long enough to strain the tendons of any chorister's leg. The organist mentioned one or more of these titles, but the pastor grew a trifle testy. "You know perfectly well what I mean," he replied. "It is the Big antthem you sometimes sing." The proper ending to this story, if one were not hampered by the truth, would be that the organist went out and hanged himself. Instead of that, he sang one Big anthem and discovered afterwards that it was not the right one. There is no doubt that the testy clergyman is at this very moment lamenting the lack of co-operation between organ and pulpit.

Ministers would find great advantage in making a study of the principles of art. Perhaps if more of them learned to sing properly, they would acquire at the same time the ability to speak in comfort, with good carrying power and without that final distress known as clergymen's sore throat. Operatic singers never have sore throat. They have learned how to use their vocal organs without straining them.

THE MIRACLE BECOMES COMMONPLACE.

Some editors are exclaiming over a wireless telephone invention which may make it possible for persons at sea to hear a concert given on another ship some hundreds of miles away. Judging by some ship's concerts that have been held the privilege is not a thing to be hugged to one's bosom. It is on such occasions that the egotistic amateur has free course and is glorified. But after all is the wireless telephone to be compared with a miracle which has now become commonplace; namely, the talking machine?

Men and women all over this country are hearing daily the voices of greatest artists, the playing of great instrumentalists. As a rule, because of the exceptional care taken to produce the records free from spot, blemish or any such thing, the "canned" music is sometimes more satisfying than that produced on the concert stage by the artist in the flesh. He or she may have a cold. The record never catches cold. The artist may be annoyed by a minor, temperamenal quarrel with a stage hand or a manager. The temper of a record is even and equable. The artist may be in love. The record is vulcanized and changes of temperature do not affect its soul.

This is no proof that it is better to hear a record than to go to a concert. One merely asserts that the talking machine is the best substitute for a concert this world ever saw, and the wireless telephone will have a long way to go before the leadership of the talking and singing machine will be challenged.

WHY NOT A DAILY "SONG HOUR"

Early Introduction of Rhythm into the Child's Life Cultivates Musical Taste.

Story hour has always been the stand-by of youth, gleefully anticipating the soothing close of the day. Every mother, too, has appreciated these minutes, day after day, as a blessing in the training and development of her child. It is an indisputable fact that a child never absorbs more than when he is interested and amused. So during the pleasant story hours the child learns about the joys, the sorrows, the battles, the victories, the achievements, the disappointments—in short—all lessons of life.

But now some resourceful mother has discovered how to improve this ancient institution. How? By setting its libretto to music; by putting into song all the little tales of the hour—cheerful tunes for tales of joy; low, sofe tunes for sad tales; clamorous tunes for victories. Thus by bringing rhythm into the childs life by making his fairies dance to sweet music and his soldiers march to warlike melodies, she is planting seeds for a vivid healthy imagination that will stand him in good stead in years to come when he is confronted with the real battles and struggles of life.

Mother Need Not Be Musical to Develop Love For Music in Children.

Hereto fore so many children have grown to manhood and womanhood without the helpful influence of music, probably because the mother has put forth such feeble excuses as "I am not musical; I can only play for my own amusement." "I don't know enough about music to teach it to my children." These ideas are old-fashioned now, and no longer hold water. Any little tune, no matter how weakly sung or played, but fitting in with the mood of the tale or action of the moment, delights the child, and unconsciously leaves behind an indelible influence and a recollection of happy days. Long before the idea of song combined with story met with its present favour, mothers used to feel their inability to tell stories to their children very keenly. They used to say "I cannot tell a story, I am not fanciful, I have no imagiantion." Yet now there are few mothers who have not strained their powers in this direction to develop just those qualities which they themselves lack, and feel the need of so keenly.

As a great help these days to the unmusical mother, a great boon has come upon the scene in the form of the player-piano and talking machine which always place music at her command. But it is the music from the mother herself which has the best eect on the child. The child demands so little and is made so joyous by every little happening, that no mother should find it difficult to give music its proper place in her babies lives. In the mother's impulsive, spontaneous music, the child bears the outpourings of maternal love, and for mother to be "music" is almost a symphony to the young impressive mind."

Simple Little Tunes Should Accompany Child Through Early Life.

The far-sighted mother cannot begin too early to introduce music in the home. There should be simple little tunes for all the baby's wee thoughts and actions, and these should be sung over and over again. When the baby reaches the creeping stage, there should be little jingle-rhymes while he travels his baby miles across the floor, his little face all aglow. The simpler the tune, the more it delights his baby heart. Then, having a simple tuneful background for everything he says and does, ere long he will think in music—the best possible influence in the childs life.

The larger the family circle, the bigger the happy scope. More children means more music resulting in a veritable concert. Now with the great contribution made to the family's musical life by the player-piano the children are left free to develop their other musical tastes — vocal or instrumental. And even earlier in the child's life are these modern instruments helpful. When the busy mother's time is divided between her many duties the child can find a happy companion in these instruments. Before his musical abilities are developed sufficiently to enable him to produce these melodies himself, he becomes familiar with the best classics. Think of the children's happy recollections when they remember those peaceful hours day after day, before the hearth, with daddy peacefully smokin ghis pipe, and mother with sewin basket on her lap, a happy smile lighting up her face as she hears her children's sweet voices raised in simple song—all this beautiful picture the result of a little time devoted daily to the song hour.

As the babies grow, the song hour must grow likewise. The repetition songs must change to the more musical themes; still later, the dramatic settings of the stories can be set to music. If at all possible, intersperse the hour with selections from the masters to increase the musical atmosphere at home.

And so, if through the changing fancies of childhood the song-stories wander and take different shapes and forms, the child's heart will be ful lof rhythm, of the beauty of life, and of the joy of living. For song is the hear-beat of life!

FALSE TEETH NO DRAWBACK.

If the government were going to conscript orchestra players, false teeth would not disqualify you for the Clarinet battalion. A young man who had shed both his uppers and lowers had aspirations along the clarinet line but for sometime laboured under the impression that anyone with two sets of artificial teeth was not physically fit for the work of clarinet playing. To a prominent teacher he confided his desires and was told that so far as the artificials were concerned he should not experience any difficulty with them. They merely serve to support the lip pressure around the reed and mouthpiece, and with a proper facing and reed the pressure will not tax the teeth to any great extent.

The teacher could not recall any persons of his acquaintance who had two sets of false teeth and played the clarinet, but he knew of a great number who had one set and they played very well. He is inclined to the view that the teeth make little difference in the production of a good clarinet tone, for many players draw both lips over the teeth and therefore so far as lip pressure is concerned it does not necessarily require sound teeth.

As a matter of fact, there are players with their own natural teeth who would never be scholarshipped for their good tone.

Letter From Driver Twomey Now in France

Peterboro' Boy is Busy Drawing Wire and Rations Up to the Front Line

In a letter to his mother of this city, Driver M. J. Twomey, a former member of the 93rd Battalion now in France, has the following interesting experiences to relate:

France, July 17h, 1917.

My Dear Mother,—Yesterday I received a letter from you telling me you were mailing a box to my address. Well, I have just got it and the contents are lovely, but it is best of all to smoke those good old Canadian Players once more. Glad to know you are all well and that my father is able to be at work again. We have been down the line some distance on rest leave, over a month now, but go back to duty soon. Well, mother, you asked me to tell you what I am doing. I told you a little before, but not a very good description, so as there is nothing wrong about going into details I'll do so. I draw wire and rations up the line at night for the boys up there. We are supposed to be up the line here, but operators, linemen, etc., are much further ahead. We are not in any danger except when there is a continued advance. So do not worry, mother, as I have not been near the firing line at all. As you read the news you know as much about the situation here as I could tell you, if I would. However, I'll say this much: "We are winning." I occasionally see a few 93rd boys, but there are not many with me. It was sure sad about Nicholas Scott. He was a nice fellow and his people will feel badly about him, but we only die once, and none can die in a nobler cause than he did. George Coughlin is still in England; and although I am in the same division with Martin Walters we have not yet met. And you consider my poetry good. Well if I thought I ever could be a poet I'd see a doctor and get writing tablets to help me out. I wish Annie would send me her photo, whether she considers it good or not. I enclose some snaps, but I'd rather not give them to the Examiner, as they are a complete failure. The sun was shining directly on me and the pictures are anything but clear. How are Gradys and Clancys. Tell Evelyn I received the medal and appreciate it very much. Also am delighted that Cele and the baby were able to get home again.

Remember me to all our old neighbours in East Emily. And now, with love to all, I'll close.

Your affectionate son,
Driver M. J. Twomey,
2nd Canadian Div. Sig. Co.,
B.E.F., France.

Schools Re-open September 4th

Both Public and High Schools Will Open on the Same Day

On Tuesday, September the fourth, both public and high schools of the city will re-open for the fall term. The tocsin has already sounded for a number of youths who have spent their vacation on the farm. The next few days will witness the return of a number of the boys who have made such a worthy contribution to the army of labour needed on the farms. Labour Day will fall on September the third, and the schools will re-open on the following day.

Will Discuss The War Situation

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Aug. 16—Premier Lloyd George will deliver an important address in the House of Commons this afternoon at which time it is regarded as extremely likely he will make England's first official pronouncement in response to the Pope's peace proposal. The Premier is to discuss the war situation according to an announcement in connection with a motion to adojurn Parliament for the summer recess.

Peace Proposals Will Be Rejected

Special to The Examiner:

ROME, Aug. 16.—Pope Benedict's peace proposals are certain to be rejected by the Allies, is the view of the Italian press.

COLORADO FARMERS ARMED IN FIELDS

JOHNSTOWN, Col., Aug. 16—Farmers and threshing crews in this section are going about their work armed as a result of several attempts to destroy crops and other property by fire. The depredatins started soon after the arrival of men known to be I. W. W. agitators, who have been spreading dissatisfaction among farm labourers.

On the farm of Henry Brahn, north of here, several acres of wheat in stock were set on fire and the threshing machine was partly burned. Total loss was prevented by rain.

All property in Northern Colorado is heavily guarded at night, and a formal appeal has been made to the State for protection. The perpetrators of any incendiarism will be lynched promptly if caught.

A RED CROSS PICNIC AT CROWE'S LANDING

Event Was Held Instead of Annual Regatta—Big List of Sports —The Prize-winners

CROWE'S LANDING, Aug. 15.—Instead of the annual regatta, the Upper Stoney Lake Campers' and Cottagers' Association held a Red Cross picnic at Crowe's Landing this afternoon, with a combined programme of land and water sports. There was a large attendance, many parties coming from down the lake points, and the weather was ideal. Badges were sold by the young ladies for the benefit of the Red Cross and a substantial sum was realized.

The majority of the contests with the exception of the special canoe race were for the youngsters. There were some big fields of entries, notably in the crab race, which brought out a dozen starters and the walking the greasy pole contest, which drew a field of eighteen competitors and caused great amusement, for the crowd.

The results of the sports were as follows:

Water Events.

Boys' Tandem Canoe— D. Fitzgerald and Harvey.
Men's Single Canoe—1 Blewett, 2 G. Addison.
Girls' Skiff Race—Miss Rathbone.
Crab Race—D. Fitzgerald.
Walking the Greasy Pole—C. Glassey.

Land Events.

Running Race—Five Years and Under—Ross McIntyre.
Running Race—Nine Years and Under—Lois Cuffe.
Running Race —Twelve Years and Under—Louise Burns.
Boot Race— J. Sherin.

In the evening a very enjoyable dance was held in the pavilion at Bellevidere.

Daily Mail Gives Premier Some Advice

Special to The Examiner.

MONTREAL, Aug. 16.—The Mail (Conservative) gives some advice to Sir Robert Borden regarding the story published in the Montreal Star yesterday, to the effect that an election may be deferred until next March. It says: "Sir Robert Borden, it is to be hoped, will promptly disclaim responsibility for these wild proposals with which his name and authority are indirectly connected."

The Mail, apparently, wants an election immediately.

Letter From A Peterboro' Soldier

Mr. G. W. Powell, 588 George street, Assistant Secretary and Inspector for the Children's Aid Society has received the following interesting letter from W. C. Pennington, a former East City boy now with the Canadian forces overseas. The letter follows:

All the news I might send you will get in the papers long before a letter would reach you.

I had the novel experience of having the last squadron of Hun planes directly over our factory, but no bombs were dropped in this district. I got all the girls and others who work here in the bottom floor and as all were making merry and no signs of panic amongst them, I couldn't resist the temptation of seeing what there was to see, so went out on the roof and watched. I saw three distinct fights in the air also the close work of our guns amongst the enemy planes. It was a magnificent sight and only the thoughts of innocent people being killed or injured prevented a sense of pleasure.

From this district they turned to their left and flew over the centre of the city where some damage was done.

A great work is being done, but the task is great and we must not expect great results too quickly. Dear old Canada is doing a great work, which is much talked of over here.

Trusting you are well, I am.

Yours sincerely,
W. C. PENNINGTON.

Jail-Breakers At Stratford Caught Within Short Time

STRATFORD, Aug. 16.—Scaling the walls of the jail grounds, where they had been doing some work, Walter Jones and Russell Bodfield, two young St. Mary's men awaiting trial here on a serious offence, made their escape shortly after 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon. They were later captured near St. Pauls by Chief Lannin and Detective Broadley.

The two young men had been left alone for only a short time and had fifteen minutes start when discovered. They were seen making their way toward the cemetery, as one of them wore the striped trousers. The other was in civilian garb.

The police first saw the escaped prisoners out the St. Marys road, but they managed to elude the officers. However, they were located again near St. Pauls and rearrested.

RICE LAKE FISH MAY BE CAUGHT FOR MEATLESS DAYS

When Cold Weather Arrives, Facilitating the Handling of Fresh Water Varieties — News From Semi-official Source.

Rice Lake fish for Peterborough's meatless days during the late fall and winter months is reported from a semi-official source as a prospect that will probably be realized. The rumour has been heard on the street for the past week or more, and while there are little or no details to the project it has, apparently, been discussed by the food authorities, and is believed to be part of Food Controller Hanna's plan to obtain supplies of fresh water fish. From the bare information received the fishing in Rice Lake will not be begun until the cold weather arrives and the stock can be easily handled. It is understood that the bulk of the catch will be of the tastely mud-cat and not bass and 'lunge, which are fairly plentiful in Rice Lake.

A Bigger Scheme.

The following report from a Toronto source is of somewhat similar nature:

Fifteen hundred licensed Ontario fishermen engaged in commercial fishing, will be asked to co-operate with Hon. W. J. Hanna, Food Controller, in a big scheme to provide the people of Ontario with a constant supply of fresh water fish up to the consuming possibilities of Ontario's population. Furthermore, they will be requested to exercise unusual care in the preservation of Ontario fisheries as a national asset and particularly to avoid the returning to lake waters of offal, which is destructive of the fish inhabiting these waters.

The value of Onario's commercial fisheries last year was approximately $2,800,000, but of the fish caught, only 20 per cent. was consumed in Ontario, the balance, 80 per cent., being marketed in the United States.

PILLAGING TRIPS FORM SUBJECT OF DIARY BY GERMAN

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES.—Documentary evidence has been secured that Germany's youngest classes nineteen and twenty-year-old troops participated in the pillaging and destroying of French village that preceded the German retreat of last March.

The following diary found on a German prisoner of the class of 1917 illustrates the mental attitude of these German boy soldiers towards the "military necessity" of sacking and ruining villages and private property:

"December 7.—Towards evening pillage excursion to nearby village.

"December 20.—Preparatory inspection of Capt. Otto. During the afternoon sneaked different sorts of colors, oils and pinchers. Carried away as souvenirs several beautiful cups.

"December 23.—Painted signs. Pillaging excursion.

"December 24.—Forenoon, still more pillaging. Carried away all sorts of colors, also wine. Afternoon, Christmas feast. We were given some small presents. Sent four packages, one containing Christmas souvenirs, two containing a cup and glass each ((all pillaged) and the third a little teapot. The lieutenant made us a beautiful discourse.

"January 14.—Afternoon at Chauny. There is mighty little left there.

February 21.—We have received orders to destroy all waggons and vehicles that remain at Grandru; to render them useless by sawing them. We destroyed ten.

February 22.—All of the beds, springs and mattresses have been gathered together at Appilly to be sent into Germany.

"March 6.—Worked at an artillery position in the vicinity of Sinceny. Sinceny is in ruins. The villages, including Chauny, are all in flames. All of the fruit trees have been sawn down.

"March 13.—Worked on the roads. Nearly all of the houses of Bichancourt, including the tower of the church, have been blown up by a mine.

"March 17.—At 8:30 we departed from Fressancourt for Mortiers via Versigny. We arrived at Mortiers at 4:30. No cantonment, especially. It is now five days since we have received bread."

Furlough Only In Extreme Cases

Only in extremely urgent cases requiring the soldiers' personal attention will applications for men overseas to return to Canada be granted, according to an announcement in camp orders to-day, which states that "information has been received from the Canadian military authorities in England that under present conditions it is impossible to grant furlough to a soldier to return to Canada for the reason only that one of his relatives is seriously ill or has died. It is pointed out that it is only in extremely urgent cases, where, for instance, business complications in connection with the estate, or the arrangements for the care and maintenance of the remaining members of the family require the soldier's personal attention that applications can be considered."

Must Not Sign Boys Under 18

If boys under 18 years of age are enlisted in the Canadian army the officer or N.C.O., through whom he was recruited will be held responsible and will be dealt with severely.

This announcement is made in camp orders, which state that

"In spite of orders already issued there continues to be an enlistment of boys who are under age. In most cases these boys enlist giving a false age, but in some cases it is claimed that they are induced to do so by the recruiting officer or N.C.O.'s.

"It is to be noted that boys under 18 years of age are not to be enlisted, and that in any cases of doubt as to the age of the candidate, proof is to be required before he is enlisted. The officer commanding the unit to which such a recruit is sent and the officer or N.C.O. through whom he was recruited will be held responsible for seeing that he is of the required military age, and any violatin of this order will be severely dealt with."

A KISS HIS REWARD FOR RESCUING GIRL

Bashful Life Guard at Coney Refuses to Pose as Hero Before Her Father.

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.—After Miss Erma Stumpf, seventeen years old, had been saved from the surf at Coney Island she kissed the life guard and wanted to take him to her home, at No. 1,360 De Kalf avenue, and show him to her father. Eugene Spitz, the guard, was a trifle bashful and, while he accepted the kiss, he refused to accompany the girl home.

Miss Stumpf was beyond her depth when she called for aid, and went down. Miss Ella Daly, of No. 181 Harmon street, Brooklyn, was the first to reach her and she held her head above water until Spitzzz and Adolph Ehrman, also a life guard, reached them with catamarans. Spitz took Miss Stmupf ashore and Ehrman landed Miss Daly, who collapsed as soon as Miss Stumpf was taken from her.

Both were revived on the beach, and when Miss Stumpf had recovered sufficiently she threw her arms about Spitz and embarrassed him by kissing him.

"I want you to come home with me and see my father," she said. "He will be so glad to see the brave and handsome young man, who saved my life."

"Nothin' doing," said the bronzed giant. "J. P. Morgan hasn't got enough money to pay car fare to the homes of all the girls I've dragged out of that ocean."

BANK CLEARINGS

The bank clearings for this week show a slight decrease from the same week last month. The holiday on Monday is accountable for the apparent slackening of business activities:

Clearings week ending Aug. 16th, 1917, $586,168.

Same week last month, $672,504.

Same week last year, $519,575.

Same week two years ago, $365,202.

One On The Barber

A bright little Toronto girl, about nine ar ten years old, who is enjoying the temporary benefits of civilization by a visit to Peterborough, went down town yesterday with a playmate to a barber shop to receive tonsorial attention. Wishing to be amiable the little girl asked the barber, into whose hands she fell, what his name was.

He, wishing to "take a little rise" out of her, with great gravity said his name was Charley "Wheelbarrow."

"And what is your name?"

Quick as a flash, and with equal gravity, she replied, "Florence Dump-cart."

The barber finished his job in silence.

OBJECT TO FIXED PRICES

Non-Partizan League Also Has Other Grievances.

CALGARY, Alta., Aug. 15.—In session here to-day the Alberta executive of the Non-Partisan League decided at a full attendance to send the following wire to Sir Robert Borden:

"We, the Alberta executive of the Non-Partisan League, resent strongly the order of the Board of Grain Supervisors in prohibiting Canadian farmers selling their wheat in United States markets, particularly in the face of the fact that your Government was good enough to remove the duty so that they might have the advantage of these markets.

"We further seriously question the wisdom and fairness of having a predominating number of grain men on the board and insufficient representation of the producing farmer class.

"Further, it is resolved that we are convinced of the injustice of fixing a price on a staple commodity such as wheat unless there is a corresponding fixed price on flour, bacon, machinery for productive purposes, and other staple articles of food and manufacture."

While Ontario dairymen have had an abundance of pasture this season reports come from England of pastures drying up.

Motor Tractors Are Idle When They Should Be Plowing

While ploughing has been in operation during the past two weeks, the two motor tractors that were placed at the disposal of farmers in the Peterborough district last spring are standing idle, one on the farm of Mr. J. Shaughnessy and the other at Mr. Allan Wilson's. Mr. G. A. Gillespie stated that he had urged the district representative of the Department of Agriculture to arrange for the employment of these machines as soon as possible, but thus far there had been no response.

It is stated by way of explanation that it is difficult to engage capable engineers or chauffeurs, but Mr. Gillespie believes that if this problem were approached with the determination to carry it through, efficient drivers could be obtained in Peterborough. Mr. Gillespie is anxious that the motor tractors for farm work be given an opportunity of showing their best work, instead of leaving them to appear at their worst, to the detriment of the expanding use of motor driven apparatus in farm work. It is desired that these two tractors and others if they can be obtained, should be put to work immediately and kept on the farms until frost sets in.

RUSSIA STAUDS FIRM.

Will Work Hand in Hand with Allies to Carry War to a Successful Conclusion.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 16. — The Provisional Russian Government is determined to carry the war to a successful culmination, hand in hand with the Allies, but stands by its declared policy of "no forcible annexations, no punitive indemnities, free development of all peoples."

This was the declaration of the Russian Embassy here. It does not mean a return to the status qou, it was said.

Bolivar Street Boy Seriously Injured

Robert Charlton Fell From a Tree With Disastrous Results

Robert Chartren, the little son of Mrs. Isabella Chartren, 471 Bolivar street, sustained painful injuries last night when he fell from a tree from which he was playing with a bow and arrow. The boy was carried into his home, where Drs. King and McNulty found his left elbow dislocated and a compound fracture of the bone. He was later taken to St. Joseph's Hospital.

Eskimos On Trial In Edmonton Court

EDMONTON, Aug. 16. — The long arm of British law, impersonated by a tiny patrol of three mounted police, reached out 2,200 miles to bring to justice Sinnisak and Uluksuk, Copper Mine Eskimos, charged with the murder of Fathers Rouviere and LeRoux at Bloody Fall, on the fringe of the Arctic Ocean, in November, 1913.

Clothed in their native Habiliments of caribou skin, trimmed with white rabbit skin, these representatives of a pre-historic race, were arraigned in the Supreme Court (criminal) before the Chief Justice of Alberta. The occasion was historic, being the first time in the history of Northern Alberta that a member of the Eskimo race has been called to answer in the courts of justice. C. C. McCaul, K.C., appeared for the Crown and J. E. Wallbridge, K.C., counsel for the accused, pleaded not guilty to this charge.

"The Big Chief (Attorney-General of Alberta), of this country says that you, Sinnisak, killed Father Rouviere at Bloody Fall in November, 1913, in the north country.

Brought 2,200 Miles.

The prisoners were brought a distance of 2,200 miles without handcuffs or leg irons.

Mr. McCaul sketched the evidence which will be submitted by the Crown witnesses telling of the Roman Catholic priests' last trip into the barren lands with the Eskimos; discovery of Father Rouviere's diary near the scene of the alleged murder and the appearance of the accused men in one of th villages bearing rifles identified as the property of the dead priests. The Eskimos were tracked a three days' journey over the ice and are alleged to have made a confession later.

Hearing of the evidence commenced at 2 o'clock and it was agreed between the Chief Justice and counsel that the court sessions would be limited to two hours, as the prisoners' constitutions would not stand a more enforced stay in the hot court-room.

VERY THOROUGH SPIES ARE FOUND IN SWEDISH TOWN

STOCKHOLM.—Allied Secret Service and Intelligence officers, with the co-operation of the police of the Scandinavian countries, have recently succeeded in unearthing and dispersing a large and well-organised German submarine intelligence office headquarters in Gothenburg, Sweden.

In their investigation, the officers discovered a naval intelligence map of the waters surrounding the British Isles and the North Sea. The water area on the map was divided into small squares, each one numbered. An elaborate code was also found for use in conjunction with this map.

Messages based on this code, although apparently reading like private mercantile telegrams and cablegrams, could in reality be deciphered into accurate descriptions of Allied warships or of belligerent or neutral merchantmen.

From the spy headquarters in Gothenburg, agents were sent to Scandinavian ports and attempts were made, whether successful or not, to get them into England. These agents were supplied with the code and maps mentioned and were reporting to headquarters of the sailings of merchantmen. It is supposed that in some way the headquarters in Gothenburg communicated the information to German submarines at sea, probably by wireless stations hidden along the coast.

One of the chief branches of the Gothenburg office was in Christiana, and a Norwegian was actually engaged there to go to England on the espionage service, being supplied with the code and map in addition of the process of invisible ink writing for mail reports. Another branch was in Malmo, Sweden. It is believed that many of the agents of the German spies in Gothenburg were Scandinavians. At about the same time of the discovery of the Gothenburg office, a German giving the name of Klien, was arrested in Sweden, charged with a plot to murder the British Ambassador, Mr. Buchanan in Petrograd. Klien was afterward released but deported from Sweden.

Small Seed Had Big Results

LINDSAY, Aug. 16.—The contention that small potato seed is not conducive to a liberal supply of tubers, is not borne out by the experience of Mr. Thos. Junkin, Pottinger street. Yesterday morning he dug up what had been a seed ptato, about the size of a small plum, which had been in the ground all winter, and found that it had produced nine potatoes—six large ones and three small ones.

War Has Put Great Britain On Her Feet

Dr. Addison, Minister of Munitions, illustrated in a statement in the British House of Commons, how business lessons learned in the course of the war will revolutionize national industry when peace comes. It is not merely a question of the great factories which will be available for peace work, but of new methods and discoveries.

Our steel output next year will be double the pre-war output. We are already making great quantities of artificial manure as by-products. Almost everything is costing less instead of more, although high wages are being paid. Germany's hopes of trade in the future are doomed to disappointment.

An example is provided by potash, for which we used to rely on Germany. Thanks to the ingenuity of Mr. Kenneth Chance and others, a process has been discovered whereby great quantities of potash may be obtained. We shall be able to provide every ounce of potash that the optical glass trade requires and more besides.

Valuable By-Products.

"We shall find ourselves," said Dr. Addison, "with modern coke ovens, equipped with recovery plants, with knowledge of how to extract and use the valuable byproducts, with groups of blast-furnaces, steel furnaces and rolling mills arranged on a big scale, suitably situated and co-ordinated with one another. Instead of being able to produce at home about one-third of the spelter that national industries require, we should have a capacity for producing two-thirds or more. Instead of having to look to Germany for our fertilizers we should be able to produce at home spelter and acid and fertilizers, and many other products related to these trades by modern, economical and efficient methods on a vastly augmented scale.

"At the beginning of the war we found ourselves with no facilities to smelt the copper produced in our own Colonies. We were dependent on Germany for the potash so vital to some of our industries and to our agriculture. The story of glass and dyes is so well known that I need do no more than refer to it, and the catalogue could be continued to a great extent.

"There are two matters of great moment. We have had to import nitrate from Chili, and pyrites from Spain for practically every ton of essential nitrates that we require. I have good hopes of the schemes which are at present in hand, for the use of gas-works ammonia, and for the production of cynamidé, as well as otherwise for obtaining nitrogen.

"Remember that Germany is obtaining all her nitrates without a cargo from Chili. The importance of the solution of this problem as a key to immense industries can scarcely be exaggerated, and no effort should be spared to solve it on commercial lines.

The Empire's Minerals.

"A problem of equal magnitude is the provision of cheap power, and the utilization of inferior coals. Important developments are in progress.

The war has revealed that a certain measure of central control and common direction may place at the disposal of individual effort opportunities otherwise quite unattainable.

"The flow of foreign orders demands for restoration abroad, the needs of our railways and shipyards and common service undertakings show that there are abundant opportunities before us.

"At the direction of the Imperial War Cabinet, the Ministry is taking steps which will assist in providing information on commerical lines about the mineral resources of the Empire. We want information which will be available for the trading community, not simply in general terms, but examined and proved, so that we may be able to know not only what resources there are, but by what methods and at what cost they may best be developed."

SASKATCHEWAN CLUB HAD TO LET OUT GERMAN

REGINA, Sask., Aug. 16—The Saskatchewan provincial tennis tourney was forcibly interrupted by a number of soldiers, who demanded that K. L. Betz, a tennis player of international fame, withdraw and depart for his home at Prussia, Sask. The soldiers threatened to wreck the clubhouse and to stop the tourney by tearing up the courts unless their demands were complied with. They left for the city when assured that Betz would not participate in the remainder of the tourney. Prior to his arrival in Canada in 1910, Betz represented Switzerland in international events, and at one time he played with Germany against Russia in tennis competitions.

WAIT FOR WAR'S END

Imperial Development Board Will Then be Set Up.

LONDON, Aug. 16.—In the Commons debate on the Colonial Office before the vote Mr. McMaster asked whether steps were taken at his suggestion for an Imperial development board. He contended it was premature to discuss conditions after the war, but wished to say the colonies would insist on retaining the German possessions. The Colonial Under-Secretary replied that it was not practicable to set up a development board during the war, as the men who should constitute the board are all busy at other work. Meantime, it was desirable to go forward with the immigration preference.

THE CASE OF THE BELGIAN PRINCE.

After the murders of Edith Cavell and Captain Fryatt, the slaughter of women and children by bombs loosed from Zeppelins and aeroplanes upon unfortified places, the unspeakable crimes against civilians in Belgium and Northern France, the return to barbarism shown by its resort to poison gases, the world should be prepared for any new form of barbarism on the part of Germany; and yet could civilization have thought possible the act of the German submarine commander who deliberately drowned thirty-eight men of the crew of the steamship Belgian Prince?

As has been told by the single American survivor, after the Belgian Prince had been sunk the men of its crew were forced by the German commander to abandon their lifeboats and take their places on the deck of the submarine. Then their boats were sunk and their lifebelts thrown away into the sea, and after a merry jaunt of a few miles to give the unfortunates hope that they were being taken toward some place of safety the submarine submerged, leaving its victims at the mercy of the sea. Only because of his success in hiding a lifebelt under a raincoat did the one survivor live to tell the tale.

The imagination of a savage warrior in the darkest days of the world's history could have conceived no viler deed. And yet there are Germans who speak familiarly of "Gott" and other Germans who prate of chivalry!

Moreover, there are fatuous persons in this country who preach a pacifism and advocate a peace which would mean the triumph over the world of the barbarism guilty of the crime of the Belgian Prince!

WEDDING BELLS

CLEMENTS—CAMPBELL.

At St. Andrew's Manse yesterday afternoon the marriage took place of Miss Charlotte Campbell of Douro, and George Alexander Clements of Dummer Township. Rev. Mr. Rowand performed the ceremony. Mr. and Mrs. Clements will reside in Dummer Township.

LONG—DOWNEY.

St. Peter's Cathedral was the scene of a quiet but pretty wedding on Tuesday morning, August 14th, when Mae, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Downey, was united in matrimony to Mr. Russell Long, Rev. Father Phelan officiating.

They were unattended.

Immediately after the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Long left by the 7:30 train for Toronto and points West for a short honeymoon, after which they will returne to reside in Peterborough.

The young couple were the recipients of a great many useful and valuable gifts.

A quiet wedding was solemnized at 2 o'clock Wednesday afternoon at St. Paul's Church, Bloor street east, when the Venerable Archdeacon Davidson of Guelph, Ont., united in marriage Helen Althea, youngest daughter of Mr. J. G. Howorth, and Bertram Seaborn Hyde of New York city, formerly of Toronto. The pretty young bride looked charming in a French frock of pale pink Georgette crepe, with white fox stole and corsage bouquet of sweetheart roses. She was assisted by Miss Zelta Kindry as bridesmaid, in a white satin Empire frock with touches of pale green. The groom was attended by his brother, Mr. A. M. Hyde of Toronto. Mr. and Mrs. Hyde left immediately after the ceremony for a trip down the St. Lawrence, en route to their future home in New York city. Before departing the bride tossed her bouquet from the deck of the steamer. It was caught by Miss Julia McKenna.

Mr. and Mrs. T. L. Robinson Charlotte street, to whom the bride is a niece, were in Toronto yesterday attending the wedding. Mrs. T. Fitzgerald, who has been making an extended visit at the home of Mr. Howorth, was also present.

Flushing Young Man, Rejected as Physically Unfit, Submits to an Operation.

NEW YORK, Aug. 14.—Pronounced physically unfit for war service because of a hernia, Michael Depham, twenty-three years old, of No. 79 Sinclair avenue, Depham underwent an operation. When he recovers, Dr. Charles B. Story, the operating surgeon said yesterday, young Depham will be able to pass the required physical examination.

"The courage and patriotism of this heroic young man, who did not flinch at the thought of a surgeon's knife when fired by the zeal to fight for his adopted country is one of the splendid object lessons for many Americans that have been drawn thus far in the war," Dr. Story said.

Proud She Was A German Said Mrs. Schwerdt

"I don't propose to wash dirty linen in this court," declared Magistrate Dumble this morning in dismissing a case that grew out of a wrangle between two Victoria Avenue women.

Mrs. R. Lynch, whose husband is in England with the soldiers, stated that she was told of certain statements made about her by Mrs. Schwerdt. At the first opportunity she asked Mrs. Schwerdt if the reports were true, and the latter called her an Irish —, using an expletive that questions the legitimacy of one's natal origin.

Mrs. Schwerdt admitted calling Mrs. Lynch 'dirty Irish." At any rate it was an accepted overt act, and by way of retort Mrs. Lynch held her tongue, but she loosed a right swing to Mrs. Schwerdt's head.

Magistrate Dumble decided to dismiss the charge of insulting language, laid by Mrs. Lynch, and Mr. Joseph Wearing's strenuous objections went for naught. Mr. Gordon, representing the defendant, didn't add oil to the disturbed waters by remarking that Lynch was having a fat time in England. Both Mr. Wearing and Mrs. Lynch took exception to that remark, and in the meantime Mrs. Schwerdt and her husband had passed out of the room and descended to the police station.

To some remark on her way out she retorted to the effect that she was a German and proud of it; furthermore she would rather be a German than a lot of Irish, English, and Scotch.

"Come on, you married one of them," said Schwerdt, whose name sounds Teutonic, though his accent seems English.

"God help him," sang out Sergt. Kidd, as a parting shot.

Some one remarked that if the situation were reversed the woman's defiant bragging would have earned for her a term in jail if not a worse punishment.

A Busy Morning.

This morning's court was like old times. Chief Thompson had a lengthy docket for the Magistrate's consideration. T. O. Donaldson was fined five dollars for a breach of the traffic by-law, having cut a corner more sharply than the by-law permits.

Three boys were charged, in a juvenile session, of disorderly conduct, in front of one of the theatres. They were remanded until to-morrow. Apparently these are a sample of the many boys who grow up unruly under lax home conditions and as a finished product of such conditions, simply plague the neighbours and other citizens who are unable to interfere with them.

A Regular Lothario.

A tall, lanky Lothario accosted a girl on the street Monday night with the stone age saluation of "Can I see you home," garnished with the modern smartness that is regarded as a desirable acquisition. The persistency of this fellow forced the girl to call at the police station, and seek the protection of the police. This morning he was lucky to get a dismissal.

Another youth was held on a serious charge. The prosecution asked for a remand until to-morrow.

OF INTEREST TO FARMERS

There will probably be a good deal of grain left shelled on the ground from this year's harvest. Turn it into pork.

A new fungus disease as well as a new insect pest have been found attacking the Ohio potato crop this year. The insect is a green and pink louse that has become quite common over the State. The fungus trouble carries a leaf spot and roll infection but this can be controlled by spraying.

The man who buys meals in small amounts as needed and buys the meal cheapest per hundredweight is a poor business man and does not appreciate the real value of feeds.

An English farmer writes in Farmer and Stock Breeder that he started last spring on 500 acres, with only two regular men, and has had to make up with woman labour and soldiers and a Mogul tractor.

WAR TAX ON CARD GAMES.

Hungarian Town Charges 25 Cents for a Permit to Play.

A report found in Budapest newspapers recently received in London shows that the Hungarian City of Debreczin has introduced the latest form of war-time permits—a ticket without which no card games may be played in public resorts. The permits cost 25 cents each, and, as gambling is popular in the community, the new scheme is expected to be a satisfactory producer of revenue.

Preliminary Estimate Of The Crop Yield Of The Dominion

Average Yield of Fall Wheat is Greater Than Last Year But the Total Estimated Yield Will Be Lighter—Area and Yield of Hay, Clover and Alfalfa.

SPRING SOWN GRAINS

OTTAWA, August 17.—The Census and Statistics Office has issued preliminary estimate of the yield of fall wheat, hay and clover and alfalfa for 1917, and a report on the condition of other field crops based on the returns of correspondents at the end of July.

AREA AND YIELD OF FALL WHEAT, HAY AND CLOVER AND ALFALFA.

The preliminary estimate of the average yield per acre of fall sown wheat for 1917 is 22 bushels as compared with 21½ bushels in 1916, 29.41 bushels in 1915 and 21.70 bushels, the average of the seven years 1910 to 1916. The total yield of fall wheat for 1917 is therefore now estimated at 17,816,000 bushels, from 809,250 harvested acres as compared with 20,060,000 bushels from 932,500 acres in 1916. In Ontario, the chief fall wheat province, the total yield is 14,515,000 bushels from 656,500 acres, as compared with 16,465,000 bushels from 774,800 acres in 1916, the average yields per acre being 22.11 bushels in 1917 and 21¼ bushels in 1916. Saskatchewan now ranks as the second fall wheat province with 2,220,000 bushels from 105,700 acres, and Alberta is third with 836,000 bushels from 38,000 acres. The total yield of hay and clover is placed at 13,879,000 tons from 7,824,000 acres, as compared with 14,637,000 tons, the record crop from 7,892,900 acres in 1916. This year's total yield of hay and clover has only twice been exceeded, viz, last year and in 1911, when the yield was 13,989,000 tons. The average yield per acre this year is 1.70 ton as compared with 1.85 ton in 1916, and 1.62 ton in 1911. The yield from alfalfa is 152,200 tons from 86,500 acres as compared with 260,500 tons from 89,470 acres last year, the average yields per acre being 1.76 ton as compared with 2.91 tons.

CONDITION OF SPRING-SOWN GRAINS.

The condition of spring wheat for the whole of Canada has receded from 85 p.c. of the standard at the end of June to 77 at the end of July. Oats show 76 compared with 85, barley 78 against 86, rye 81 against 88, and peas 85 against 89. The condition of other crops on July 31 was as follows: Beans 74, buckwheat 86, mixed grains 90, flax 88, corn for husking 76, potatoes 84, turnips 90, mangolds 86, hay and clover 86, alfalfa 86, corn for fodder 77, sugar beets 88, and pastures 83. Converted into a standard wherein 100 represents the average yield per acre of the nine years 1908 to 1916, the condition of the principal grain crops at July 31, 1917, was as follows: Fall-wheat 94, spring wheat 92, all wheat 93, rye 96, barley 93, oats 89, potatoes 99, and flax 107. That is to say the yields per acre of these crops, according to their appearance on July 31 are expected to be below the average yields of the previous nine years by 6 p.c. for fall wheat, 8 p.c. for spring wheat, 7 p.c. for all wheat, 4 p.c. for rye, 7 p.c. for barley, 12 p.c. for oats, and 1 p.c. for potatoes.

Throughout Eastern Canada the condition of the crops generally on July 31 is reported as excellent. In Ontario spring wheat is marked as high as 91 and oats and barley are 93; but in the west excessive heat and drought during July brought the condition down by July 31 to figures below 70 p.c. of the standard, spring wheat being 68 in Manitoba, 68 in Saskatchewan and 64 in Alberta, whilst oats are 62 in Manitoba, 58 in Saskatchewan and 57 in Alberta. Reports received during the last fortnight are, however, of somewhat more reassuring character. The Saskatchewan Department of Agriculture telegraphed (August 8) as follows: "Cool weather of past week and local showers generally have done much good to improve crops conditions. Wheat is filling well and cutting will be general in about 10 days. Oats are very short in straw and from present indications will be very low in yield." The Alberta Department of Agriculture telegraphs (August 11): "Heavy rains and cooler weather prevailed throughout most of province during past week and greatly benefited late crops. Grain harvesting will be general in several districts next week. Light frost in few districts on August 8 did very little damage excepting to vegetables in one or two places."

CASH WHEAT ADVANCED SLIGHTLY

Germans Lied On Allied Losses

Allied Naval Conference Find Shipping Figures Streched.

PARIS, Aug. 17.—German figures on losses of allied shipping by submarine attacks are exaggerated by forty per cent., according to findings of the allied naval conference here.

This official announcement was made here yesterday.

Only 250,000 Tons Monthly.

LONDON, Aug. 17.—Premier Lloyd George announces that the net losses of allied shipping from submarine attacks in the last six months have not averaged more than 250,000 tons monthly.

U-Boat Victim's Surgeon Tells Of "Mystery Ships" In The Danger Zone

Dr. Taft, of the Lost Ultonia, Describes Convoy in Danger Area—Vessel Nearly Non-Sinkable—Prussian Submarine Avoided Detection in Sun's Glare and Sank Steamship.

SUCTION THEORY DISPROVED

NEW YORK, Aug. 17.—The story of the sinking of the steamship Ultonia, of the Cunard line, by a Prussian submarine, was told for the first time by Dr. Robert MacLean Taft, chief surgeon of the steamship Cedric, who had been engaged in a similar capacity on board the Ultonia. The narrative is particularly interesting on account of the mention in it of "mystery ships" and the wonderfully minute attention which it shows the commanders of the Prussian submarines are paying to every trifle that may prove advantageous to them.

"We were nearing the British coast at sunset on June 28," said Dr. Taft, "when a so-called mystery ship joined us to act as convoy. There was reason to believe that a U-boat was in the neighborhood, and both the mystery ship and we were zigzagging along in parallel lines, several miles apart.

"A mystery ship is the name given to half a dozen or more steamships which, to all appearances, are the regulation "tramps" but the sides of which can be let down by hydraulic pressure at the same moment that 6-inch guns are brought up ready for action. These vessels draw only eight feet of water and have a speed of twenty-one knots, and each of their compartments is blocked off, so that if damaged by a shell or torpedo the bulkheads would drop automatically and keep the vessels afloat, unless practically the whole bottom was ripped out of them.

VESSEL SINKS QUICKLY

"Well, we knew and appreciated the fact that our lumbering looking companion was one of the formidable mystery ships, and felt comparatively safe. Nowhere, as far as the glasses could reach, was there any sign of danger. The sun was getting low on the horizon and the glare of it baffled our view toward the west. Suddenly a shell struck our vessel and then a torpedo. There was precious little time to lose. There was no careening nor listing, but a steady and almost perceptible lowering of the vessel as she began to sink gradually.

"We afterward learned that the U-boats have a tricky way of getting between their contemplated victims and the sun; for then even the most powerful marine glasses fail to disclose anything on the glittering scintillating surface of the water.

"There were one hundred of us aboard the Ultonia and only one perished in the escape. The one exception was a negro named George Washington, and it was due only to his eagerness to escape that he perished.

"When I started to get down into a lifeboat a seaman hurled a life preserver at my head with such force that it stunned me and my hand slipped along the rope. So terrific was the blow that it actually made me turn like a pinwheel. For ten feet I glided down the rope, my hands being torn to the bones by the friction. I held on, however, and got a firm clutch with my legs.

"By an effort in which my ability to dance well came to my aid I made a series of little 'runs' along the sheer side of the vessel, until I got sufficient momentum and then swung loose and dropped right into the boat. It was a jump of perhaps ten feet.

"SUCTION" THEORY DISPROVED

"The reason the negro wanted to cut the rope and put away so precipitately was that he feared that the suction which would be caused by the sinking of the Ultonia would drag down the lifeboat. Well, we had not rowed more than thirty feet from the doomed vessel when she sank, straight on her keel. Her going down did not have any perceptible influence upon the lifeboat, although we were near enough to have been dragged down if there had been any truth in the time-honoured tradition about 'suction.' Another fortunate circumstance was that the vessel had not listed toward us. If she had we would certainly have been crushed beneath her.

"The mystery ship now came to us and some one aboard her shouted 'Don't worry; we'll pick you up in a couple of hours. We're going after the submarine.

"At first we were a bit puzzled and wished the mystery ship as well as the U-boat a merry passage to the nether regions, but after a few moments the humor of the thing dawned upon us and every man of us joked, laughed, chatted and lighted a cigarette. I wonder what the psychological reason for such levity at so serious a time might be. I am told that it almost always takes place.

"After we had been rowing about six miles the mystery ship returned and landed us next morning at Falmouth. At the hotel there I was told that the room I was occupying had been occupied several days before by a woman from India and her two daughters, victims of a submarine. Their vessel was sunk and their lifeboats afterward were deliberately shelled. The one in which the three women were was hit and eight men were killed and several others wounded."

Dr. Taft, who is a distant relative of William Howard Taft, said that one of the most dangerous spots for mariners at night is off Beachy Head-light in the English Channel.

"U-boats watch for their prey there on the darkest nights, and often sink them. For a long time it was a matter of speculation how the steamships could be seen, covered as they were by the background of cliffs rising nearly six hundred feet above the level of the sea. And what do you think it was that enabled the U-boats to discern the vessels. The firely like flashes from the lighthouse on top of Beachy Head. These flashes occur every thirty seconds at least, each time only for the fraction of a second, and yet those Prussian pirates were able to take advantage even of so infinitesimal a point."

FRENCH CO-OPERATED WITH THE BRITISH

Shared In the Credit For the Capture of the Town of Langemarck

LONDON, Aug. 17.— It is believed that both French and British troops took part in the attack which resulted in the capture of Langemarck yesterday. The French have been holding a portion of the line in this region.

Langemarck is a little over five miles north-east of Ypres on the road leading to Poelcappelle and just across the Steenbeck River. It is a little over four miles east of Bixschoote.

Yesterday's announcement recalls the tragedy of April, 1915, known as the battle of St. Julien. Canadians fought and fell on the field of valour, and the Germans realized that the British cubs had inherited the lion's do-or-die courage. Gassed at Langemarck, the Canadians were forced back upon St. Julien. There the Canadian Highlanders tried to hold the bridge and hung on until they were surrounded. They fought until their ammunition was exhausted, and then hundreds were taken prisoners. But, with other Canadian troops nearby, they had held back the enemy until Ypres, the gateway to Calais, was safe.

to learn real food values? It is what you digest, not what you eat, that furnishes strength for the day's work. Many foods tax the digestive powers to the utmost without supplying much real nutriment. Shredded Wheat Biscuit is all food and in a form that is easily digested. It is 100 per cent. whole wheat. For breakfast, dinner or supper it takes the place of meat, eggs and potatoes. You don't know how easily you can do without meat or potatoes until you try it. Delicious with sliced bananas, berries, or other fruits, and milk. Made in Canada.

It's The Stropped Blade That Gives The Perfect Shave

How about your morning shave? Does your razor strop the blade for you, giving you a cool, clean shave day after day? Can you clean and dry your Safety Razor without taking it to pieces—without even removing the blade?

These advantages are only possible with the AutoStrop Razor.

The stropping of the blade is not only necessary from the standpoint of economy, but is the only way a "real" shave can be had. The AutoStrop can be used unstropped the same as the ordinary safety razors, but when you once realize the difference between a stropped and an unstropped edge you will then appreciate the Self-Stropping feature of the AutoStrop razor.

Our Unusual Offer—

Borrow an AutoStrop Razor and try it

Pay nothing—deposit nothing. Decide upon its purchase after you have compared its wonderful blade service and smooth-shaving quality with other razors you have used or are using. Take it home and shave with it as freely as if you had purchased it outright. Your dealer will lend it to you for that purpose. Then come to a decision whether you will keep it or return it. We authorize dealers to loan the AutoStrop Razor on 30 days' trial and we stand back of the offer.

"MOUNTAIN MADNESS"

By Anna Alice Chapin

"Mr. Hale," she said abruptly, and with a sort of sweet authority, very characteristic of her, "won't you let me speak to you a moment?"

Though she did not add the word "alone" it made itself almost audible in the pause that followed her swift speech. And her simple and naturally imperial manner robbed the request of any element of discourtesy to the Toll Keeper. Here, it seemed, was an inherently royal young creature so sure of herself as to be able to command and request with equal immunity from the suggestion of offense.

Without a word Martin Hale rose and, going to the door, held it open for her. She passed through it, and he followed, closing it behind them. Polly came slowly out from the room and her eyes grew vaguely troubled as she stared at the door through which they had gone. Her father looked at her and sighed. Then he fixed his wise old eyes once more upon the fire before him and went on smoking.

Outside Enid and Hale stood in the swirl of the quickening breezes that swept the plateau before the Toll-gate House. The sky was beryl green in the west; the valleys lay a tumbled chaos of black and purple and blue . . . . the sigh of innumerable voices was in the air—a faint and plaintive clamor of urgent yet untranslatable tongues. The cold, clean, ceaseless savor of the hilltops reached their nostrils and the delicate chill of summer nights among the clouds made Enid shiver lightly.

"Tell me, Mr. Hale," she began quickly, and then she hesitated. The mountaineer was looking at her in a steady, disconcerting sort of way. He lurked big against the evening sky, and with nothing behind him on the horizon line it gave her a queer sense that he was for the moment the only fact of creation. She did not quite know how to go on. But, as he waited in that still strength of his which thrilled her with its potentialities, she made shift to begin again, more haltingly.

"She—she told me that you were in some sort of trouble."

"Polly?"

She nodded.

"Polly oughtn's to talk," was his comment, accompanied by a frown; she could see it in this open half-light of eventide.

"But you said so yourself, didn't you—or implied it?" Enid went on swiftly, her great eyes pleading and clear. "I must know of some way to help! Won't you show me how to help you,—to help you all?"

It was not altogether her fault that the last word came as an afterthought—even though a hurried one. The man's personality was unmistakably convincing, when she was with him it was paramountly him first of all whom she wished to help. She was not flirting with him: she was merely demonstrating the fact that she was a real woman and he a real man.

Martin Hale hesitated, but it was something the same with him as it had been with Polly: the spell of the golden eyes held him in spite of himself, and drew from him words that he had never meant to utter.

"There's—trouble in the Valley!" he muttered.

"I know that. Is it—a sort of double trouble? Something that calls you there that you don't want to answer to. Is it?"

The man did not answer at once, and she realized that he was sparring for tie, and time she would not grant him. She had an inspiration. Hers were not the instincts of Polly, but they were feminine, which is saying something.

In her well-ordered young life she seldom had a chance, a good, full-sized chance—to use her intuitions. Here it seemed was one, and all the adventurous, masked soul of the girl rose to the opportunity of doing something at last!

"Mr. Hale," she said, in a lower, but a very different tone, "something is being done—or is going to be done—that is wrong.... Isn't that true?"

He assented silently.

When she spoke again it was in hushed tones, and yet it came to him like a kind of cry:

"I don't know any thing about this situation, and—and—I don't suppose a girl's much good anyway in times like this! But I'm going to stick to you people! Somehow I know you're right! And there might be something I could do—I don't know yet——"

Her voice failed her, but she still faced him in the twilight, eager and honest. Martin Hale responded to her instantly and without forethought.

"It's all in a nutshell, Miss Forsythe. Since Polly's told you so much there is no need hiding a little more. The boys here on the range have something on foot to-night that Mr. Mason and I would like to stop if we could. But we're stalled every way."

"If it's anything big—" she broke in.

"It is — big," he answered her. "You see, I'm trusting you."

"Thank you," she said, looking out over the blue-green mist of the shadowed valleys. She was not ironic. It was the finest compliment ever paid her yet. "Go on," she said.

And Martin Hale went on:

"It's going to mean the loss of money to some people, certain sure. And maybe it'll be loss of life to others. I dont' know that."

Enid shuddered.

"But," she gasped," isn't there anything to be done? Oh—I know—I understand—it's dangerous to go back on your friends, but oughtn't real right to come first? Oh, please!" She was pleading with him and her voices shook. "Isn't there any way?"

"I—I could tip off the sheriff's gang," he said in a low voice. "I mean that, you know—tip off; just that, and no more. I wouldn't tell on a pal anyway!" he ended fiercely.

"But if you could save life and property——"

"I'd do it!" he declared, flinging up his handsome head. "I'd do it, and take my chances afterwards—if I could!"

"And why can't you——"

"Because I have not a horse! Easy, isn't it?" He laughed bitterly.

"I don't understand!" Enid faltered.

"I tramped over to-day from my own shack," he said, "and if there is any tipping-off to be done, it's got to be quick!"

"But surely they have a horse here!"

Hale laughed, almost angrily.

"A plug! That couldn't do a stiff stretch at a stiff pace even in daylight! No, thanks! I want a real horse. If I were at heart one of—the gang—I don't suppose I'd mind being a horsethief, and I would have taken Radnor's. But—I won't!"

There was just a moment of breathless waiting. Then Enid turned to him quickly.

"Take mine!" she said.

CHAPTER VII.
MOUNTAIN LAUREL.

There is rock to the left, and rock to the right, and low lean thorn between,
And ye may hear a breech-bolt snick where never a man is seen,
There was not a man but carried his feud with the blood of the mountaineer.

Rudyard Kipling.

Meanwhile, Jack Radnor was climbing Gray Crag in quest of mountain laurel for the girl that he loved.

Gray Crag certainly presented some interesting exhibits of what Martin Hale had called "stiff mountain climbing." Jack was not an expert mountain climber, though he had done his bit both in Switzerland and the Rockies; but he prided himself upon being able to do whatever any ordinary able-bodied man could do—not superlatively well, of course, for he was perfectly modest about his own capabilities, but certainly creditably. At first it surprised and then annoyed him to find that Gray Crag was the stiffest proposition in the climbing line ever put up to him yet. Then a sort of half-amused, half-grim defiance filled him. Climb Gray Crag, would he? Well watch him!

Climbing Gray Crag was a good deal like walking up a wall, with the added handicap of ledges to which one had to crawl from underneath, and deceptive footholds that were not footholds at all, but shivering flimsy lumps of sand.

Occasionally a pebble started by his heavy riding boot would rattle off into silence. Occasionally, the bush or cluster of growing twigs he caught at for his balance came away in his hand, leaving him for the moment slightly sick, as, glancing over his shoulders he saw what lay beneath and behind him. Radnor was very far removed from being a coward, but—he had an imagination.

The fear of high places is, in normally courageous natures, changed to the vital realization of high places. Jack Radnor, climbing, pausing, and working his way up sheer rock walls, and granite granite slabs, had the strange sensation known to aviators and alpine adventurers. He was detached from the world, high above it, spiritually and materially superior to it, and yet—at its mercy. The lower mountains tumbled together in huge and mad disorder, the valleys growing misty with the gathering dusk, the rivers and the ponds that he could now only locate by some occasional pin-point of light—they all lay far, far below, mysterious and superbly cruel. He was an atom clinging to a mast a league high, and a hungry ocean waited for him.

Once a great bird winged past him with a rush and startled cry, and his hold nearly loosened. Luckily he had an unusually steady head and had never been dizzy in his life.

After a century or so, he pulled himself up to an inconceivably narrow summit, and drenched and aching, he threw himself down to rest.

Over him the blue sky was turning to violet. A faint rose glow was stealing into it—a tint reflected in the blooming masses about him. For he had found the mountain laurel—there was no question about that. As he lay at full length he reached out a lazy hand and pulled a cluster of the tiny pink cups to his face: they had the wild flowers. After a minute he rose, and gathered an armful of the lovely things.

And then he started, for at the root of the laurel shrubs lay a revolver—a heavy and old weapon, which had seen service.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Two Kinds of Sovereigns

By DONALD CHAMBERLIN

Aaron Skinner, an American, traveling abroad, found himself one day at a little inn in the dukedom of Hesse-Meiningen. It was the fall of the year, and Skinner was a Nimrod.

"Any shooting about here?" he asked of the landlord.

"A little, herr—that is, the preserves of the grand duke are near here, and sometimes the birds fly out into the woods near by. One can occasionally pick off a brace that have strayed."

"Can you lend me a fowling piece?"

"Certainly, herr."

The landlord got the gun and appurtenances and handed them to the American, saying:

"Be careful, herr, not to trespass on the grand duke's grounds, for if caught there you would be arrested for poaching, and it might go hard with you."

Skinner went forth to pick up "a few crumbs from the rich man's table." One may stray a long way after game without knowing it, and he had been wandering an hour without realizing how far he had gone or how many walls or fences he had passed over when suddenly, having crawled under a rusty wire netting, he found himself amid a plentiful supply of pheasants. He had brought one down and was picking it up when, hearing a footstep, he looked around and saw a man with a gun in his hand looking at him.

"A good shot," remarked the other.

"Oh, that's nothing. I learned to shoot in America, where we still have some wild game left. That's shooting. This is merely execution."

"Indeed! How do you happen to be executing birds here?"

"I am a tourist, stopping at the inn. The landlord told me I might happen to get a few birds in this wood that have flown out of the grand duke's preserve. The duke seems to be losing a good many hereabout."

"He can spare them; he has more than he could shoot in a lifetime. So you are an American?"

"I am."

"And every American is a sovereign, I hear."

"He thinks he is."

"What do you mean by that?"

"Didn't you know that we have kings and queens in America?"

"No; how do you make that out?"

"An American king is the political boss controlling the region in which he lives."

"And the queen?"

"Our queens are our wives and Health Restored by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Jamaica, N. Y.—"I suffered greatly with my head and with backache, was weak, dizzy, nervous, with hot flashes and felt very miserable, as I was irregular for two years. One day when I was feeling unusually bad my sister-in-law came in and said, 'I wish you would try Lydia E. Pinkham's Compound.' So I began taking it and I am now in good health and am cured. I took the Compound three times a day after meals, and on retiring at night. I always keep a bottle in the house."—Mrs. L. N. BURNHAM, 35 Globe Ave., Jamaica, N. Y.

Women who recover their health naturally tell others what helped them. Some write and allow their names and photographs to be published with testimonials. Many more tell their friends.

believe he has a lot to say about the government, and the wives and sweethearts make us think we are ruling them with undisputed sway."

"And you think that the sovereignty of the boss is preferable to that of a king?"

"Decidedly. He doesn't have a royal family to support."

"But he bleeds you through jobs."

"Certainly, but he can't plunge us into a war whenever he likes, which is far more expensive."

The man smiled. "You have a pungent way of putting things, my friend. I confess you entertain me. I have a shack near here. I would be pleased to have you take luncheon with me."

"With pleasure."

Stuffing the bird he had shot into his game bag he went with the man through the wood till he came to a sumptuous lodge, about which persons in gorgeous livery were moving. When the huntsmen came up to them they saluted respectfully, and the man told one of them to take the guest to a room for a toilet. When the visitor was ready the two sat down to luncheon. The principal dish served was a brace of pheasants.

"I presume these birds originally belonged to the grand duke," remarked Skinner.

"They did."

"What kind of a chap is he?"

"He's not a bad fellow. Suppose I were to go to America. Do you suppose I could become one of your boss kings?"

"I don't think it would pay you to be one of our princes of the blood. They usually originate, like the oyster, on a muddy bottom and work up to a surface of slime."

"But don't you object to being governed by such persons?"

"Oh, no. At least nobody does except the reformers."

"Who are the reformers?"

"They are the persons who are trying to get into the bosses' places."

"But haven't you any real reformers in America?"

"Not ordinarily. The people haven't time for reform; we're too busy. Occasionally on a big job, like breaking up swindling places, races, for instance, we all butt against it together. But we don't follow it up. We're rich. We can afford to stand to be robbed."

"Then you don't think it would pay me to give up my job here and go to America as one of the rulers there?"

"What is your job?"

"Grand Duke of Hesse-Meiningen."

Skinner was raising a glass of wine to his lips when this announcement was made. He paused and looked at his entertainer.

"And I was shooting in your preserves?"

"Yes. You had doubtless got into them unintentionally, but you were quite welcome."

"No," said Skinner after some thought, "it wouldn't pay you, and it wouldn't pay us."

A "Sidereal Day."

In answering a correspondent who asked the meaning of the term "sidereal time" the Irish Times explains that that is the only truly scientific manner of recording time and is that which astronomers and navigators use. A "sidereal day" is the precise time taken by the earth in revolving on its axis and is twenty-three hours, fifty-six minutes and four seconds. Our sundials, however, record a very different day.

If you set up a sundial in a garden and observe when it is noon today and again tomorrow you will find that it exceeds the "sidereal day" by three minutes and fifty-six seconds. The difference is due to the distance that the earth has traveled on its orbit while it has been revolving on its axis. The orbit motion makes it necessary for the earth to turn nearly four minutes longer in order to bring any place to the same position with regard to the sun that it had on the previous day.

The Novice's Mistake.

In "Tales of the Flying Service" C. G. Grey tells about a strange entry in the official report of an officer who had recently joined the service and was sent to pass a seaplane through its test for the English navy. He had to go up as a passenger with the constructor's pilot and to keep a log of what occurred during the test.

This is what he put down: "9:05 a. m. left slip; 9:10 a. m. altimeter shows 300 feet above sea; 9:12 a. m. curious phenomenon. Met a seagull flying backward!"

That meant that the machine, flying at the rate of about eighty miles an hour, overtook a seagull—which is not a fast flyer—going at about forty miles an hour, and that up in the air, without any background to give a proper sense of direction, the bird looked as if it were flying toward them tail first. Probably the officer knows better now.

Teach Children Thrift.

We Americans are notoriously the most thriftless of peoples. You have heard how much we throw away. We are too prone to think of thrift as stinginess. We hate to hear about saving. Dorothy Canfield Fisher in her recent book, "Self Reliance," gives parents a strong word of warning. She says:

"There is nothing in the fact of being children which need cut off our sons and daughters from a great deal of accurate information and considerable practical experience with the ins and outs of wise money spending. But there is a great deal in the fact of their being Americans which will shut them off from such information and experience unless parents make a very determined effort to see that they get the proper training, for the whole spirit of our country and age is against us in the effort."

The City of the Dove.

When mighty Amru went to conquer Egypt he camped on the east bank of the Nile opposite Memphis, that great twenty mile long capital of mud bricks whose western verge was the pyramids and whose mud brick houses have all vanished. Amru crushed the Egyptians and came back to get his camp to move over and occupy Memphis. A dove had built in the folds near the top of his tent. Blood bathed Amru, the ruthless, would not let her be disturbed. A new city started about his tents. It grew northward along the Nile. It is today Cairo. Memphis is only a name.

Can You?

Here are a few things that you cannot do:

You cannot jot down the square root of two.

You cannot sneeze or yawn with your head under water.

You cannot state the number of buttons on your clothes.

You cannot draw an envelope by only looking at the paper in a mirror.

You cannot put your left foot and shoulder against a wall and then raise the other foot.

And yet you think you are clever!—London Answers.

That Was Different.

Mrs. Tittle—What a beautiful world it must have been when there were only Adam and Eve in it! There was nobody to say nasty things about them. Mrs. Tattle—But, then, they had nobody to talk about. Mrs. Tittle—Well, I guess, after all, the world has improved since their time

Ahead of the Times.

"The trouble with my boy Josh is that he's always ahead of the times," remarked Farmer Corntossel.

"What has he done?"

"Went to town to see about a position. He found a strike in progress and joined the strike before he got the job."

Our Vanishing Forests.

The ax and the saw are insanely busy, chips are flying thick as snowflakes, and every season thousands of acres of priceless forests, with their underbrush, soils, springs, climate, scenery and religion, are vanishing away in clouds of smoke.—John Muir.

Once Bitten, Etc.

"Why did that brilliant woman marry such a stupid man?"

"Because her first husband was a genius."

IT'S COMING

EXAMINER AND MERCHANTS

Great DOLLAR DAY
MONEY SAVING EVENT
Will soon be here

GRATIFIED by the enthusiasm of the people over the previous Dollar Days in Peterboro, and urged by the people from outside who were unable to attend the last one owing to bad roads, the Examiner is again co-operating with the Merchants in featuring a Mid-summer Dollar Day.

WEDNESDAY, AUG. 22

The date selected should be the most suitable of all the summer season, for a record crowd to attend from outside points. There's everything to come for, and only regrets if you don't. There's a company of hustling merchants preparing a feast unequalled in the history of the city. In any line of goods you want, you will find your Dollar has a buying power you would have thought impossible. As Dollar Day selling is just for one day, the merchants in order to add zest to the excitement, make their offerings look reckless, but it is because they have entered into the spirit of the thing, and they are bound to do their part at considerable loss.

Estimate the NUMBER of these Blanks that will be filled in and Dropped into the Ballot Box at the Examiner Office by 7 p. m. on DOLLAR DAY.

As a guide in estimating the probable number of blanks that will be used, the three previous Dollar Day results may be studied. On the first one, March 12, 1914, with good weather and roads, there were 16,000 blanks dropped into the box at the Examiner Office. On the next Dollar Day, in 1915, with bad weather and impassable roads, the result showed only 10,807 estimate blanks put in the box. On the last summer Dollar Day, held in August, 1916, when holiday season affected the crowd, there were 7,054 blanks dropped in the box. With these figures as a guide an intelligent estimate can be made if the weather and season are taken into consideration."

The Dollar Day crowd is the happiest gathering that meets in Peterboro in the year.

HERE'S A SECRET

If you want to cure that skin disease of yours, you can only do so by using an ointment so refined as to be capable of penetrating to the root of the disease. Zam-Buk is capable of doing this, whereas ordinary ointments remain on the surface skin.

Besides its wonderful power of penetration, Zam-Buk is such a strong germicide that germs cannot live where Zam-Buk is applied. Thus, all germs, both on the surface and in the underlying tissues, are destroyed. Then the herbal essences, of which Zam-Buk is composed, promote the growth of new tissue, and a complete and permanent cure is the result.

Prove it for yourself. All druggists, 50c. box, or Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price.

ZAM-BUK

Germany Must Pay Damages

HOW much will enemy Governments owe Great Britain for their flagrant violation of the laws of civilized warfare? asks The London Mirror.

Although it is as yet impossible to give even an approximate estimate of the claims which British subjects are making, the books of account are being prepared, and the credit side of the ledger is bound to assume stupendous proportions.

The claims against enemy Governments are for the most part either—

1. Claims for compensation in respect of property belonging to British subjects which had been requisitioned, confiscated, or sequestered by an enemy Government, or—

2. Claims for compensation in respect of loss caused by the destruction of life or property on sea or land by acts contrary to the laws of war.

Before the war broke out there were some moneys due British subjects from enemy Governments. These claims arose from the supply of goods such as machinery, foodstuffs, and merchandise of all sorts to foreign Governments—outstanding debts due, or accruing at that date.

There were also in some cases pensions due from foreign Governments to British subjects formerly in their employ.

Then when the war broke out and a "state of war" was formally declared, it gave to enemy Governments certain conditional rights which they did not before possess. One was the right to requisition goods belonging to "the enemy."

Great quantities of British goods warehoused at Hamburg and elsewhere were on the outbreak of war thus requisitioned.

The Government of the country in which enemy goods are warehoused is entitled to requisition—"commandeer," they call it in South Africa—anything they desire, from a man's hat to a company's gasworks or omnibus.

This seizure, however, is subject to the liability of the requisitioning Government to pay for the goods when the state of war comes to an end.

Under The Hague Convention, when a state of war arises belligerents have the right to detain merchant ships of the enemy with the obligation to return them to their owners at the end of the war. Whether there exists the obligation to maintain them in good repair is an open question.

Since the outbreak of war Germany has sequestrated much British property, and the owners have the right to ask for its return, or compensation, after the war.

If it has consisted of a business it may have been "improved," and if so the owner would have no claim if ever fortunate enough to be reinstated in his property.

The "wrongful acts" of the enemy, which have resulted, on the other hand, in many of the claims, include the indiscriminate sowing of mines and the sinking-without-notice policy of German submarines.

These two items have been fruitful sources of personal damage and loss of life and property, for which in the ordinary course of justice compensation would have to be paid.

The enemy has a right to capture merchant vessels and, if unable to take them into port as "prize," to sink them; but there is no justification and no precedent for the many flagrant outrages of which Germany has been guilty, of endangering and sacrificing the lives of passengers and crews of neutral as well as enemy ships.

Full compensation for such wrongful acts is to be demanded, and scores of claims have already been filed.

There are cases, again, of British firms and companies which had established businesses in enemy countries before the war.

Most, if not all, of these concerns in Germany have been placed under official control, and some have been sequestrated.

At the end of the war the British owners will have a claim against the enemy Government in respect of the property which has been sequestrated.

Insurance companies and underwriters have filed very large claims against Germany in respect of losses of merchant vessels, and there are claims by the former for premiums due from enemy insurance offices as well as for losses under reinsurance treaties with such companies.

A Loyal Husband.

Lady Smith-Dorrien, who is engaged in adding to the comforts of wounded British soldiers in English hospitals, tells an amusing—and affecting—story of a private soldier who had just recovered from a severe wound, according to The Youth's Companion. Feeling ill and very homesick, he went to headquarters to obtain leave of absence. "I haven't seen my wife for more than a year," he said in a most dejected manner. "Why," said the colonel to whom he had applied, "I haven't seen my wife for nearly two years!" "Well," said the soldier, earnestly and respectfully, "that may be, sir, but me and my wife aren't that kind!" The furlough was immediately granted.

Another Prophet Discredited.

The abdication of King Constantine will disappoint those who believe in prophecies. Like Constantine the Great, he married a consort named Sophia, and there is a tradition centuries old and much quoted in Greece at the time of his marriage to the effect that "when a Constantine and a Sophia shall once more reign in Hellas Constantinople will belong to the Hellenes."

Use of Bacon Drippings.

Bacon drippings make splendid shortening for light, flaky pie crust. It takes just a little less of the drippings than of ordinary lard or vegetable shortening. Use it for shortening in spice cake, gingerbread or any dark cake and note the delicious flavor.

Spread rye bread with a thin layer of the pure drippings and sprinkle a little salt on it. Add to this a thin slice of any salt meat and you will have a delicious and highly nutritious sandwich. The European housewife has long made use of such sandwiches for the between meal snack for growing boys and girls.

The Pygmy Hippopotamus.

One of the animals least known to the outside world is the pygmy hippopotamus of West Africa.

This animal is just what its name implies, a pygmy hippopotamus. It is much smaller than the common hippopotamus, being no larger than an ordinary or fair sized hog. It differs somewhat from the common hippo in the character of its teeth, and instead of spending its time in the rivers and lakes in large herds it wanders about through the jungles singly or in pairs, much after the manner of swine in search of mast.—London Spectator.

Just the Time.

"No, I have never played bridge before."

"So I should surmise," said the disgusted partner. "But how came you to enter an important tournament like this?"

"Oh, I thought it would be a good time to learn."

All Wrong.

"Now, look here, Alice, I know everything. You're been carrying on with another man. I even know that his name is Rupert."

"How ridiculous you are! First of all, I haven't flirted with any one, and, secondly, his name isn't Rupert."

Profitable Writing.

"My writings bring in a lot of money every month."

"That so? I didn't know you were an author."

"I'm not. I'm the man that makes out the bills for our firm."

Trials of Authors.

"You do not know," Saint-Beuve wrote to George Sand, "what it is to remain a whole day with your head in your hands, squeezing your unfortunate brain to find a word."

Silent Heroes.

"Father," asked Tommy, "what are 'silent heroes?'"

"Married men, my boy," replied the father.—London Telegraph.

Great Expectations.

True Courage.

True courage has so little to do with anger that there lies always the strongest suspicion against it wherever this passion is highest. True courage is cool and calm.

Nothing more completely baffles one who is full of trick and duplicity than straightforward and simple integrity in another.

A propensity to hope and joy is real riches; one to fear and sorrow real poverty.

Love and Marriage.

"First love is very apt not to be the lasting love," said Dr. Antolnette Konikow, speaking at the Boston School of Social Science.

"Young lovers try to excuse all the faults of the loved one because they are not in love with the individual, but with love. Hence they may not choose the partner with whom they will find their happiness in later years. Many a man and woman is glad by middle age that the first love was frustrated.

"Marriage should be based on love alone or it is immoral, and some change is necessary if marriage is to be saved from degradation. Real love always makes people better. Romantic love is the source of all the best things in life—the foundation of all the arts. And individual happiness makes up the happiness of the race."—Boston Post.

Cocoanut Oil Makes A Splendid Shampoo

If you want to keep your hair in good condition, be careful what you wash it with.

Don't use prepared shampoos or anything else, that contains too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and is very harmful. Just plain mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and entirely greaseless), is much better than anything else you can use for shampooing, as this can't possibly injure the hair.

Simply moisten your hair with water and rub it in. One or two teaspoonfuls will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather, and cleanses the hair and scalp thoroughly. The lather rinses out easily and removes every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves it fine and silky, bright, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at most any drug store. It is very cheap, and a few ounces is enough to last everyone in the family for months.

Necessities of War.

When Lloyd George in England undertook to organize the ministry of munitions a glazier began to stamp out cartridge clips; a manufacturer of music rolls used his equipment to make gauges; a concern engaged before the war in preparing infants' food began delivering plugs for shells; an advertising agency manufactured shell adapters; watchmakers began adjusting fuses; a manufacturer of bedding machinery became a contractor for six inch high explosive shells; a jewelry house devoted itself exclusively to periscopes; a phonograph concern sent millions of delicate shell parts to the assembling stations; a firm which made nothing but sheep shearing machinery started turning out shell cases; a cream separator factory manufactured shell primers. Among other producers of finished shells were candle makers, flour mills, tobacco manufacturers, syphonmakers and the manufacturers of sporting goods.—World's Work.

Stocking the National Parks.

The United States is carrying on a very interesting work in exchanging the wild animals of one region for those of others—transplanting elk and deer and Rocky mountain bighorns from regions in the United States where they are plentiful to others where, so far as known, they have not lived. Some of the animals are being shipped long distances, says the Popular Science Monthly.

Wyoming is full of elk. The herds in the Jackson Hole country are the largest of any of North American wild animals since the days of the countless buffaloes. But the big Yosemite National park of California, with its three-quarters of a million acres, until recently had no elk, or at least only a very few scattered specimens. But the elk shipped in from Wyoming have become very much at home and are breeding and multiplying rapidly, adding to the charm and picturesqueness of this popular national playground.

SAND INSTEAD OF SOCIALISM.

Returning Russians Say Our Police Substituted it for "Literature."

YOKOHAMA, Aug. 17.— Nineteen boxes brought here by Russians from the United States which were destined for Russia were found when opened to be filled with sand instead of Socialistic literature, as the immigrants had supposed. The Russians said that they had intended to take the literature home for the enlightenment of the Bolshevik citizens, and they alleged that the American police had substituted sand for the pamphlets in the course of the journey across the American continent.

There is a steady stream through Japan of Russian workers returning to their fatherland from the United States. They are forwarded in batches of fifty to Harbin, where they are turned over to the Russian authorities. About 1,500 have passed through Yokohama since the Russian revolution began.

The British And French Troops Penetrate Deeper Into The German Lines

British Are Pressing On Half a Mile Beyond the Captured Town of Langemarck--St. Quentin Cathedral Has Been Destroyed By the Germans--Continued German Counter Attacks on the Lens Front---Enemy Aerdromes Successfully Bombarded.

FRENCH OFFICIAL STATEMENT

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, August 17.—Continued German counter attacks on the Lens front were reported by Field Marshal Haig to-day. "East of Loos in the direction of Cite Stauguste early last night the enemy twice counter attacked, Haig reported. "The second time pressing us back slightly from points we had established."

ENEMY AERODROMES BOMBARDED.

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, August 17.—Many tons of explosives were dropped on enemy aerodromes and railway stations by British planes, the Admiarlty announced to-day. Several fires were observed following raids on the Ostend railway station, Thouront railway station and the Chistelles aerodrome, the statement says, reporting attacks on this Belgium point. At Uytkerke aerodrome were borbarded and road transports were attacked by gun fire.

ALLIES' ANSWER TO PEACE PROPOSALS.

Special to The Examiner:

(By Ed. L. Keen United Press Staff Correspondent.)

LONDON August 17.—A violent and continued thrust that is carrying the British and French troops deep into the German lines in Flanders on a mile front, a statement of complete confidence from Premier Lloyd George, and the unanimous rejections by the press of peace proposals; these are the answers turned in by the Allies to-day to Pope Benedict. The St. Quentin Cathedral has been destroyed by the Germans. The heights about Lens are thick with German dead mown down in their attempt to retake the dominating positions firmly held by Canadians. Pressing on half a mile beyond the captured town of Langemarke, the British are blasting away at additional enemy defences. News of the burning of villages beyond St. Quentin led to the belief that the Germans might be preparing to evacuate some of this region. United Press despatches from the French front, however, stated that there were no indications that the Germans were actually preparing for such a step. Lloyd George, contrary to early expectations, made no direct reference to the Pope's appeal in his speech in the Commons yesterday. His address was one of "carrying on," however, not of stopping for negotiations. It was taken as a forerunner of the rejection of the Vatican's suggestions. The French to-day were firmly holding the important bridgehead of Dreigrachten despite counter attacks launched over a strip of land between the Yser Canal and Martjevaart.

Special to The Examiner:

PARIS, August 17.—French official statement to-day puts the blame for the destruction of the famous St. Quentin Cathedral on German shells. Noth-ng remains to-day but a heap of ruins.

The cathedral of Church of St. Quentin, reported burning by the Germans, is one of the finest Gothic buildings in that part of France, and was erected between the twelfth and fifteenh centuries. The building has double transepts and the nave is 370 feet long and 130 feet high. It is very finely decorated and contains some handsome bas-reliefs. In the crypt of the church are buried St. Quentin and his fellow martyrs, St. Victoricus and St. Gentianus.

DESPERATE FIGHTING CONTINUES

Hill 70 Ran Red To-day With the Blood of the Enemy—Divisions Sacrificed in Repeated Efforts to Recapture Lost Ground

CANADIANS ADVANCE

Special to The Examiner:

With the British Armies in the Field, Aug. 17.—(By William Phillips Simms, United Press Staff Correspondent.).— Hill 70 ran red to-day with the blood of Bavarian and German divisions, sacrificed in repeated efforts to recapture this important deminating height from the sturdy Canadians. Along the entire new Lens battle front the most desperate fighting has been in progress for the past twelve hours. The Canadians have repulsed all attacks at the time this despatch was filed and they have taken positions west of Cite St. Auguste from which they were forced by sheer weight of numbers during the night. Prisoners continue to arrive behind the British lines. The total will probably prove to be greater than at first believed. In addition the Germans left a considerable number of guns in the mud. It is an impossibility to believe the number thus captured. Over a flaming, bloody field aeroplanes have been accomplishing miracles. They are acting as despatch riders between the advancing infantry and headquarters. Battle planes guard them as they fly through the shell filled sky carrying orders and reports from the front lines to commanding officers in the rear.

THICK WAVES.

Last night was one of death. The Canadians fought valiantly, hanging on to every position with builder tenacity. The Bavarians opened the counter attacks on the outskirts of Lens. They charged and counter-charged headlong against the Cana-

DISTILLING MUST STOP ON SEPT. 8

Important Announcement Made By the United States Food Controller

A FINAL WARNING

WASHINGTON, Aug. 17.—The Food Administration made the important ruling that all processes in the production of distilled spirits for beverage purposes must stop at 11 o'clock on the night of Saturday, September 8. Any effort to construe the law to permit the use of wheat, corn, rye, and other materials, which had been hoarded, after that time, it was made plain, would be met with firm action.

It has been reported that some distillers have bought up tremendous supplies, especially in the corn market, in the hope that they would be permitted to make it into distilled spirits after the date set. The Food Administration has received a large number of inquiries along that line, and as a result Mr. Hoover decided to put an end to any doubt that may have existed.

The drastic ruling has nothing to do with spirits in bond, which will be considered later by the White House and the Food Administration. As a result of the stand taken, it is understood that a very great supply of corn and other foods which might have been turned into spirits, will be diverted to other purposes, because it will be physically impossible for the distillers to use all of the stocks in hand in the manufacture of spirits by Sept. 8th.

PTE. R. H. SANDYS KILLED IN ACTION ON JULY 20TH

Deceased Who Was a Member of the 93rd Battalion Came From the United States to Enlist

SISTER RESIDES HERE

The following letter has been received by Mrs. James Head, 282 Aylmer street, concerning the death of her brother, Pte. Robert Sandys, a member of the 93rd Battalion, who was killed in action on the morning of July 20th. Pte. Sandys, whose home is in the United States, came to Peterborough to enlist. The letter reads as follows:

Dear Mrs. Head,—I take the liberty of writing to you upon a very sad subject. Your brother, Robert Henry Sandys, who was with me in the, 93rd Divisional Wirers, as you will have been informed, officially, was killed in action on the morning of July 20th. He had often spoken of you to me, and showed me his treasured pictures, which I enclose herewith. His death was practically instantaneous and he sufferffed absolutely no pain.

Bob is deeply mourned by his companions, among whom he had enjoyed great popularity, not only as a good companion, but as a good soldier who walked into danger with his eyes open, yet feared nothing. He met his death while proving an example to his comrades.

Let me, as his Sergeant in charge, offer you his comrades sincere condolence, and trustful hope that his sacrifice shall not have been in vain.

My address is Sergeant James H. Turney, 5th C.M.R., 3rd Divisional Wirers. My wife would be pleased to hear from you and also myself out here in France.

MANY WOMEN FOR ARSENAL

Major Campbell Says 260 Are Already Employed and He is Arranging to Send More to Lindsay —Recent Recruiting Figures

MILITARY SERVICE BILL NEEDED

Major G. I. Campbell, who, as Chief Recruiting Officer of this district, was actively interested in Peterborough's battalions, was in the city last night, returning to Kingston from Lindsay, where he investigated the conditions regarding board and accommodation for women who are being engaged for the new Dominion arsenal.

"We expect to send twenty-five women from Kingston and Ottawa within the next week or ten days, and, if satisfactory arrangements can be made for their housing, we will continue to forward them until the need is supplied. Lindsay and the district around it have provided 260 women for the arsenal, and, at least, 100 more can be used. They are doing good work in the manufacture of small arms ammunition. Some idea of their duties may be obtained from the fact that the rifle shell passes through more than fifty-two operations before it is finally completed."

Cleaning Up for Conscription.

Major Campbell stated in this military district, the recruiting from September 1st, 1916, to July 1st, 1917, had averaged 1,107 men a month. During the past six weeks enlistments had materially declined, due to the fact that the organization for recruiting in this district had been withdrawn. Only two offices remained open, the Sparks Street depot in Ottawa and the British-American block in Kingston. The other recruiting depots in the district have been closed. Volunteers are being accepted for the infantry, forestry and mechanical transport branches. Major Campbell confirmed the reports that the artillery units authorized are practically at full strength. In the 72nd Battery there might be places for five or six men, but the artillery option, generally speaking, is withdrawn indefinitely.

In Military District No. 3, the present work is of a house-cleaning nature, gathering up the remnants of the voluntary system in preparation for the enforcements of the Military Service Bill. His recruiting experience has evidently convinced Major Campbell that the voluntary system has spent its force, and, apart from the factor of the fair distribution of the military burden, the new Service Bill offers the only method of maintaining the supply of Canadian reinforcements. A depot battalion has been authorized for Eastern Ontario, including District No. 3, and when its organization has been completed it is expected to stimulate recruiting to some extent; but Major Campbell is strongly in favour of the immediate enforcement of the Military Bill as the only effectual means of providing a sufficient supply of men.

TWO AVIATORS KILLED AT THE TRAINING CAMPS

Both Men Met Terrible Deaths as a Result of a Collision—One Machine Burst Into Flames

CAME FROM STATES

TORONTO, Aug. 17.—Two aviation cadets, S. P. J. Dorr of New York city, and Wm. S. Gallie of Winnipeg, have met terrible deaths at the Ontario Camps of the Royal Flying Corps, within the last two days. Dorr was fatally hurt at Armour Heights, close to Toronto. At an altitude of eight hundred feet Cadet Dorr's machine collided with another driven by Cadet George Squires, also of the United States. Both were flying at a good rate of speed, and that of Cadet Dorr burst into flames and plunged headlong to earth. When Red Cross men reached him the unfortunate young man was dead. Both Dorr and Squires recently came from the training camp at Fort Meyer, Virginia. Cadet Gallie was killed at Deseronto Camp yesterday morning. He was making a good landing at about one hundred feet from the ground when an aeroplane driven by another Cadet crashed into him, sending his machine to the ground, killing Galile instantly.

WAS THE DETROIT MURDERER IN LINDSAY?

LINDSAY, Aug. 17.—Richard Caparotta, who is wanted by the Detroit police for murder, and for which a reward of $1,000 is offered, according to reports in around Lindsay at the present time. From information received the man accused of the crime went to work in the Dominion Arsenal on Wednesday, and had not been engaged there long when a fellow workman noticed that he bore similar marks to the party wanted in Detroit.

Caparotta could not withstand the scrutinizing gaze of the workman and immediately dropped his tools, making for the door and escaped. He was followed, but disappeared in a few minutes and has not been seen since.

The latter are busy on the case, and a diligent search will be made to secure his capture.

SOCIALISM MEETS WITH FAILURE IN RUSSIA

Great Conference to Be Held in Moscow on Thursday Next Will Mark the Entrance of New Elements of Conservation in Commerce and Finance---Governing Behind the Scenes.

MUST BE MADE MORE PRACTICAL

(By William G. Shepherd, United Press Staff Correspondent.)

Special to The Examiner:

MOSCOW, August 17.—Socialism has utterly failed in Russia. Premier Kerensky has recognized that fact and the great conferencge here on August 23rd will mark the end of the pandy socialist rule of Russia and the entrance of new elements of conservatism in commerce and finance. Socialists themselves and Kerensky in one, realize that they were unsuccessful in their attempt to govern single-handed. In addition the Socialists in the cities were involved in continual quarrels among themselves. This resulted in the July troubles and killings in Petrograd.

In addition there was too much of an attempt to govern behind the scenes without assuming responsibility by having a majority of Socialists in the government. Fears of a return to monarchy in Russia are nonsense all agree here to-day. A republic is inevitable, although rumours of monarchial plot persist and resulted in the removal of the Romanoffs to Siberia. With this state of affairs Kerensky's recognition of the failure of Russian Socialism is regarded as having firmly established his greatness. Socialists themselves are dissillusioned. I have heard a score of American Socialists say that to meet with success Socialism must be brought up to date and made more practical.

MONAGHAN COUNCIL DEMANDS BOUNDARY REPAIRS PROCEED

States That City Agreed to Rebuild the Monaghan Road—Township Will Hold Peterboro' Responsible For Any Damages That May Result From Present Conditions

The North Monaghan Council met in the Court House on Monday, August 13. Reeve Rye, Deputy-Reeve Bell and Councillors Henry and Williams were present.

The following communications were then read: O'Connell and Corkery, re Elias Arthur Stinson, with a claim for damages to a mare breaking through a culvert on the Monaghan road at the end of McDonnel street.

Referred to the township's solicitor.

Want City to Get Busy.

Moved by Mr. Bell, seconded by Mr. Williams, that the township of North Monaghan hereby notify the city of Peterborough to proceed with the work on Monaghan road as per agreement June 11th; that whereas some levelling has been done on this road by the city and the road is now in a very dangerous condition on this portion and also at Browntown, where it is full of holes, the township now holds the city liable for any damages which may occur to any person or vehicle on the same road, as per agreement made on June 11th from the south side of Charlotte street to the C.P.R. on the said road.

Moved by Mr. Williams, seconded by Mr. Bell, that as per township solicitor's advice that the clerk reply to Gordon and Widdifield re John Armstrong's claim for drainage on the road and state that it is not up to the township to drain Mr. Armstrong's land.

Moved by Mr. Bell, seconded by Mr. Henry that the clerk notify the Leonard Construction Company to properly repair Monaghan road from the C.P.R. to Lansdowne street.

Desire Crossing Raised.

Moved by Mr. Henry, seconded by Mr. Williams, that the Clerk notify the Henry Hope Company to remove steel cuttings from the railway crossing on the siding into their factory; also that the railway crossing on the said siding be raised to a proper grade with the road. This crossing is too low, the Council said, and is dangerous, especially in winter.

Bills Presented.

The following bills were presented for payment

H. B. Rye per the Bell Telephone Co.—$1.60.

A. Comstock re W. Johnston, indigent—$29.

A. McDonald Estate lumber—$8.01.

A. McDonald Estate—$25.92.

H. B. Taylor and Sons, coal—$46.06.

Harry Fowler, 28 yds. gravel on Smith boundary—$4.20.

Henry Fowler, 32 yds. gravel Cavan boundary—$4.80.

Total of all bills—$131.43.

Moved by Mr. Henry, seconded by Mr. Williams, that the meeting adjourn, and that the next meeting be held on the second Monday in September in Mr. Bradburn's office.

BURNING THE CANDLE AT THE EMPIRE

With Henry B. Walthall Who Took Leading Part in Birth of a Nation

Beneath the balmy moonlight of the Southern skies, Molly Carrington, a daughter of the South, pledges her heart and hand to "Jimmie" Maxwell. It is on the eve of the young man's departure to New York, where his exhaustive knowledge of cotton has won him a good position in a cotton broker's office.

They are married and amid the good-byes of their friends and relatives, depart for the northern metropolis. It is Maxwell's transition from calm and uneventful home-life to the maelstrom of worldly battle; it is more—it takes him from the prohibition South to confront the disaster-dealing temptations of the "wet" North.

Jimmie succumbs to liquor's lure, and from a stalwart husband is dragged to the depths of Demon Rum's depravity. He loses his position, and Molly leaves him, returning to her Southern home.

As a "down-and-outer," Maxwell sees in a Mobile paper a rumour that his wife plans to divorce him and marry his former rival for her hand, Alfred Lewis. His smoldering love for Molly flares up to expose vividly the curse which drink has placed upon him. Maxwell now throws off his alcoholic yoke, becomes a man again and wins back his position. He finds Molly waiting for him, the first day he enters the office.

CRYING PEACE WHEN THERE CAN BE NO PEACE.

The peace proposals of His Holiness the Pope, are evidences of the sincerity of his desire for peace—a desire ardently shared by the whole world—but by one party of the belligerents only on terms that mean a permanent peace for humanity. What at the beginning repels respect for these proposals is the evident fact that the sole initiative and responsibility for these proposals does not rest with his Holiness, but have a Teuton taste—"the voice is Jacob's voice, but the hands are the hands of Esau." The Pope in his simplicity, has innocently been made a mouthpiece of Teuton desires and duplicity. In his official capacity he has chiefly to do with celestial matters, and has no acquaintance with the under-world—the infernal world—in which German intrigue, duplicity and plotting have their inspiration.

The only possible comment the proposals, well-intentioned as they may be, on the part of the Pope, is that they are out of range of discussion at the present time; the only consideration they may have is to reject them. At this stage of the game of war, when the exhaustion of the Central Powers, calls for the breathing spell of an armistice, to strengthen resistance and power, means for continued intrigue; when the allies see near at hand, or nearer at hand, the breaking point of the infernal machine; when reward for all the sacrifice they have made, and the outraged areas, redress for all the martyrdom they have suffered, is in sight; while Germany's power to work unspeakable evil remains, there is no sheath for the sword of justice. There can be no peace while militarism is uncrushed; no breathing place for freemen anywhere in the world, while the mightily organized enginery of despotism remains unsmashed.

There can be no talk of peace while Germany is still defiant of human rights; while she still ravages invaded territory and outrages human rights beyond the wickedest imagination of barbarism. When Germany is forced to "throw up the sponge" only then can there be talk of the disposal of the remains.

See II. Kings IX, v. 22.

THE HORSE HOLDS HIS OWN.

The horse holds his own black head

We are accustomed to hear the statement made that the auto is ousting the horse to extinction. But statistics do not bear out this assertion. If the auto were superseding the horse as completely as is thought, the Dominion bulletin of agricultural statistics would not show an actual increase in the number of horses in the country. According to the monthly bulletin of statistics for July, there has been a steady increase in the number of horses in the country from 1912, when the total was 2,602,357, to 1917, when the number reported had risen to 3,035,254. Taken by provinces, Ontario is the only province where the number of horses shows a decrease compared with the previous four years. It seems, therefore, that the horse in Canada is not doomed to speedy extinction; and is not being "turned out to grass." A government ban may be declared upon gasoline for use in autos for pleasure purposes. In that event the horse may com to his own again. The live stock of Canada is generally increasing. According to official figures, the numbers of live stock in Canada on June 30 were as follows: Horses, 3,035,254; milch cows, 2,612,709; other cattle, 3,335,013; sheep, 2,009,717; and swine, 2,513,526. This is an increase over last year for all descriptions, excepting swine, which are less by over 300,000, the fancy prices for bacon and the immense profits achieved by some packing operations, no doubt accounting for the decline of the four-footed hog. The decline in number of sheep, which has been annually continuous since 1913, appears to be arrested, the increase shown this year being over 44,600.

FEEDING THE FINANCIERS.

Has the present Dominion government become utterly conscienceless; completely indifferent to the interests of the country they misgovern; utterly indifferent to the welfare, present and future, of Canada, in their complete, unreserved and wholesale surrender to the pap-fattened "big interests" of the country? The government cult of the golden calf seems to influence all the general policy of the government. Wealth is let off with light taxation, profiteers are not rebuked but pampered and protected, raised to high office, and generally singled out for government favour, at the expense of the country.

Now the government is conspiring to put millions into the pockets of big financiers by a Canadian Northern Railway deal, that, if carried through, adds, at least, thirty million dollars of the people's money to the hundreds of millions the people have contributed to keep the tame duck "in the swim."

In 1914 the Parliament of Canada "bought off" Mackenzie and Mann by granting 45 million dollars to the Canadian Northern Railway, taking a mortgage on the road, and the statute expressly provided that, in the event of the railway defaulting in payment of interest on the the bonds, the mortgage should be foreclosed, and the Canadian Northern become the property of the people of Canada, as would be only just, considering the hundreds of millions of public money the railway had received.

The company did default in payment, but instead of foreclosing the government proposes to give the railway another dip into the public treasury to the probable amount of thirty million dollars.

The explanation of the government's action consists in the fact that a "bunch" of Toronto big financiers, and a few others, own some ten millions of the common stock of the Canadian Northern Railway, secured "for a song,"—at a few cents on the dollar. The Drayton-Ackworth Commission, appointed by the government, reported that this "common stock was worthless." To help out the financiers, who are said to be behind the government action—for Mackensie and Mann, who still want to hang on to their railway—to acquire ownership of the railway, and by their scheme, enrich those who hold big blocks of presently "worthless stock," which will jump to par the moment the government takes over the sixty millions of common stock still outstanding; at an arbitrated value, which will doubtless reach thirty millions dollars. If the government acquires these "worthless" bonds, at the cost of thirty millions of the people's money, the big interests, who hold a big block of them, the high financiers will not only be recouped the trifling amount paid for them, but make a big coup into the bargain. Government guarantee will bring the bond to par, and the moneyed men's profits from the government's juggle with the public money, will, it is declared, reach into the tens of millions. This should please the moneyed men and if Mackenzie and Mann get thirty millions for their "worthless" stock, they should be well satisfied too and there need be felt no anxiety on the part of the governent as to campaign funds for the next election. The next election no doubt justifies the government in itself in making ducks and drakes of the money of the people, if it holds to the easy political morals of the member for West Peterborough, who declared he would vote for an expenditure his conscience and judgment condemned, because "there was to be an election."

Centre Winnipeg riding goes to extremes. It has nominated a reverend gentlean—Rev. Dr. Bland. It has been represented, so to speak, by one who is not at all reverend or revered—Hon. Robert Rogers.

The Drayton-Ackworth Commission, costing thousands of dollars, declared Canadian Northern common stock worthless. Now for the benefit of a band of "big interests" Sir Thomas White proposes by act of Parliament to bring it to par by paying thirty million dollars of public money for it.

16-Year Convict Fails Again Despite His Welfare Bride

YONKERS, N.Y., Aug. 17.—Leonard Solomon, thirty-six years old, has passed sixteen years of his life in prison, and probably will spend more thre. Last summer he was serving a two-year term in Sing-Sing for burglary when Miss Anna Gordon, of a respectable Ossinging family, called at the prison to see what welfare work she could do for the prisoners.

Solomon was a member of the Mutual Welfare League. She met him and he told her his story. He was one of those fellows who never had a chance. The police were always hounding him and driving him into crime.

Anna, an unsophisicated country girl, with the milk of human kindness unsoured, was touched by the story. She called on Solomon frequently and before he had finished his term, they were engaged to be married, the promise being that Solomon was to "live straight" for a year and then she would become his bride.

Part of the year of probation and "living straight" Solomon spent in Sing Sing. He was released in October and made several trips to Ossining always telling Anna he was "straight." They were married six weeks ago when the year of probation had expired, and he installed his bride in a flat at No. 501 West Forty-sevnth street, Manhattan.

Solomon and Nathan Harris, who had been released from prison with him, were arrested here as they were leaving the home of John Griffith, at No. 11 Delavan terrace, with about $200 worth of jewelery. Solomon gave the police his address in New York city and said he guessed they would find a girl there who would take his arrest pretty hard.

They found the girl. She became hysterical and fainted several times. Still having faith she called on Solomon to-night, but she was downcast and broken hearted as she later left for her old home in Ossinging.

Campaign In Roumania Is A Fight For The Harvest

ODESSA, Aug. 17.—A special train has been despatched to Kieff from Jassy for the purpose of conveying the Roumanian Royal family to Russia. The train will remain at Jassy, but no decision has yet been taken as to departure. I understand the King and Queen will not withdraw from Roumanian territory except in case of extreme urgency. The departure of the diplomatic corps for Odessa, originally fixed for last Wednesday, was postponed two days, and subsequently adjourned sine die.

The campaign seems likely to develop into an intense fight for the harvest.
